SENATE ASKS ALL THE FACTS ON RUM SURVEY

Wickersham Holds Up 16 States.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special]—The senate voted today to find out why surveys of Illinois, New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Maryland, and eleven other states—many of them populous, industrial, and anti-prohibition—are missing in the bicolored map of wet, moist, and dry America which the Wickersham commission sent to the senate yesterday in response to the senate's request for the evidence on which the commission based its recent report.

M. E. TYDINGS. [Fotograms Photo.]

Want Facts or Reason Why.

The senate unanimously adopted the resolution offered by Senator Millard E. Tydings [Dem., Md.], a wet of the Gov. Ritchie school, asking the commission to send the senate either the missing surveys or their reasons for keeping the surveys under cover.

Senator Tydings' action was taken in the face of a report that the six missing states had been surveyed, as had the other thirty-two states, and had been found the wettest of the forty-eight. At the commission offices it was said today that about one-half the testimony received by the commission had been withheld under the proviso in the original resolution of request, also introduced by Senator Tydings, which excluded testimony taken under pledge of secrecy.

"It seems to me," said Senator Tydings in introducing the resolution, "that the commission ought either to give us the surveys or its reasons for not submitting them. Obviously there must be some reason. We have handed half a million dollars in getting this information and it is not my understanding that it should be merely for the education of the eleven commissioners, but should be extended to us, for whom the commission acted, so that congress can pass suitable legislation."

Needs of Dry Law Conditions.

Out of the bewildering mass of testimony, surveys, statistics, and opinion which the commission did submit, it was possible today to piece together at least a partially complete picture of prohibition conditions in the United States.

The thirty-two state surveys on hand were nearly all made under the direction of James M. Doran, former commissioner of prohibition, by prohibition bureau attorneys. The stories they contain portray a wide range of conditions from localities virtually dry with a sympathetic citizenship and zealous officials, to localities openly wet, their citizens frankly resentful and their enforcement officers disinterested or corrupt.

The surveys of some of the states surrounding Illinois give a picture of prohibition in the middle west.

The Indiana survey by Philip N. Jervis of the law division of the prohibition bureau found that state-wide prohibition conditions were improving. "However," the report stated, "it remains to be seen how long a time must elapse before this improvement will show, as the conditions in most of the important cities are very bad to start with. In many counties and cities," the report went on, "the enforcement of local officials is very poor."

Younger People Drinking.

Under the heading, "Prevalence of Drinking," the report says:

"Public drinking is, for the most part, lessened, but the using of liquor by what might be termed the so called better class, clandestinely, exists to a considerable extent. Among the younger class, boys 15 to 21 years, there is considerable drinking. Local constabulary are loath to prosecute general liquor law violators and particularly so in the situations involving the better class families."

Judge Wood of Fort Wayne is quoted in the report as saying:

"It is my observation that there is a great prevalence of the use of liquor among the boys and girls under 21 years of age. More so than before prohibition."

Workers Not Bettered.

James J. Forrester, who investigated conditions among workers in Indianapolis, Lafayette, and vicinity, was quoted, "much against his will," to believe workers have turned to hard liq-

GRANTS HEIRESS DIVORCE FROM DR. J. S. SIDLEY

Report Perkins Bull May Pay $500,000.

Two new episodes were added yesterday to the mysterious Bull-Horlick-Sidley case, and the coincidence of these two developments led to the belief that the flight into Canada of W. Perkins Bull, K. C., international man of mystery and confidant of the wealthy Horlick malted milk family, had brought a quick conclusion of negotiations already started to quiet the whole affair.

The first development was the granting of a divorce to Mrs. Mabelle Horlick Sidley, wife of Dr. John Streeter Sidley, by Judge E. B. Belden in the Circuit court at Kenosha yesterday.

The second came last night when substantiation was obtained of reports that the $250,000 damage suit brought by Dr. Sidley against Bull had been settled out of court and that the case would be dismissed next week. A well substantiated report yesterday said that Dr. Sidley had been offered more than $500,000. The unexpected appearance of Mrs. Sidley, who is the daughter of Col. William Horlick Sr., the malted milk magnate, in the Kenosha court yesterday was found to be related to the settlement.

Deputies Lie in Wait.

Deputy sheriffs were hiding in the bushes around the Horlick estate in Racine two weeks ago waiting to detain Mrs. Sidley and take her into court to testify in the counter action started by Dr. Sidley after his wife had filed her bill for divorce. She previously had appeared at the hearings, but became ill and disappeared.

When the mysterious activities of Bull came into the spotlight the deputies were suddenly withdrawn from the Horlick estate, and rumors persisted that the sensational suit was to be settled out of court so that the operations of Barrister Bull and his sleuths in maintaining a constant surveillance of Dr. Sidley would not be told in court.

With yesterday's divorce decree and the information that the suit was to be dismissed it was believed that the raid on Bull's Drake hotel suite, his sudden flight to Canada, his automobile crash, and the consequent publicity concerning these activities had brought about efforts to hush the affair in so far as it involves the Horlicks and the Sidleys.

British Horlick to Wed.

To these developments was added an announcement from London yesterday that Sir Ernest Horlick, wealthy head of the Horlick interests in England and cousin of Mrs. Sidley, was to be married shortly to Mlle. Sophie Sonia Theolesco, a Rumanian. Sir Ernest's age was given as 50 and that of his fiancée as 28. London papers said that Sir Ernest is the second baronet and that he was first married in 1902. He is the lord of Cowley manor at Gloucestershire.

Mrs. Sidley's divorce has been pending for two years and it was during that time, Dr. Sidley charged in his suit, that Bull hired detectives to harass him by shadowing his movements day and night. Dr. Sidley asked for damages and an injunction to restrain Bull's sleuths from following him.

The divorce was uncontested and efforts were made to hold the court session without attracting notice. The findings in the case were already prepared for the judge's signature when Mrs. Sidley, her attorney, Frank L. McNamara; her father, Col. Horlick, and William Horlick Jr., her brother, appeared yesterday at the courthouse at Kenosha for a brief hearing.

Charges Husband with Desertion.

Mrs. Sidley asked for divorce on the grounds of desertion. She said her husband left their Racine home early in April, 1928, taking his personal possessions and leaving a farewell note with the maid. He later informed her that he would never return, she said.

When Attorney McNamara asked Mrs. Sidley if a reconciliation had been attempted she said a reconciliation would be impossible. Attorney Thomas H. Spence of Milwaukee, representing Dr. Sidley, did not object to the granting of the decree.

No alimony was asked. A court order was issued requiring the defendant to pay to the clerk of the Circuit court $1 a month for the support of the son. This order was issued in order that the court may maintain jurisdiction over the custody of the son, William Sidley, 13 years old, who is in the custody of his father at Racine. Mrs. Sidley was advised by

NOTE TELLS LOSS OF $40,000; AGED VET HANGS SELF

Despondent over a purported loss of $40,000, Claus Dressen, 85 years old, veteran of the Franco-Prussian war, hanged himself yesterday in the basement of the village hall in Libertyville. His body, suspended to a pipe by his belt, was found by Policeman Joseph Saam.

Dressen left several letters explaining his act. In one he wrote he was worried over financial troubles. In another he accused Mrs. Etta Dressen of Waupaca, widow of his son, William, of "holding all his money." According to police, Dressen complained that he had loaned $40,000 to his son, that the son died soon afterward of injuries suffered in a motor accident, and he had no notes to prove the loan.

Dressen served in a Prussian regiment in the siege of Paris. His fondest memory was of sitting in a chair used by Napoleon. Dressen came to America in 1873, and lived in Libertyville 40 years.

CASHES FATHER'S FIRST PAY CHECK IN YEAR; ROBBED

Charles Beedie Jr., 14 years old, 6327 South Marshfield avenue, had just cashed his father's pay check for $27 at the Englewood Trust and Savings bank near his home when he was accosted by a stranger wearing smoked glasses.

"I'm a member of the secret service," whispered the man, seizing the boy by the arm. "I saw you robbing a mail box. Come along with me or I'll make a scene."

Bewildered, Charles accompanied the man into a nearby alley. A moment later the bogus secret service agent fled with the $27. The money represented the first week's earnings of the boy's father in a year. There are five children besides Charles.

NEW RESPIRATOR SAVES LIFE OF EVANSTON BABY

An artificial respirator, recently presented by Britton I. Budd to the St. Francis hospital in Evanston, was the means of saving an infant boy's life last evening.

The baby was born about 5:15 p. m. to Mrs. Clarence Miller, 23 years old, 6541 North Francisco avenue, wife of a department store official. The heart was beating normally but the infant was not breathing.

A nurse spanked the baby but without avail. Ten minutes elapsed and its body was turning blue when the attending physician, Dr. Hugh Duffy, placed the boy in the "steel lungs," which induces automatic respiration. A half hour later the infant was taken out wailing lustily.

South Peru in Revolt; City of Arequipa Falls

BULLETIN.

LIMA, Feb. 21.—(U.P.)—The government tonight decreed the calling of an extraordinary recruiting period of two months' active service for former conscripts and volunteers between the ages of 21 and 30.

AREQUIPA, Peru, Feb. 21.—[U. P.]—A military revolutionary movement against the government headed by Lieut. Col. Luis M. Sanchez Cerro was under way in southern Peru tonight, with the full support of the Arequipa garrison.

All forces at the Arequipa garrison revolted at 8:30 p. m. Friday, a few hours after the Lima government had suppressed an uprising by followers of deposed and imprisoned President Augusto B. Leguia in a severe battle at Callao, port of Lima.

The government at Lima tonight announced that loyal troops from Tacna, Puno and Cuzco were marching on the Arequipa garrison. It added that traffic from the port of Mollendo to Arequipa had been closed.

Army Chief Slain.

The Arequipa revolutionaries captured the divisional army headquarters, killed the divisional army chief, who resisted, and then took control of the city.

The leader of the insurrection is Col. Aurelio Garcia Godos, who issued a manifesto saying the revolutionaries intended to constitute a new provisional government and immediately call elections.

Scene of August Revolt.

The Arequipa revolt—as distinct from the Callao uprising of Leguiastas—was described as intended "to fulfill the principles of the August revolution." The August revolution overthrew the régime of Leguia, who is now in prison at Lima, and put Cerro in power. The August movement originated at Arequipa, where Cerro was then stationed.

It was said the southern Peru military leaders were now dissatisfied with the actions of Cerro, who recently made known that he expected to be chosen constitutional president at elections scheduled for next June 28.

Meanwhile the Cerro government held extraordinary sessions at Lima today, presumably to consider the punishment of the leaders of the unsuccessful counter-revolutionary move crushed yesterday at Callao. Lima and Callao were still under martial law and troops were on duty at strategic points, but the capital was calm.

Report Navy in Revolt.

[Copyright, 1931, by the New York Times.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, Feb. 21.—Strictly censored and sketchy dispatches received here today indicate that yesterday's attempted revolt at Lima and Callao was a well planned uprising of the navy, supported by the Second artillery regiment, garrisoned at Magdalena, and by the marine corps. The cruiser Bolognesi, one of Peru's principal warships, is reported to have played an active rôle in the revolt, and the armored cruiser Grau was also on the side of the rebels.

BOMB WRECKS LINCOLN INN IN LAKE GENEVA

Lake Geneva, Wis., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—A terrific bomb explosion tonight wrecked the Lincoln Inn, damaged adjacent buildings on either side, shattered windows in the exclusive Lake Geneva hotel near by, and shook the entire town. Damage was estimated by police at $50,000, with the café the principal sufferer.

The explosion mystified Police Chief James Cronin and other investigators. Whether it was an attempt not only to destroy the inn but to kill Bill Long, the owner, was a matter of speculation. The bomb was planted directly beneath his bedroom, which crumbled under the blast. Long is out of town.

The bomb, supposedly made of dynamite, was planted in a cellar way in the back of the inn. Only four employés were in the place at the time. The blast jarred the entire two story structure, hurled the employés from their feet, and tore down the walls of the cellar way. The bedroom above, occupied ordinarily by Long, collapsed.

Gang Leader in Chicago for Primary

Al Capone, public enemy No. 1 and reputed contributor of $150,000 to the primary campaign fund of Mayor Thompson, was reported yesterday to have returned to Chicago from his winter estate at Miami. Dispatches from Miami said he had departed from there and last night he was believed to be in seclusion in one of his Chicago suburban headquarters.

Coincident with these reports Judge John H. Lyle, who is attacking the Capone influence in the city hall administration in his campaign for the Republican mayoralty nomination, was provided with a bodyguard of two motorcycle policemen who are to accompany him night and day. Judge Lyle did not ask for the bodyguard, but said he would accept it "in view of the interests which the gang chief has at stake in the primary."

Gang Patrol of 1927 Recalled.

It was recalled that Capone returned to the city for the primary election of 1927 and was seen in the loop accompanied by ten men on Monday, April 4, the day before the primary. For that primary Capone contributed $50,000 to the Thompson campaign chest, according to charges made by Judge Lyle. This year the gang chief's ante to the Thompson campaign was $150,000, the judge charges.

There were divergent reports of the method of Capone's departure from Miami, one that he had left by plane and the other that he had gone by train. The latter was considered the more likely since it had substantiation at Danville, Ill., though it was pointed out that the gang chief might have boarded a train after flying out of Miami.

Seen by Danville Policeman.

Traffic Policeman Wiley Watson of Danville said he recognized as Capone a man who left the Dixie Limited of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railway at Danville yesterday morning. The policeman identified the gang chief from his pictures and the scar on his face, he said, and called out, "Hello Al." The stranger stopped, admitted he was Capone, chatted for a moment and said he was flying to Chicago, according to Watson.

He was accompanied by two men, and a third man, described as resembling his brother, Ralph Capone, was waiting in a sedan which left immediately for the Danville airport, Watson said. At the airport, it was reported, that a cabin plane took off at 11:30 a. m.

Recognized by Passengers.

Policeman Watson said he talked with a woman passenger who also left the Florida train at Danville and asked her whether she recognized the man getting into the waiting sedan.

"Why, sure, that's Al Capone," she replied. "Everybody on the train has been talking about him."

Dispatches from Miami quoted Dr. George H. Day of the United States public health service as saying that Capone and a bodyguard of four men left by plane for Atlanta on Friday. Officials of the Eastern Air Transport at Miami said that five men purchased tickets for the flight but that Capone's name was not on the passenger list.

If Capone arrived in the Chicago area by plane, as the Danville report indicated, he apparently landed at some secluded spot to keep out of the way of the vagrancy warrant which was issued for him several months ago by Judge Lyle.

Loesch Backs Fund Charges.

Judge Lyle's charges of Capone contributions to the Thompson campaign fund have been supported by Frank J. Loesch, president of the Chicago Crime commission and formerly a special prosecutor of fraud and violence at the polls. Loesch declared that Capone had poured a total of $260,000 into the Thompson fund for the primary and election of 1927.

City Sealer Dan Serritella, Capone lieutenant and a member of the city hall cabinet, has been actively identified with the present Thompson campaign, appearing with Thompson at his loop theater meetings and sitting on the stage during his speeches.

Serritella's affiliation with the Capone gang has not been disputed. Mops Volpe, another Capone lieutenant, boasted at a hearing before immigration officials seeking his deportation that Serritella accompanied him on an airplane flight from Havana to Miami.

Faces Federal Hearing.

On Wednesday Capone is scheduled to appear before Federal Judge Wilkerson for trial for contempt of court. This charge grew out of his feigning illness in Florida two years ago to avoid appearing before a federal grand jury investigating booze conditions in Chicago Heights. The government contends that he was well enough to attend dog races and gambling houses.

Capone's attorneys, William F. Waugh and Benjamin P. Epstein, who have assured Judge Wilkerson that Capone would appear in court on Wednesday, said last night they had not heard whether he had arrived.

EYES OF NATION ON MAYORALTY VOTE TUESDAY

Crime and City Hall Are the Issues.

FOR MAYOR
☒ JOHN H. LYLE

BY PARKE BROWN.

With the Chicago municipal primary on Tuesday, the fight for the Republican mayoralty nomination has narrowed down to a hard contest between Mayor Thompson and Judge Lyle. No experienced observer concedes even an outside chance to any of the other entrants, Ald. Arthur F. Albert, George K. Schmidt, or Eugene McCaffrey.

The Democrats also will name their choice for mayor on Tuesday and both parties will nominate their candidates for city clerk and treasurer. Aldermanic candidates also go through their first test on that day, those winning clear majorities being elected. Indecisive results in the other wards will go to a run off in April.

All U. S. Watches Fight.

But public attention—not only in Chicago, but throughout the country and even across the seas—is concentrated on the battle of Judge Lyle against Thompson. That has attracted wide interest chiefly because of Lyle's war against gangster rule under the Thompson administration.

It is conceded everywhere that A. J. Cermak, president of the county board and chairman of the Democratic county committee, will walk away with his party's nomination. He has practically no opposition. In both parties the races for the nomination for city clerk and treasurer have been considered secondary. The aldermanic battles have aroused interest only within the wards where they occur.

Albert and Schmidt Trail.

The candidacies of Ald. Albert and of former Controller Schmidt have failed to gather any material strength since they were started on their way. Albert is supported by a much weakened Deneen organization that has failed to pick up any added momentum during the last month. Schmidt has not been given any organized support, so vital in a primary. McCaffrey has been indicted on a conspiracy charge since he announced his candidacy.

On the other hand, the candidacy of Judge Lyle has been gathering speed, organization, and sentiment ever since the day it was launched as his individual move, without any political forces behind it. He now is backed not only by the citizens' movement that put him into the fight, but by effective ward organizations throughout the city.

Pay Roll Army for Thompson.

Thompson's only advantage in this respect are that his pay roll army is more numerous than the almost entirely volunteer Lyle force, and the Thompson war chest is so stupendous that money has been distributed among all comers on a showing that they can control a handful of votes.

The Lyle leaders have not been discouraged or frightened by this specter of machine and money power. During the last two weeks they have trembled at times because of doubt whether they could muster even enough money to man the polls on even an average scale to protect the casting and the counting of the ballots against fraud.

Lyle Camp Guards Against Fraud.

That slight trepidation ended several days ago when, with every sign showing Lyle's increases in strength, possible contributors who had hesitated until toward the finish provided sufficient funds for watchers at all possible polling places. Attempts at fraud are expected in the "bad wards," for there the regular committeemen, nearly all of whom hold fat jobs in the city hall, are with Thompson and they selected the Republican judges and clerks.

With few exceptions the committeemen of the large residential wards, where the Republican vote is largest, are with Lyle. Many of them discarded or rejected city hall patronage to support him and are enthusiastic in their reports to headquarters that his vote in such sections will be larger than even the headquarters managers estimate.

Report Lyle Strength Growing.

These predictions and analyses, through precinct captains' house to house canvasses showing a growing sentiment for the judge have been borne out by straw votes taken secretly by representatives of the Lyle headquarters at loop corners during the last few days.

These votes, taken on unidentified ballots containing the names of all candidates, showed Lyle edging up every day this week until the final test, taken on Friday, showed him getting a full 60 per cent of all votes cast, including those for Democratic candidates.

At the Lyle headquarters there has been much laughter over claims put out by the Thompson managers. The latest official assertion from that source was a statement that the headquarters now has in its possession 650,000 pledge cards signed for Thompson.

Other Primaries Recalled.

The total Republican vote in the corresponding primary four years ago was 505,959, and Thompson received only 342,327 votes. At that time he was opposed by only the Deneen group supporting Edward R. Litsinger and he was aided by general resentment among politicians against the Dever law enforcement severity. The total Republican vote in the hotly contested state and county primary last year was only 565,000.

For years, politicians of all faiths have agreed that the Thompson pledge card system is worthless. Every precinct captain, every job holder receives orders to produce a definite quota of cards. And he always produces them far in excess of the vote the candidate receives in the signature collector's territory on primary or election day.

Predict Victory for Judge.

The forecasts of the Lyle leaders are not based on any such system. Where the Thompsonites said their candidate, on the strength shown by the pledge cards, would win by 150,000, a conference at the Hotel La Salle, in which confidential figures were received from one or more leaders in each of the fifty wards, produced a prediction that Lyle will win by 100,000.

John Leonard East, who, because he was the first ward committeeman to declare for Lyle, was placed in charge of headquarters temporarily six weeks ago and was kept in that post because of the quality of his work, was the spokesman who announced the result of the conference.

A Majority Is Forecast.

"Fifteen wards in Chicago," he said, "will give Judge Lyle enough votes to assure his nomination. In addition there are 25 other wards that will increase his majority. I say majority, for our reports, especially from the large residential wards, indicate he will have more votes than all the other candidates put together.

"The vote will certainly be heavy and the heavier it is the better it will be for Judge Lyle. My estimate of the total Republican vote is 625,000 of the 700,000 registered and eligible. Of the 625,000 votes cast there should be 575,000 divided between Lyle and Thompson. Considering that Lyle received 440,000 votes in last November's Democratic landslide, he should run more than 100,000 ahead of Thompson.

Residential Wards for Lyle.

"I regard this as conservative, for the crystallizing of sentiment that always marks the final days of a campaign is plainly marking a decided trend to the judge. From Morgan Park on the south to the northern boundary of the Forty-ninth ward, the residential wards all tell the same story."

The campaign is approaching its close with about the same tactics in use that were employed in its opening days. Lyle began his assault with an attack on Caponeism as the new name for Thompsonism. After driving this home he swung to a calmer presentation of his plans if the voters send him to the city hall.

Thompson's attacks upon Lyle began with whispering and innuendo concerning his opponent's private life. His advisers prevailed on him to drop these tactics for a time because they were injurious to himself, but during the last week he has resumed this sort of hinting and it is reported that at one meeting he was booed and hissed because of it.

Attacks Thompson Record.

Both Lyle and Albert has shown up some bad spots in Thompson's official record without reflecting on his private life. At one downtown meeting, enraged because the Thompson forces were whispering that he killed his wife, who died from an accidental fall, Judge Lyle tore loose and heaped opprobious terms on Thompson. He checked that immediately, however, and his following attacks on graft and inefficiency in the city hall were recitals of facts and figures.

In addition to these assaults from his opponents, Thompson also was called on to defend himself against a bill of complaint filed in the Superior court charging that although he collected $139,000 in donations for the Mississippi flood sufferers four years ago he sent them only $18,500 and retained possession of $103,000 which he diverted to other purposes last December and last January.

To this charge Thompson has made no reply except a hasty statement issued before the evidence incorporated in the bill of complaint had been disclosed to him. That response was immediately assailed as a series of "lies"; but Thompson issued no further statement.

A Denial Never Made.

He never has denied that he retained possession of $103,000 of the flood relief fund and turned it over to a recently incorporated waterway association. His legal representatives fought for time when the case came before Master in Chancery Harry Smitz and obtained from Judge Denis E. Sullivan a continuance until after the primary.

One of the two libel suits that have marked the campaign grew out of this case. Thompson sued Lyle for $100,000 because of a speech of Lyle's concerning the flood relief fund.

That action was matched yesterday when Judge Lyle, through William Tracy Alden, former president of the Chicago Bar association and a Democrat although a Lyle supporter, filed suit for $100,000 against George O. Fairweather of the University of Chicago for libel and slander. Fairweather made public a letter he had written attempting to connect Lyle with a State street burlesque house.

Thompson Brings Out Zoo.

Sideshows of the old Thompsonia type have marked the campaign for three weeks. Where once he used rats in a cage to symbolize some of his opponents, Thompson this year used a whole menagerie. It included a burro, a mule, a horse—later a number of cow ponies—an elephant and a camel.

He also started a continuous vaudeville show at the Cort theater that originally included his "jackass show," as he called it. He announced he would prove that the people were willing to pay 25 cents apiece to see his show. The house never was filled to capacity. In a short time the admission charge was taken off and the show was free to all comers. Still the house didn't fill up. The vaudeville acts were cut out, and having the theater under contract, Thompson kept it open with his own talkies and a cowboy act.

Lyle Shows Gang Weapons.

To serve to some extent as an offset to Thompson's showmanship, Judge Lyle began to show to his audience some of the "tools" of the public enemies he has been fighting—a sub-machine gun, sawed off shotguns, and automatic pistols.

This equipment disappeared from a Lyle reception at the Palmer house on Friday. Members of the judge's party who accompanied him to the reception were convinced that the weapons had been stolen by someone trying to interfere with the dramatic presentation of the candidate's anti-crime speeches, possibly by gangsters; but the judge refused to take the disappearance of the guns as a serious matter. He said he suspected a practical joke.

Lyle Charges Capone Fund.

In his speeches yesterday Judge Lyle repeated his charge, which Thompson never has denied, that Al Capone contributed $50,000 to the Thompson primary campaign of four years ago and a considerably larger sum to the election campaign that followed.

"Gang rule and racketeering," he said, "constitute an outstanding challenge to established law and order in this city today. They will become a menace of much greater proportions within the coming years unless the people of Chicago, through concerted action, unite for the purpose of destroying the invisible, baneful government excercised by the organized gangsters, their leaders and retainers."

Judge Lyle also advocated the consolidation of local governments in Chicago, a reorganization of the department of public welfare so that it will aid the jobless and the homeless, and the establishment of business house methods in all municipal departments.

Leading Lawyers Indorse Judge.

In reply to the city hall denonstration with its legal staff at the Cort theater last Wednesday, a Thompson attack, Judge Lyle yesterday was handed a resolution of indorsement signed by 350 lawyers, including some of the most prominent in the city. The signatures had been collected in two days by two lawyers who said they could have gathered several times as many if they had taken the time to do it. They said they were anxious to put on this counter-demonstration as soon as possible.

"This indorsement," said Judge Lyle, "is heartening because it shows beyond question that a substantial bar believes that our legal code should be used for something beside the protection of the criminal."

TARIFF FOE COMMENDED.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 21.—(AP)—A resolution commending Congressman Merlin Hull for voting against the Hawley tariff bill was adopted in the senate and concurred in by the assembly yesterday.

NOTES OF THE CAMPAIGN

Violating precedent as he did by opening his campaign with a night meeting in the loop, Judge Lyle arranged yesterday to hold his final massmeeting on "the Boul Mich" at the Studebaker tomorrow noon.

Another precedent smasher is County Chairman Snow of the Republican committee. He never has spoken on the radio before, but will go on WLS and WENR tomorrow night, on the former at 7:15 and on the latter at 10:15, with a "special message" for the voters.

Judge Lyle will speak on the radio three times today. At 5:30 he will deliver a George Washington address over WGN. At 7 p. m. he will talk over WIBO and at 8:15 over WBBM. At 7:15 Judson F. Going, former Municipal judge, will speak for him over WHFC.

President Cermak has taken five different periods on various radio stations tonight. They are: WCFL, from 8:30 to 9; WGES, from 9:30 to 10:30; WSBC, from 2:45 to 3 and from 11 to 12, and WJJD, from 1 to 2 p. m.

Several voters reported yesterday they had received letters urging them to vote for Thompson which were on engraved stationery of the city law department and were carried by postage stamps cancelled with the "I Will," indicating they had been been bought for city business.

The Democratic organization announces that it will make the return of James Hamilton Lewis, senator-elect, a real home coming tomorrow. When his train from Arizona pulls into the Illinois Central station at 9:30 a. m. there will be a large delgation to greet him and demand a speech. A presidential boom for Senator Lewis also has been set going.

Ald. Arthur F. Albert's radio talk tonight will be over WBBM at 8 o'clock.

MUSCLE SHOALS VOTE IN SENATE DUE ON MONDAY

Fertilizer Makers Assail Project.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—The compromise Muscle Shoals bill, which passed the house yesterday, will be passed by the senate Monday, under plans of its supporters, and then go to President Hoover, who is expected to pocket veto it.

The project today became the target of the organized fertilizer industry.

In full page advertisements headed "An open leter to congress" the National Fertilizer association denounced reports that the conference agreement on Muscle Shoals was satisfactory to the fertilizer industry.

"Such reports," it declared, "are manifestly untrue because such a law if enacted would single out the fertilizer industry and force increased production upon it by act of congress. We are already suffering from overproduction."

It has become known on good authority that President Hoover intends to take action entirely on the merits of the present measure and without reference to the fact that, should he veto this bill, the next congress with its slim administration majority might pass a measure even more openly putting the government into business at Muscle Shoals.

Expect Senate to Pass It.

Since, with the exception of a proviso relating to the lease of the nitrate plants, the present bill is a duplicate of the Norris resolution, and since the senate passed the Norris resolution last spring, the senate's approval of the present bill is taken for granted.

It is also taken for granted, however, that the bill could not be passed over the President's veto. Yesterday's vote in the house by which the conference report was adopted, 216 to 153, was evidence that strength enough to override a veto could not be mustered there.

In the senate, to which the bill would first be returned by the President, the margin either way would undoubtedly be close. The original Norris resolution was adopted by the senate last spring by a vote of 45 to 23, with the announcement of the pairs showing thirteen additional votes in favor of the measure. Unless the present measure picks up more supporters a veto would be sustained in the upper house.

Fertilizer Industry's Statement.

The statement of the National Fertilizer association was signed by Charles J. Brand, executive secretary, and formerly head of the bureau of markets of the department of agriculture.

It pointed out that fertilizer consumption, which was 7,934,000 tons in 1929 was likely to fall below seven million tons in 1931 because of the farmer's reduced purchasing power

HOOVER PHYSICIANS WRITE HEALTH RULES FOR U. S. CHILDREN

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—(AP)—President Hoover's group of physicians today wrote their child health prescription for him, but left it to be filled by the American people—parents of the patients.

The medical section of the White House child health conference ended its three day session today and submitted its report.

The final diagnosis of the doctors, after a year's exhaustive survey, led to the following recommendations, among others:

Full study of each child as an individual, and study of mental as well as physical characteristics in early infancy.

Improvement of educational procedure in hospitals for nurses and medical schools for doctors, to prepare them for their task.

Careful guard over dietary practices for children and mothers.

Establishment of facilities for maternity patients in every community.

Prompt and effective expansion of dental facilities in hospitals and dental service for children.

It asserted that without building a single additional plant, the existing fertilizer industry could speed up enough to turn out from 12,000,000 to 14,000,000 tons annually. It declared that in 1919 when the Muscle Shoals plants were built, the average wholesale price of the six most widely used fertilizer was $59, while by 1930 the average price had dropped to $25.96.

"Whatever reasons there may have been for building the government plants in 1919," the statement said, "clearly they do not exist today."

It went on to claim that by 1932 the production of nitrogen will have increased to such an extent that the United States will be independent of other nations for its supply.

Calls It Threat to Industry.

"The existence of the nitrate plants at Muscle Shoals is a grave threat to American industry," the statement concluded. "These plants should not be turned over under preferential conditions to a particular enterpriser who may have a peculiar advantage over all his competitors, when no major public purpose is served thereby. They should be liquidated as were the shipping board's ships and hundreds of millions of dollars worth of other war surplus."

While agreeing with these arguments of an interested industry, opponents of the measure continued to contend that it is not a fertilizer proposition at all, but is a power proposition very thinly disguised. Its purpose is to put the government into the power business and this the measure will accomplish even though a lease is negotiated. While, should the twelve month leasing period provided by the bill pass without a lease of the nitrate plants being negotiated, then the government would go into the fertilizer business as well.

SENATE PASSES 358 MILLION NAVAL MEASURE

Eleven New Destroyers Included in Bill.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Overriding pacifist and little navy opposition, the senate today added 11 destroyers to the 1932 naval construction program. The vessels were included in the 358 million dollar naval appropriations bill, which was approved without opposition after the destroyer amendment had been accepted by the overwhelming vote of 63 to 10.

The question of whether funds will be actually provided for the destroyers is now squarely up to the house leadership. Immediately following passage of the appropriation bill the measure was placed in the hands of a conference committee of senate and house members to iron out differences.

As the bill did not contain the $10,000,000 voted today for destroyers when passed by the house, that body must now approve this item or no funds will be appropriated for this purpose.

74 Million Naval Bill Doomed.

In event the destroyer item wins house approval it will constitute the only step that will be taken by the present congress to start the American fleet on the way toward a treaty navy. This became certain today when Senators Frederick Hale [Rep., Me.] and Claude A. Swanson [Dem., Va.] frankly admitted that all chances for passage of the $74,000,000 naval construction program have disappeared. No further serious effort to secure passage of the bill will be made, Senator Hale stated tonight. The destroyers, plus a flying deck cruiser, an aircraft carrier, and four submarines, the latter six vessels being included in the authorization bill, constituted the first year's installment of the administration's program for building up to tonnage parity with Great Britain.

The senate vote came immediately after a stinging Democratic attack had been delivered against the little navy and pacifist forces which had opposed the destroyer item. Senator Swanson, ranking minority member of the naval affairs committee, was the instigator of the Democratic outburst against what he styled congressional failure to arrange for a substantial increase in the navy.

Swanson Assails Pacifists.

Senator William H. King [Dem., Utah] was just concluding the little navy attack on the destroyer amendment when Senator Swanson jumped to his feet.

"What does it mean if we do not appropriate for these destroyers?" he demanded. "It means that if this destroyer item is defeated congress will adjourn without approving a single authorization or appropriation for the construction of any warship not already laid down.

"The opposition to this destroyer item, both in the senate and in the house, are opposed to any modernization of these old battleships to make them adequate for modern naval use. The members of this opposition want to send sailors out in battleships which can shoot only about two-thirds as far as the ships they would be called upon to fight. They want to send the sailors out in ships which would put them at every disadvantage in the world in any conflict which might develop.

"We put this amendment in the bill because we knew that it was the only remote chance we had of getting some money to start the increase of the American navy, according to the London pact."

PRESIDENT ATTENDS WHITE HOUSE PRESS ASSOCIATION BANQUET

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—(AP)—President Hoover tonight attended the annual banquet of the White House Correspondents' association.

Seated at the speaker's table with him were all the members of his cabinet, the ambassadors from Great Britain, France, and Germany, and other high ranking officials in the government.

Among the ceremonies at the dinner was the inauguration of Paul R. Mallon, White House reporter for the United Press, as president of the association for the coming year.

In addition, the correspondents took occasion to parody several incidents in the government during the year, among them the Wickersham report.

CAPTURE SEVEN AS PASSERS OF FAKE $20 BILLS

The breaking up of a gang of fake $20 note passers was announced by Capt. Thomas J. Callaghan, chief of the federal secret service, with the arraignment yesterday of six men before United States Commissioner Walker.

Capt. Callaghan said the gang had distributed about $3,000 of the bills in Chicago, Milwaukee, and Gary. Nineteen notes were recovered from Vincenzo del Pinto, alleged leader of the gang. The others arrested are Dean Cramer, Leo Cordoni, Paul Kardulas, Gus Kolas, and Frank Dello. Another alleged member of the gang, Joe Ostromencki, is under arrest in New York.

The gang is believed to have been supplied with the counterfeit money by confederates in New York. No equipment for counterfeiting was found here.

GERMAN STUDENT KILLED IN DUEL BANNED BY LAW

BERLIN, Feb. 21.—(AP)—The death of a student at Darmstadt as a result of a student duel has drawn German attention to the fact that, while such meetings are technically under the ban of the law, they still go on. The student, named Tomcak, slipped and fell on his opponents' sword and died to death from a deep chest wound. The opponent and his second surrendered to the authorities who ordered an investigation.

The duel was like the scores that are fought each week in German universities, a "Bestimmungsmensur," which means that there was no formal challenge but the opponents, fairly evenly matched, were fighting to see which was the better man.

In Berlin alone there are reported to be more than a dozen fighting corps that meet once a week secretly.

LYLE IS PRODUCT OF A FAMILY OF NATION BUILDERS

Early Tennessee History Made by His People.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Leaders like Judge Lyle are not accidents.

They are bred.

The process takes generations.

That is why John Homer Lyle's pioneer background is interesting. Dating him is a century and a half. Lyles who—sometimes at the cost of life—were pioneers, hunters, commonwealth builders, missionaries, and slavery fighters.

The result of the century and a half of discipline and combat is the Lyle who in the present Chicago crisis is the pioneer into the jungles of gangland, the hunter of hoodlums, the anti-crime fighter, and the jurist who says of constitutional guarantees—

"The criminal who makes his living with a gun should have only one character—swift and sure punishment."

Men of the Mountains.

The judge, and his forbears for three long generations, have been mountain bred. Significant fact! "Manent semper liberi" says the knightly motto on the seal of West Virginia, and by that motto the Lyles and the Richardsons—grandparents of the judge—of the mountain country of east Tennessee lived. By that motto, too, they died when the cause of freedom demanded the sacrifice.

That is why the beautiful Lily Dale Richardson, who was to marry Samuel Lyle and become the judge's mother, was left an orphan in her girlhood. Her father and mother were outspoken and active Unionists at a time when and in a region where to be outspoken and active in the cause of the Union was to risk your life, the burning of your barns and the slaughtering of your cattle.

Lily Richardson's father and mother were slain early in the civil war by guerrillas—a type of francs-tireurs as ever disgraced warfare. They were called bushwhackers. Their purpose was to prey upon a distracted countryside and terrorize loyalists into flight and neutrals into the rebel army.

A Character in Buckskins.

The Lyles, too, suffered by the raids of the bushwhackers.

They fought back bitterly and with high advantage to the Union cause. In short, they remained true to the tradition of David Lyle, founder of the Tennessee branch of the family and great-grandfather of Judge Lyle. "My Great-Grandfather David," says the judge, "was a character in buckskin. I have heard him described in the mountains, where his memory long was cherished, as a tall, handsome man, a great contriver and, like his friend Davy Crockett, a wonderful marksman. Sometimes he and Crockett would be gone from the little settlements for months at a time on a hunting and trading expedition and would come home with their pack train loaded with furs and tallow."

His eldest son, also a David, equally loved the life of wandering and trading, and he had a ready hand for every opportunity which the fat new land lying between the Blue Ridge and the great river offered.

Family a Foe of Slavery.

To land which Great-Grandfather David and his son had cleared became a 640 acre plantation. It was worked by free labor, for both men detested slavery, and from their abundant acres they allotted tracts to the Negroes which they could work for their own profit.

Then came the civil war and with it almost ruin for the Lyles. The bushwhackers robbed their general store, burned their crops, and stole their horses.

But the Lyles struck back. Both Great-Grandfather David and the judge's Uncle David and his Uncle Wylie became famous fighters of rebel bushwhackers and valuable scouts for the Union forces. Uncle Wylie gave Burnside the information which enabled the northern general to stop Longstreet at the battle of Bull's Gap, and when Col. Roderick Random Butler ran up the first rebel flag raised in east Tennessee, Uncle David Lyle promptly shot it down. For that act he had to fly. Pursuit was hot and once the chase rode over a culvert beneath which the loyalist was hiding.

Scout and Recruiting Agent.

Meanwhile Grandfather David was not only scouting for the Union forces but recruiting for them. He would ride twenty-five or thirty loyalists at a time from Tennessee into Kentucky, there to be enlisted under the Stars and Stripes.

And what was the fate of pretty Lily Dale Richardson, whose father and mother the bushwhackers had killed? That is a strange story.

After the murder of her parents the orphan was taken to her grandparents' home near Elizabethton. There she helped in housework.

One day the late George Stewart, at one time a celebrated evangelist but then a young preacher and the president of Parrotsville college in a county on the North Carolina border of Tennessee, saw the child and urged upon the grandparents that they send their war orphan to Parrottsville to be educated.

They consented.

Lily Dale Richardson did the four years of college work in three and then became a teacher in Morristown, Hamblen county, Tennessee.

There she met and married young Samuel Thomas Lyle, grandson of that David Lyle who had pioneered out of Virginia into Tennessee and son of the David who had been a Union scout and recruiter in the civil war.

Civil War Losses Recouped.

Out of the wreckage of war Grandfather David salvaged enough to buy for a sum that now would be a bagatelle 8,000 acres of timberland in North Carolina on the Tennessee border near Paint Rock. From that tract he sold cordwood and ties to the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad. Thus he more or less recouped his wartime losses. He died in the late eighties at a great age.

After the war he moved from the old plantation near Johnson City to Morristown so that his children—of whom he had eleven and among whom were three sets of twins—could have the advantages of the Morristown academy.

That was how it happened that Lily Dale Richardson, then teaching in Morristown, happened there to meet David Lyle's son Samuel, who became the judge's father.

John Born in Indiana.

Two years or so after the marriage they came north, partly on a prospecting tour and partly to pay a long visit to his wife's brother, John Richardson of Indiana, who was a railroad assistant superintendent and was doing well.

And that is how John Homer Lyle, of the fourth generation of the old pioneering Tennessee Lyles and present pioneer into the jungle of Chicago gangland, happened to be born in Vermilion county, Indiana, Oct. 21, 1882.

In the town of Gessie, Ind., Samuel Lyle and his wife and the new baby tarried a year and a half, Samuel learning telegraphy between whiles of leisurely southern yarns with his brother-in-law, John Richardson.

Then—the pioneering spirit still strong in him—he pushed on to Kansas, lured partly by the desire to renew old times with a boyhood chum who had settled in the little town of Burden. There he clerked in a bank for two years and there Mrs. Lyle taught school.

Back Again to Tennessee.

But the time for wandering and prospecting now was past. Duty and family affection were calling Samuel Lyle back to Tennessee. His mother wanted him by her side in her declining years. He returned to the mountain country. There he farmed, there he and his brother, Dan, developed the manufacturing of shoes, there he educated his son, John, and there in 1921 he died.

To that son he left no considerable inheritance nor could he help the seventeen year old boy during his early struggles in Chicago to obtain a legal education. The old gentleman had become land poor and his affairs fell into litigation. John Homer Lyle had to make his own way in the great city and the day came—and came soon—when he, driving a truck by day that he might earn money to keep himself in law school by night, thanked heaven that he had learned to manage horses and work with his hands back on the farm in Tennessee.

Then, too, he thanked heaven that he had come of the fighting Lyles whose family tradition links them with fighting Davy Crockett, hero and martyr of the Alamo.

He still is thankful for that.

For today the fight of his life is on.

Lyle Sues Fairweather for $100,000

Judge John H. Lyle, who yesterday sued George O. Fairweather for $100,000. This picture is from a charcoal drawing of Judge Lyle, made by N. T. Mingo, a boyhood friend.

Charges Libel

Judge John H. Lyle yesterday filed a $100,000 suit in Superior court charging slander and libel against George O. Fairweather, assistant business manager of the University of Chicago. The suit grows out of a statement made by Mr. Fairweather in a letter refusing to support Judge Lyle's candidacy for mayor and implying that Judge Lyle was interested in the State-Congress theater.

Only the praecipe of the suit was filed. Attorney W. T. Alden, who filed it, made a statement in which he said:

"Judge Lyle has informed me that he has no interest direct or indirect of any kind or nature in the State-Congress theater and never did have any interest in it, that he never went with George Fairweather to visit the theater.

"Judge Lyle has informed me that during this entire campaign, velled, insinuating charges of this nature have been made for the purpose of prejudicing him in his campaign, by irresponsible persons, members of the city hall political organization; that this is the first time any one with any semblance of standing has made such statements and that he is only paying attention in this instance because Fairweather is supposed to be the employé of a substantial insitution and should be held accountable for the circulation of such malicious and untrue charges."

PRESS CAMPAIGN FOR NOMINATION TO MINOR POSTS

City Treasurer and Clerk at Stake.

Although overshadowed by the mayoralty campaign the battle for two other elective city offices—those of city clerk and city treasurer—have not slackened as primary day approaches.

In the Republican ranks two candidates for the city clerk nomination stand out among seven as strong contenders against Patrick S. Smith, the Thompson incumbent, who is seeking reelection. These two are Thomas Hanley and Edward Clamage. Others on the Republican ballot are Jacob Legion Tenny, George F. Haas, Max O. Schroeder, and Albert O. Anderson.

Hanley, a member of the American Legion, is sponsored by Bernard W. Snow, Republican county chairman, and has strong Lyle backing while support of the ex-service men's organizations is claimed by Clamage.

Interest in the Democratic nomination for city clerk, which seems certain to go to Peter J. Brady, the regular Democratic organization candidate, has been slight.

In the race for city treasurer James A. Kearns, Republican, and Ald. Edward J. Kaindl [34th], Democrat, appear to be out in front for nomination by their respective parties. Kearns, who has been clerk of the Municipal court for the last twelve years, has the support of the Deneen faction, and Kaindl is the regular Democratic organization candidate.

As they will appear on the Republican ballot the candidates for city treasurer are: Andrew J. Schultz, the Thompson candidate; Kearns, Vincent J. Conley, Henry Sugar, I. J. Brown, Oscar M. Johnson, and Joseph De Salvo. The Democratic candidates are Kaindl, William E. Strook, Peter J. Rosenblatt, and Emmett A. Moynihan.

There is no opposition for the nominations for a Superior court judgeship and for a vacancy on the Municipal court bench. On the Republican ticket the Superior court incumbent, Harry A. Lewis, is the only candidate. Ernest Stout is a candidate on the American National party ticket while the Democrats have no candidate. For the Municipal court vacancy Edward B. Casey is running on the Republican ticket and Alexander M. Smietanka on the Democratic ticket.

SHERIFF READY TO CURB FRAUD AT CITY POLLS.

Swanson Staff Prepared to Prosecute.

Sheriff William D. Meyering announced yesterday that his entire force will be prepared to cope with fraud and violence in any part of the city at next Tuesday's primary.

Although the regular force of the sheriff is limited to a hundred highway patrolmen, his jurisdiction covers the city as well as the outlying country towns, and he has the additional authority to swear in deputies when they are needed. Meyering said he would have flying squads ready to rush into any precinct where an emergency arises.

"The city police, of course, are chiefly responsible for keeping order at the polling places," the sheriff said, "but that will not dull our vigilance. I have issued orders to my men to be on the job the entire day."

Hear Rumors of Violence.

Coincident with the sheriff's announcement, State's Attorney Swanson revealed that he has received intimations that there will be a recurrance of violence, fraud, and lawlessness Tuesday and that he has assigned assistant state's attorneys to every group of wards to gather evidence for prosecutions.

In coöperation with Acting Police Commissioner Alcock, he said, the wards will be patrolled throughout the day by police squads operating under the direction of Pat Roche, chief investigator of the state's attorney's office.

"Any violation of the election laws or violence of any character will be speedily prosecuted, and it will be the plan of the state's attorney's office to submit immediately to the grand jury any irregularities which may be observed by the representatives of this office," Swanson said.

Jarecki Issues Warning.

A similar warning came from County Judge Jarecki, who promised that his court and the board of election commissioners will be prepared to act speedily upon reports of fraud and violence reaching them.

The regular peace officers will be augmented by details of American Legion members who have been selected by the Voters Nonpartisan association. These watchers will be given official authority by Judge Jarecki. In announcing the additional watchers Capt. C. B. Hopkins, secretary of the Nonpartisan association, declared that a scheme to vote 800 "floaters" in one precinct of the 27th ward had been discovered and that the "floaters" will be arrested and prosecuted if they appear on election day. Rush C. Butler is president of the association.

The preparations of the law enforcement agencies to insure a peaceful and honest primary were stimulated by letters from Judge Lyle stating that he has heard constant rumors that in certain wards "the city hall machine intends to vote large numbers of illegal votes and is preparing for wholesale falsification of the count."

Wants Honest Election.

"I am one of those who has felt that in so far as you are able to do so you would lend the power of your office to see that elections are conducted in accordance with the law, that no stingers should be tolerated, that a scrupulous, honest count be made, and in short that the votes should be counted most accurately," Judge Lyle said in his letter to Judge Jarecki.

"I have confidence in you but I am calling to your attention the rumors that are constantly coming to me that hoodlums and gangsters connected with the city hall administration in their desperation are planning to steal the election if they can possibly do so. You know what to do under the circumstances and I rely with confidence upon your utmost diligence in this regard."

Judge Lyle sent a copy of the Jarecki letter and similar suggestions to State's Attorney Swanson.

ALBERT ASSERTS MINISTERS BACK HIM FOR MAYOR

Attacks Chaos and Waste of Thompson Rule.

Ald. Arthur F. Albert told a meeting of Deneen ward committeemen at the Morrison hotel yesterday that he expects ministers in hundreds of pulpits today to urge their congregations to help nominate him for mayor at the polls on Tuesday.

"Sentiment is swinging rapidly towards my campaign," Albert said. "This is witnessed by official reports from our ward and precinct leaders in every section of the city. This morning we received scores of telephone calls from pastors of churches in all sections.

"I am confident I shall win the primary election on Tuesday. The electorate of the city is aroused over the waste and extravagance of the Thompson spoils system.

City Affairs in Chaos.

"Voters are aware of the fate that awaits our city if the primary should express approval of the Thompson candidates. Thompson's present lieutenants, or those of his lieutenants who have deserted to Judge Lyle, have brought Chicago's municipal affairs into a chaotic condition.

In his speeches last night Albert continued his attacks on the waste of Thompsonism, reiterating his charge that on paving contracts alone the city's loss in 1930 exceeded $5,000,000, an amount which added to the ever increasing tax burden.

Ald. Albert cited figures to show that paving costs were 100 per cent higher in Chicago than in neighboring suburbs, where labor and supply conditions are identical with those in Chicago. Despite the difference in cost, the suburbs were getting better pavements, Albert asserted.

Claims Albert Can Win.

Roy O. West, chairman of the Albert campaign committee, issued a statement asserting that the organization's poll shows Judge Lyle running third and declaring that Albert can beat Thompson "if the women and men who prefer him will vote."

Little activity was discerned yesterday at headquarters of George K. Schmidt. His publicity agent issued a statement quoting the candidate as saying the financial problem is the most vital issue in the campaign and calling for an economical administration, which Mr. Schmidt promises to give.

United States Senator Deneen had been expected to make a public speech in support of Ald. Albert Tuesday, but word was received that illness kept him in Washington.

FIRE DESTROYS 4 BUILDINGS ON HINSDALE FARM

Three explosions and a fire razed four buildings on the Natoma farm, 31st street and Spring road, Hinsdale, last night, caused an estimated loss of $50,000, and roused the entire town and neighboring communities. The farm is owned by Frank O. and J. Fred Butler, wholesale paper merchants of Chicago.

A bit of heroism featured the fire when Mrs. Paul Butler, ignoring flames and smoke, rushed into a burning stable and rescued two horses and a dog. She escaped uninjured.

The structures were part of a group of ten buildings near the residence used as stables, garages and shops. Apparently the fire originated in a garage. It spread quickly, destroying two garages, a stable, a machine shop, three trucks and a bus. Sparks from the buildings lighting on a 500 gallon tank, partly filled with fuel, ignited it. A terrific explosion followed, shooting flames in all directions. Two minor blasts occurred a few minutes later. No one was injured.

Fire apparatus responded from Hinsdale, Downers Grove and Westmont under command of Chief Henry Demonous of Hinsdale. He augmented his man power by obtaining volunteer help from among hundreds of motorists who crowded the farm to watch the blaze.

Boy, 10, Falls from Bicycle Into Path of Truck; Killed

Francis Smith, 10 years old, 845 West 46th place, was killed yesterday when he fell from his bicycle beneath the wheels of an ice cream truck at Vincennes avenue and 92d place. The driver was Anton Korper, 4466 Princeton avenue. This death increased the Cook county motor toll for the year to 189.

FIGHT DISMISSAL OF ARIZONA SUIT ON BOULDER DAM

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Arizona set forth in detail in a voluminous brief filed today in the Supreme court reasons why that court should not dismiss the suit it brought to challenge the validity of the Boulder canyon project act for the construction of Hoover dam.

Other states in the Colorado river basin and Secretary of the Interior Wilbur have filed a motion asking dismissal of the action.

Not being political or abstract, but advanced in its quasi-sovereign capacity to prevent the other states and the United States from injuring or destroying its water rights, the Supreme court had ample authority, Arizona stated, to protect it in the exercise of these rights.

Taking up the various objections urged in the motion to dismiss, Attorney General Peterson of Arizona asserted his state had a quasi-sovereign right in the water of the Colorado flowing within its borders, and declaring that Secretary Wilbur under the Boulder canyon project act would, unless prevented by the court, construct works in Arizona which would divert water now flowing there and use it elsewhere.

SLAIN BY VICTIM AS BLACK HAND PLOT IS FOILED

Police Seize Terrorists' Dynamite Cache.

An alleged blackmailer was shot and fatally wounded and a cache of dynamite and black blasting powder was found by state's attorney's detectives yesterday in two separate attacks on Italian extortionists. The prosecutor's detectives found enough explosive, they said, to blow up a considerable portion of the north side. It is now safely stored away in the Bridewell quarry.

Joseph Muscato, 24 years old, 815 Garibaldi place, a member of the "42 gang" of young west side hoodlums, was shot in an attempted extortion plot. His partner, Albert Woodrick, 961 West 18th street, was taken into custody and is being held by the prosecutor pending further investigation. Muscato, with shotgun charges in his head and back, died after being taken to the Bridewell hospital.

Shot by Intended Victim.

Attilio Scalditti, 730 South Loomis street, proprietor of the Scully Monument company, 1301 Madison street, was the intended victim of the extortionists. It was he who shot Muscato in the presence of Detectives Michael Ahern and James Zegar.

Scalditti, who is also known as Scully, is a nephew of Ole Scully, wealthy Italian sewer contractor, who was beaten to death with a baseball bat on the eve of his appearance in September, 1928, as a state's witness in the trial of Angelo Petitti for kidnaping 10 year old Billy Ranieri.

Reveals Extortion Plot.

The extortion plot was first revealed Friday afternoon by Dominick De Palma, 1454 Washington boulevard, a relative of Scalditti. He told his relative that he had just met two men on Madison street who had informed him that they were to get $2,500 to kill Scalditti. De Palma said he knew the men and thought he could dissuade them if Scalditti paid $2,500 and the latter told De Palma to negotiate the deal.

Scalditti reported the case to Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller, who is in charge of the racketeering office, and who acted as chief prosecutor in the Ranieri case. Detectives Ahern and Zegar went to the monument works at 9 o'clock yesterday morning to wait.

Shortly after noon Muscato and Woodrick arrived with De Palma.

Detectives Ahern and Zegar stepped from their hiding place and placed them all under arrest, including De Palma. They took them to a rear room of the building for a search. Scalditti, during this proceeding, held his new shotgun.

Muscato broke away and ran for the door during the search and the policemen and Scalditti fired. The latter's shotgun took effect and Muscato fell.

Muscato's last brush with the law was in May, 1930, when he was held as one of three alleged safeblowers.

The dynamite cache, which was found in the heart of the north side Italian colony, was the result of a report to the prosecutor's office that the explosives were to be used for election terrorism.

George [Doc] Williams, an investigator for the state's attorney, and Detectives William Nihill and Joseph Keating, had waited for nearly a week for some one to appear and claim the dynamite, which was stored under an abandoned barn at Milton avenue and Oak street. No one appeared.

PULL FAILS HIM

TONY (MOPS) VOLPE.

SERRITELLA PAL OF VOLPE, BUT HE CAN'T SAVE HIM

Some of the boys who were whooping it up yesterday at the Thompson headquarters expressed sorrow for Tony "Mops" Volpe, public enemy. As strong as he is with the Thompson trio, Al Capone, City Sealer Daniel Serritella, a member of the Thompson cabinet, and Dago Lawrence Mangano, they could not promise to save him from deportation, even if Thompson should be reelected.

Several years ago Mops pleaded guilty to a conspiracy to counterfeit war saving stamps.

Under Serritella's Wing.

Upon his release Volpe was taken under the wing of Serritella, who had become a member of Mayor Thompson's cabinet, and a short time later he was arrested with two other men in an automobile after they had thrown three pistols out the window. The two others were Frankie Rio, personal bodyguard of Capone, and Frank Mancuso.

A later visit to Capone's home in Miami was the start of Volpe's present difficulty. Capone's guests and the big boss went to Cuba for a few days. A deportation warrant was issued, charging that Volpe, an alien, who had been convicted of a crime, made an illegal reentry into this country from Cuba.

Testimony Is Recorded.

At the court hearing the following examination of Volpe was recorded:

Q.—When did you last enter this country? A.—In 1928 by airplane. I had been to Havana.

Q.—Who was with you? A.—Dan Serritella, Albert Prignano, William Pacelli, and Jack Guzik.

Q.—How do these men make their living? A.—Mr. Serritella was city sealer of Chicago, Mr. Prignano was an alderman, and Mr. Pacelli was a member of the state legislature.

John A. Sutherland, commander, and Samuel M. Wright, past commander of the department, also were present.

Boy, 10, Falls from Bicycle Into Path of Truck; Killed

Francis Smith, 10 years old, 645 West 46th place, was killed yesterday when he fell from his bicycle beneath the wheels of an ice cream truck at Vincennes avenue and 92d place. The driver was Anton Korper, 4466 Princeton avenue. This death increased the Cook county motor toll for the year to 189.

Joseph Muscato, young extortionist killed by his intended victim.

FIGHT DISMISSAL OF ARIZONA SUIT ON BOULDER DAM

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Arizona set forth in detail in a voluminous brief filed today in the Supreme court reasons why that court should not dismiss the suit it brought to challenge the validity of the Boulder canyon project act for the construction of Hoover dam.

Other states in the Colorado river basin and Secretary of the Interior Wilbur have filed a motion asking dismissal of the action.

Not being political or abstract, but advanced in its quasi-sovereign capacity to prevent the other states and the United States from injuring or destroying its water rights, the Supreme court had ample authority, Arizona stated, to protect it in the exercise of these rights.

Taking up the various objections urged in the motion to dismiss, Attorney General Peterson of Arizona asserted his state had a quasi-sovereign right in the water of the Colorado flowing within its borders, and declaring that Secretary Wilbur under the Boulder canyon project act would, unless prevented by the court, construct works in Arizona which would divert water now flowing there and use it elsewhere.

SLAIN BY VICTIM AS BLACK HAND PLOT IS FOILED

Police Seize Terrorists' Dynamite Cache.

An alleged blackmailer was shot and fatally wounded and a cache of dynamite and black blasting powder was found by state's attorney's detectives yesterday in two separate attacks on Italian extortionists. The prosecutor's detectives found enough explosive, they said, to blow up a considerable portion of the north side. It is now safely stored away in the Bridewell quarry.

Joseph Muscato, 24 years old, 815 Garibaldi place, a member of the "42 gang" of young west side hoodlums, was shot in an attempted extortion plot. His partner, Albert Woodrick, 961 West 18th street, was taken into custody and is being held by the prosecutor pending further investigation. Muscato, with shotgun charges in his head and back, died after being taken to the Bridewell hospital.

Shot by Intended Victim.

Attilio Scalditti, 730 South Loomis street, proprietor of the Scully Monument company, 1361 Madison street, was the intended victim of the extortionists. It was he who shot Muscato in the presence of Detectives Michael Ahern and James Zegar.

Scalditti, who is also known as Scully, is a nephew of Ole Scully, wealthy Italian sewer contractor, who was beaten to death with a baseball bat on the eve of his appearance in September, 1928, as a state's witness in the trial of Angelo Petitti for kidnaping 10 year old Billy Ranieri.

Reveals Extortion Plot.

The extortion plot was first revealed Friday afternoon by Dominick De Palma, 1454 Washington boulevard, a relative of Scalditti. He told his relative that he had just met two men on Madison street who had informed him that they were to get $2,500 to kill Scalditti. De Palma said he knew the men and thought he could dissuade them if Scalditti paid $2,500 and the latter told De Palma to negotiate the deal.

Scalditti reported the case to Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller, who is in charge of the racketeering office, and who acted as chief prosecutor in the Ranieri case. Detectives Ahern and Zegar went to the monument works at 9 o'clock yesterday morning to wait.

Shortly after noon Muscato and Woodrick arrived with De Palma.

Detectives Ahern and Zegar stepped from their hiding place and placed them all under arrest, including De Palma. They took them to a rear room of the building for a search. Scalditti, during this proceeding, held his new shotgun.

Muscato broke away and ran for the door during the search and the policemen and Scalditti fired. The latter's shotgun took effect and Muscato fell.

Muscato's last brush with the law was in May, 1930, when he was held as one of three alleged safeblowers.

The dynamite cache, which was found in the heart of the north side Italian colony, was the result of a report to the prosecutor's office that the explosives were to be used for election terrorism.

George [Dog] Williams, an investigator for the state's attorney, and Detectives William Nihill and Joseph Keating, had waited for nearly a week for some one to appear and claim the dynamite, which was stored under an abandoned barn at Milton avenue and Oak street. No one appeared.

PULL FAILS HIM

TONY (MOPS) VOLPE.

SERRITELLA PAL OF VOLPE, BUT HE CAN'T SAVE HIM

Some of the boys who were whooping it up yesterday at the Thompson headquarters expressed sorrow for Tony "Mops" Volpe, public enemy. As strong as he is with the Thompson trio, Al Capone, City Sealer Daniel Serritella, a member of the Thompson cabinet, and Dago Lawrence Mangano, they could not promise to save him from deportation, even if Thompson should be reelected.

Several years ago Mops pleaded guilty to a conspiracy to counterfeit war saving stamps.

Under Serritella's Wing.

Upon his release Volpe was taken under the wing of Serritella, who had become a member of Mayor Thompson's cabinet, and a short time later he was arrested with two other men in an automobile after they had thrown three pistols out the window. The two others were Frankie Rio, personal bodyguard of Capone, and Frank Mancuso.

A later visit to Capone's home in Miami was the start of Volpe's present difficulty. Capone's guests and the big boss went to Cuba for a few days. A deportation warrant was issued, charging that Volpe, an alien, who had been convicted of a crime, made an illegal reentry into this country from Cuba.

Testimony Is Recorded.

At the court hearing the following examination of Volpe was recorded:

Q.—When did you last enter this country? A.—In 1928 by airplane. I had been to Havana.

Q.—Who was with you? A.—Dan Serritella, Albert Prignano, William Pacelli, and Jack Guzik.

Q.—How do these men make their living? A.—Mr. Serritella was city sealer of Chicago, Mr. Prignano was an alderman, and Mr. Pacelli was a member of the state legislature.

CITY OBSERVES WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY TODAY

Schools and Offices Will Close Tomorrow.

Business offices, the public schools and most departments of the city and county governments will be closed tomorrow in commemoration of today's 199th anniversary of George Washington's birth. Numerous celebrations will be held by civic organizations, clubs and patriotic groups.

Formal observation by the school children started on Friday with programs in all schools. Yesterday an oratorical contest, which included elimination contests participated in by student representatives of all high schools and which began two months ago, ended at the Union League club, sponsor of the competition.

Oak Park Student Wins.

Vernon Rose, Oak Park High school student, speaking on the subject, "The Ideals of Washington and Their Application to Modern Times," was given five honors. The other contestants in the finals were: Frank Herman, Commercial Continuation school; Maurice Staples, Crane Technical High school, and Norman Lilja, Morgan Park High school.

Competitive drills by eight south side school R. O. T. C. units in the new armory of the 124th field artillery at 3200 Cottage Grove avenue, followed by a parade of 500 automobiles from the armory continued the celebration last night. Polo games and artillery drills were also held.

The National Americana foundation is the sponsor of two meetings honoring Lincoln and Washington, one of which was held last night at the Morrison hotel. The second meeting will be held tonight. The art and literature department of the Chicago Woman's club will have a dinner tonight at the club. Maj. Gen. Frank Parker will speak.

K. of C. Initiates 250.

A class of 250 candidates for the fourth degree in the Knights of Columbus was initiated yesterday at special ceremonies. The fourth degree has a patriotic significance. More than 1,000 members of the La Salle general assembly attended the initiation, which was conducted by Sir Knight Thomas W. Flynn. The Rev. Michael J. Ahern S. J., head of the Fairview house at Weston, Mass., was the principal speaker at a banquet given by the order at the Palmer house last night.

STILL DISCOVERED BY POLICE.

Yarvell street police, responding to a report of a shooting, entered a store at 1444 Taylor street yesterday and discovered a still in operation.

Unveil Portrait of Washington in Boys' Court

DEMOCRATS TOLD OF WASHINGTON AS BOY AND MAN

George Washington may have told the truth about the matter of the cherry tree, but that does not brand him as a saintly character, Judge James Joseph Kelly yesterday told 500 Democratic leaders and workers in a Washington's birthday celebration and party round-up in the Steuben club.

"We are too prone to think of Washington as a boy as what we now would call a sissy, a prude. As a mater of fact, he was an athlete, a man from start to finish," Judge Kelly said.

"Washington was a good fighter, a good lover, a passionate and ardent man, fond of hunting, spending much time in the woods and at camp. He also loved a little drink and, we are told, manufactured good whisky.

Washington was a man of undaunted courage, a brave fighter, a man loyal to his country, and one of the most truthful of men, and he also was a human personality, Judge Kelly went on. He developed into one of the greatest statesmen of all time, a contributory factor being that he was surrounded by statesmen of character, the judge said.

A. J. Cermak, president of the county board and candidate for the Democratic mayoralty nomination, also urged a return to the principles of Washington and Jefferson, "the fundamental standard of personal liberty and tolerance and the elimination of bigotry."

Mr. Cermak predicted a Democratic victory in the mayoralty election in April, and said the Democrats would put Senator James Hamilton Lewis in the President's chair two years from now.

Chairman Clayton F. Smith presided.

32 DEAD; 40 HURT AND 50 SAVED IN MINE EXPLOSION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ESCHWEILER, Germany, Feb. 21.—Thirty-two miners lost their lives and 40 were injured when a fire damp explosion swept through the Eschweiler Reserve pit today. Nearly fifty miners were rescued largely through the bravery of four foremen, who entered the mine immediately after the explosion.

An official investigation was started at once. Communists organized a mass demonstration, bitterly attacking the colliery administration, soon after the disaster.

President von Hindenburg has sent his condolences to members of the dead miners' families. Funerals will be held on Tuesday. This was the second mine disaster in the aix la Chapelle region within a few months. On Oct. 21, 1930, 270 men were killed in a blast near Alsdorf.

British Princes Arrive by Plane in Santiago

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, Feb. 21.—The Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, arrived at Santiago this afternoon in an army trimotor plane from Antofagasta. They went to the British embassy where, during a reception, they were greeted by President Carlos Ibañez. During the flight to Santiago the prince of Wales took films of the mountains.

Fourth Child Victim Dies of Burns in Fire at Home

Loretta Havlicek, 12 years old, died last night at the Mercy hospital of burns received early Friday in a fire and explosion which wrecked the Havlicek home at 2511 Normal avenue. She was the fourth victim of the fire, a brother and two sisters having died of burns earlier. The fire trapped Robert Havlicek, his wife, and their eight children.

BOY DROWNS IN RIVER.

Eugene Shower, 11 years old, 2745 Hillcock avenue, was drowned yesterday when he slipped and fell into the south branch of the Chicago river at Loomis street. Playmates attempted to aid him by thrusting poles into the water, but he was swept away by the current.

VOTE TUESDAY ON 13 BOND ISSUES FOR $54,600,000

Most of Them Approved by Civic Bodies.

Thirteen bond issues to widen streets, improve the lake front, treat sewage, build a viaduct, and create new city boulevards are on the ballot for voters on Tuesday. The issues total $54,600,000.

The sanitary district is behind four of the proposals, which ask $36,000,00 with which to pay part of the costs of treating sewage under the mandate issued by the United States Supreme court that requires all sewage to be treated by Dec. 31, 1938.

Theee proposals have received the approval of the Citizens' association, the Chicago Bureau of Public Efficiency, the Civic federation, and the Cook County Association of Izaak Walton league chapters.

Seven South Park Issues.

Seven south park bond issues aggregating $13,100,000 are next in point of amount. Four of these have been frowned upon by several civic associations and the others approved. Those which have found unanimous regard among indorsing organizations are headed by the $3,500,000 issue necessary to extend Randolph street over a new viaduct into Grant park, where it will connect with the extension of the outer drive, which will lead north across the river.

The other two issues approved by the Citizens' association, the Public Efficiency bureau and the Civic Federation, call for $475,000 to replace piers at 59th and 63d streets, and $1,000,000 to widen Marquette road.

The criticized south park issues allow $2,610,000 for lake front construction along the south shore, $1,915,000 to improve small parks, $2,000,000 for Southeastern boulevard, and $1,600,000 for the Yates avenue boulevard. The disapproval of these proposals by the civic associations and the Chicago Association of Commerce have brought a storm of counter-criticism and defense from south side improvement associations.

Want Something in Return.

The South Chicago Chamber of Commerce replied that organizations in that section of the city have frequently supported projects which were purely for the benefit of the loop interests and have received nothing in return.

The Chicago Plan commission yesterday also registered approval of all the south park issues, picturing the improvements as part of the plan to extend a park along the lake front from the northern city limits twenty-six miles to the southern limits.

The remaining issues are one each for the city and the Lincoln park commissioners. The city issue proposes the widening of North State street from the river to Chicago avenue as a preliminary to subway construction. This would cost $2,500,000 and has received much approval.

The Lincoln park board wishes $3,000,000 to continue lake front extension work on the north side. It would pay for the extension of the outer drive and for the reclamation and improvement of land on the shore. This issue is also backed by civic organizations.

ORGANIZE GRAND JURORS OF STATE TO AID JUSTICE

An organization of grand jurors was incorporated yesterday at Springfield as the Illinois Grand Jurors' association. The incorporators are three former grand jury foremen, Gabriel F. Slaughter, Edward E. Gore, and Edward M. Skinner, and Glen Buck, a former jury member, and Henry Barrett Chamberlin, operating director of the Chicago crime commission. The objects of the association, as set forth in the charter, are:

"To assist grand jurors in their actions upon matters covered by those sections of the statute pertaining to their powers and duties.

"To obtain continuity of action in matters that ordinarily are dropped at the end of each grand jury's term of service.

"To impress upon grand jurors that their service is a civic duty, accompanied by serious responsibilities, to which they must set aside a certain amount of time each year for the betterment of the county, state, and nation.

"To coöperate with the county officials and with other civic associations in advocating measures intended to improve methods of dealing with crime and criminals and to increase the efficiency of the grand jury system."

Membership in the organization will be limited to those who have been grand jurors.

WOMAN ROBBED IN HOME.

Posing as a telephone repairman, an unidentified gunman yesterday entered the home of Mrs. Walter Meyers at 2318 West 72d street and robbed her of $50.

Prizes Awarded

Garbed in colorful costumes, about 30 Lake Forest youngsters participated in a program of gymkhana games yesterday afternoon to open the new riding arena donated to Onwentsia by a group of its members. There were 75 spectators present for the fancy dress parade, and the seven stunt contests. Anthony Ryerson, the Donald M. Ryersons' son, wearing a bright hued desert sheik's costume, won first prize for the best costume, and Benny Bryan with a ludicrous false face and tramp's clothes was awarded the prize for the funniest regalia.

Shirley Hopkins and Patsy Hopkins as circus riders in white costumes, on Shirley's white horse, received the girls' first costume prize, and Barbara Hixon, attired in a Spanish suit, won second place. Edith Cowles in a Crusader's outfit and Johnny King as a Montenegran horseman were others wearing effective costumes.

U. S. Authorities Approve 2 Chicago Area Bridges

Federal authorities at Washington yesterday approved two bridge improvements in the Metropolitan area. The war department indorsed reconstruction by the Illinois division of waterways of a bridge across the Des Plaines river on the line of Jackson street at Joliet. At the same time the house commerce committee agreed to the Sproul bill to permit Cook county to bridge the Little Calumet river at Cottage Grove avenue near 158th street.

FLOOD FUND SUIT IS NOT POLITICS, PLAINTIFF SAYS

Denounces Thompson for Withholding Relief.

In reply to assertions that his action to compel Mayor Thompson to account for more than $100,000 of the $139,000 collected for the Mississippi flood sufferers in 1927 was prompted by political motives, Charles S. Smith, the complainant, issued a statement yesterday saying that he had no political connections whatever.

The Statement by Smith.

"In view of the fact that publicity of this action has been widespread during a time when there happens to be a mayoralty campaign," read the statement, "innocent candidates have been accused of inciting this action by me, and in justice to them I think proper publicity should be given the fact that I have no voice in the government of Chicago, am not a voter here, have no acquaintance whatever with any of the opponents of our present mayor, nor have I any acquaintance with any of their political organizations.

"The action taken by me was done immediately upon my learning of the diversion of these funds four years after they were supposed to have been distributed among the hordes of sufferers in the flooded district of the south. The fund was made up of small subscriptions, like my own.

Thompson Is Condemned.

"Thompson immediately issued a statement that there was still $90,000 left in the fund. If nothing but a dime remained and not every cent was immediately distributed four years ago when the emergency existed, then this alone is enough to condemn his honor and integrity in the handling of funds that could be looked upon in no other manner than ultra sacred."

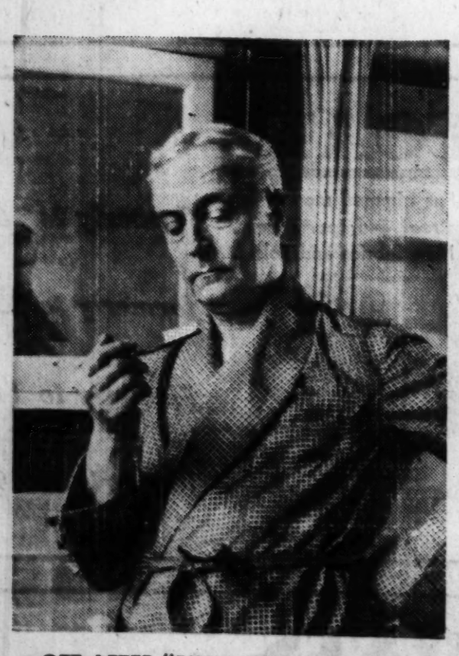
"Too bad about Dad's teeth"

GET AFTER "PINK TOOTH BRUSH" TODAY!

THESE DAYS—EVERYBODY'S "TEETH-MINDED"

Don't think your children don't notice your teeth! They want yours to be just as white and gleaming as theirs are! And perhaps yours are—today. But what about tomorrow? What about a few years from now? You eat almost no coarse foods. None of us do. And lacking stimulation, your gums day by day are growing lazier and flabbier and more tender. No wonder you have "pink tooth brush"!



GET AFTER "PINK TOOTH BRUSH"!

If you haven't ever been particularly concerned over "pink tooth brush", get concerned at once! Tender, bleeding gums are an open invitation to gingivitis, to pyorrhea, to Vincent's disease. And worse still, "pink tooth brush" all too often leads to infection at the roots of sound teeth! Which means probably extraction of the teeth!

YEARS FROM NOW, YOUR TEETH WILL STILL BE WHITE—YOUR GUMS HARD—IF . .

Don't let "pink tooth brush" go on! Don't let it affect your teeth! Today—get a tube of Ipana Tooth Paste. Clean your teeth with it, to keep them gleaming white. And at least twice a day, put some additional Ipana on your brush and rub it gently into your gums. The ziratol in Ipana—plus the daily massage—tones and stimulates the gums, firms the walls, hardens them, keeps them healthy. Use Ipana regularly with massage—and your children, grown up, will be proud of your teeth!

SENATE MOVES TO HELP BONUS LOAN FINANCING

Also Votes 20 Millions for Hospitals.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Anticipating objections in President Hoover's prospective veto message on the veterans' bonus loan bill, the senate today took steps to bolster up its financing provisions.

The senate approved a plan to advance from Jan. 1, 1932, to July 1, 1931, the date on which the next annual treasury contribution of 112 million dollars to the bonus sinking fund will become available.

As further evidence of its intention to grant the demands of world war veterans, the senate passed a bill authorizing the appropriation of $20,877,000 for the construction of additional hospitals. The bill was a substitute for two bills already passed by the senate, one a $2,850,000 bill to provide additional facilities at national soldiers' homes. Location of the hospitals will be at the discretion of the director of veterans' affairs, subject to the approval of the President.

Disability Cut Defeated.

On the motion of Senator Robert M. La Follette [Rep., Wis.], the senate struck from the hospital bill a section inserted by the finance committee at the suggestion of Director of Veterans' Affairs Frank T. Hines, for a 50 per cent reduction in disability allowances of veterans during the time they are in government hospitals. Senator La Follette contended that the provision, which is designed to prevent veterans from remaining in the hospitals longer than is necessary, had been proposed without opportunity for consideration by veterans' organizations and the action upon it should be delayed.

The proposal for advancing the date at which the next 112 million dollars will be available for the soldiers' bonus sinking fund was sponsored by Senator A. H. Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.]. It was incorporated in an amendment to the naval appropriation bill passed today, but, in effect, amends the independent offices appropriation bill, previously approved, which provides the 112 million dollars for investment, Jan. 1, next, in government securities, making up the sinking fund for eventual retirement of bonus certificates held by world war veterans.

Sees 887 Million Fund.

Senator Vandenberg told the senate that, by adding this 112 million dollars to the 775 million dollars already available in the form of securities in the bonus sinking fund and the government life insurance fund, under the terms of the bonus loan bill now in the hands of President Hoover, can be converted into cash for loans to veterans.

This total, Senator Vandenberg said, amounts to 90 per cent of the highest estimate made by any one of the cost of the bill, increasing maximum loans from 22½ to 50 per cent of the face value of bonus certificates. He had reference to the billion dollar estimate made by Director of Veterans' Affairs Hines.

Referring to rumors that President Hoover might go to the extent of calling a special session to provide legislation to finance the bonus loan bill, Senator Vandenberg asserted that there is no reason, whatever, for the enactment of any such legislation.

Says Demands Can Be Met.

"In my judgment, not one penny will be lacking in this reservoir to meet all demands of the bonus loan bill," said Senator Vandenberg. "Furthermore, the plan is so self-contained that there can be no taxes required, no matter what the demands may be."

During the debate, Senator Hiram Johnson [Rep., Cal.] denounced "manufactured myths," and "utter and gross misrepresentations," made in connection with the possibility of an increase in taxes to bear the cost of the bonus loan bill. He obtained confirmation from Senator Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah], chairman of the finance committee, as well as from Senator Vandenberg of his belief that the bill can be financed without drawing upon tax receipts.

While President Hoover continued to work on a message to accompany his veto of the bonus loan bill, pressure was being exerted upon members of congress with a view to sustaining the veto. Friends of the administration were hopeful that there might be a reaction throughout the country favorable to his position, which would make it possible to prevent the passage of the bill over the President's veto.

VETS RIDICULE MAYOR'S CLAIM OF THEIR HELP

Find He "Bought a Book" to Get "War Record."

Leading war veterans and Legionnaires yesterday ridiculed Mayor Thompson's pretended support among former soldiers. David L. Shillinglaw, former state commander of the American Legion, said the war veterans generally were not only opposed to Thompson but had also refused to hold the national convention of the Legion in Chicago while he is mayor.

Mr. Shillinglaw said that during the annual convention of the Legion in St. Louis several years ago a resolution had been passed disapproving of holding any Legion convention in Chicago "so long as the traitor Thompson was the mayor."

Fear Loss of Fair Convention.

The Chicago and Illinois Legion organizations are endeavoring to bring the 1933 convention of the Legion to Chicago during the World's Fair, but have expressed doubt that this will be done if Thompson should happen to be renominated and re-elected.

Arthur Poorman of Chicago Heights, present state commander of the Illinois Legion, made known yesterday that the Legion had nothing to do with the presentation of a book which Thompson on Friday, said had been given him by a group of former service men. The book, Poorman said, contains service records of the war and may be purchased by any one. Each contains a statement of any type of war service of the individual purchaser and all of the books carry the autograph of the national commander of the Legion, Poorman said. The state commander denied that Ralph T. O'Neil, the national commander whose name appears on all the statements, had indorsed Thompson's candidacy. Poorman said the autograph had been authorized on all the certificates.

Spikes the Apple Story.

"The Legion does not participate in politics," Mr. Poorman said, "and therefore does not indorse candidates."

H. C. Ross, another war veteran, refuted Thompson's claim that he made it possible for unemployed war veterans to sell apples without a peddler's license. Ross said he had received a circular from Thompson headquarters in which Thompson attempted to claim credit for this, but Ross declared the credit belonged to the Illinois legislature, which enacted a statute which provided that all soldiers and sailors honorably discharged could peddle all goods, not otherwise prohibited by law, without a license.

SILVER-MARSHALL SUPERHETERODYNE

ALL this had its beginning out in Villa Park, Illinois. It seems that Mr. So-and-So (real name and address on request) had bought a Silver-Marshall superheterodyne when Lyon & Healy first offered them in January. So out it went to live with the So-and-So's in Villa Park, where broadcast stations make life generally trying for the ordinary radio. (There's WMAQ, WMBI, WENR, KYW, WGN, WCFL and others within a short radius.)

Right away the Silver-Marshall started making a name for itself even without an outside aerial! Stations came in bright and chipper with the slightest twist. No coaxing. No interval squeals. Out-of-the-way places popped in from Canada; hot jazz bands from old Juarez; Broadway to the Golden Gate, and points between. And so this went on for many nights. There were 96 possible channels to log . . . and now 96 have been logged . . . 167 different stations up to the time of going to press! No wonder adjectives fail us and that we casually drop our Webster into the waste basket! No wonder every Silver-Marshall owner is a Silver-Marshall booster. One hearing at Lyon & Healy's tomorrow will convince you as it has hundreds of others.

FIVE BANDITS GET $3,800 IN CAFE HOLDUP

Machine Gun Menaces 14 in Restaurant.

Terrorizing five patrons, eight employés, and an owner, five robbers, one armed with a submachine gun, raided the University inn, a café at 1824 West Harrison street, across from the county hospital, yesterday, snatched a money drawer containing $3,800 from a counter, and escaped in their automobile.

The robbery, one of several daring holdups during the day, was executed with such speed and smoothness that none of the fourteen witnesses could obtain accurate descriptions of the bandits. In another crime two armed men staged a repeat robbery in the Hawthorne Jewelry shop at 2147 Cicero avenue, getting $1,500 in gems.

Hold Money to Cash Checks.

In robbing the University inn, the gunmen timed themselves so as to get a cash fund kept by the café owners to cash checks of employés of the county hospital. Yesterday was pay day at the hospital, and employés, attachés, and others received checks amounting to $40,000. To meet a routine demand, Nicholas and Gus Maggos, the proprietors, had on hand nearly $4,000.

Among the patrons in the café were William Theocald, 310 South Wood street, a hospital employé, and John Fiahive, 349 North St. Louis avenue. Maggos, one of the owners; James Karanastases, the manager, and Harry Siavelis, a waiter, and six other workers were scattered about the place when the armed quintet appeared suddenly. A command to "stick 'em up" was immediately countermanded, apparently for fear of causing an alarm from the outside.

Sideswipe Mail Truck.

One of the bandits covered the terrified victims with a submachine gun. Another held a shotgun. As the fourteen men stood cowed, two of the robbers walked hurriedly to a counter and yanked out the cash drawer. A moment later they ran outside, boarded their machine and sped away. In their haste they neglected to close a side door on the auto and it was torn off as their machine sideswiped a mail truck. The thieves sped west in Harrison street and north in Hoyne avenue, tossing out the empty cash drawer at Hoyne avenue and Adams street.

The damaged sedan was found in the alley at the rear of 1942 Hervey street and will be examined for fingerprints by the bureau of identification.

The robbery of the Hawthorne Jewelry shop was staged exactly one month after another holdup. Frank Vranek, 21 years old, 2216 South 59th avenue, Cicero, the clerk, was alone in the place when the two bandits entered. They bound him with adhesive tape, opened the safe and took the gems. According to Vranek, one of the thieves participated in the first holdup in which $1,500 in jewels was also stolen.

Three men, all carrying revolvers, entered the offices of the Mid-City Dairy company at 1110 West Monroe street yesterday, held up A. E. Garfield, the manager, and George Dedakis and Miss Mabel Hymans, bookkeepers, and took $200. The money was taken from a safe.

Thomas Raia, 19 years old, confessed yesterday that he participated in the attempted robbery Friday of the soft drink parlor and lunch room at 600 North Kedzie avenue, in which one of his companions, Richard Alexander, and an intended victim, Benjamin Vaughn, killed each other in a gun duel. Raia was slightly wounded.

A reward of $500 was offered yesterday for the arrest of the robbers who shot two employés of the M. U. Udelowish Cigar company at 2457 West North avenue Friday.

State Police Receive New Guns and Automobiles

Motorcycles Go

Thirteen new automobiles and an equal number of new shotguns were issued yesterday to the state highway police at an assembly of the northern Illinois unit at Des Plaines.

Twenty-six members of the force, under Sergt. Clarence Haskins, gathered from their various stations in Cook county to receive the new equipment. Presentation was made by Walter L. Moody, state superintendent of the police division, and Hal Carr, assistant.

The automobiles replace motorcycles. Two men will be assigned to each of the cars. One shotgun will be placed in each machine. The territory includes all of Cook county north of Lake street.

HOOVER O.K.'S BILL FOR NEW ILLINOIS DISTRICT JUDGE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—(AP)—President Hoover today signed a bill to provide for the appointment of an additional district judge for the southern district of Illinois.

At the same time the President signed a bill to provide for the appointment of an additional district judge for the eastern district of Michigan.

EXPECT OFFICIAL OF CLOSED BANK AT QUIZ TUESDAY

Investigation into the affairs of the closed First Trust and Savings bank of Hammond will be resumed Tuesday with the expected appearance before state examiners of Walter Meyn, vice president of the institution and son of Peter W. Meyn, the president.

Walter Meyn has been in Florida since the bank was closed. Recently he was requested by his father to return to Hammond to appear before representatives of the state banking department and the directors. He will be questioned about his personal accounts, it is reported.

Another development of the inquiry was the announcement that assets of the bank are $450,000 in excess of the liabilities. The addition of personal properties turned over by the Meyns will make the excess assets more than $1,000,000, it is said. However, a large part of the assets is frozen. A hearing on a receivership petition for the bank will be held in Hammond on Tuesday. The directors will oppose a receivership.

SEEK CAPTAINS' BANK BOOKS IN POLICE INQUIRY

Quiz Bar Owner Further for Graft Clews.

Investigation of the bank accounts of several police captains was ordered yesterday by Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller, who is in charge of the grand jury investigation into alleged police grafting. Subpoenas for bank records showing deposits of the captains in the last year will be asked, it was indicated.

Mr. Mueller would not reveal how far the investigation has progressed. It was pointed out, however, that captains with large bank accounts showing substantial deposits at regular intervals might be embarrassed to explain how they were making such deposits from a salary of $4,000 a year. A court order to open safety deposit boxes of police officials will also be asked if the investigation reveals that boxes have been rented, the prosecutor said.

Saloonkeeper to Face Jury.

The investigators continued to question Julian J. Vlamynck, saloonkeeper, whose place at 814 West 71st street was raided Friday night. Vlamynck, whose saloon is in the Englewood district, commanded by Capt. Michael Lee, told the raiders that "the captain is my friend" and that he had paid protection. He will be questioned before the grand jury on Wednesday.

Acting Police Commissioner Alcock yesterday wrote a letter to Prosecutor Mueller stating that he would not suspend seven policemen of the Englewood district, accused of "protecting" handbooks and speakeasies, until he had received a "proper showing of evidence."

Alcock Explains Stand.

"My refusal to suspend these men without indictment was because it would destroy the morale of the department which I have been trying to build up," Alcock stated. "I will suspend any member of the department who is indicted or will file charges on the proper showing of evidence."

CITIZENS ATTACK SEWER BILLS OF THOMPSON BOARD

Lyle Says Faherty Has 'Interest' in Contracts.

Two attacks were leveled yesterday at the Thompson board of local improvements and its president, Michael J. Faherty. One came from property owners in the 40th and 41st wards immediately following the receipt of special assessment bills for a sewer that was forced upon them. The other attack was made upon the city contracts let by the Faherty board.

In speeches last night Judge Lyle charged that the improvement board has let the contract for the Magnolia avenue sewer to the White Paving company. He declared also that Faherty is interested in this company which has been one of the companies favored in the award of contracts under the Thompson administration.

Charges Faherty "Interest."

"One of the last acts of the Thompson administration before the primary," Judge Lyle said, "was to award a $3,000,000 contract for the Magnolia avenue sewer to the White Paving company, in which Mike Faherty, president of the board of local improvements, is interested. It is common talk in contracting circles that Faherty is a one-fourth owner of the company.

"But that is only part of the story. When the bids were opened last Friday it was disclosed that there were only four bidders. All were members of the contracting combine.

"They were the following companies: Paschen Brothers, of which Chris Paschen, Thompson's building commissioner, is the controlling figure; the White company; Newman; and the Underground Construction company. I don't know that there is any particular significance in the last name.

Others Bid in Arizona.

"While these four contractors were bidding on this important $3,000,000 project in Chicago, twenty-seven contractors from all parts of the country, including Chicago, were in Phoenix, Ariz., bidding on a $2,000,000 job.

"Do the people of Chicago believe that it was a mere accident that only these four closely allied contractors bid on a big job at home, while seven times as many were anxious to go all the way to Arizona to bid on a smaller job?

"Do the people think it was a mere accident of chance that the lucky bidder happened to be the one Faherty is most interested in?"

Sewer Bills Protested.

The protests of residents in the 40th and 41st wards also centered on a sewer job. After these property owners had fought for years against the construction of the Berteau avenue sewer as an unnecessary project Faherty succeeded in getting it confirmed in court.

Special assessment bills for this job were received by a number of the property owners yesterday, calling on them to pay their first installment. One bill was for $44.35 which included $4 interest accrued since October, 1916.

By the time all the bills are out, 30,000 voters in the 40th and 41st wards will know that they are "the victims of the trickery of Faherty and Thompson's improvement board," declared James W. Hamilton, president of the North Irving Park Improvement association. He said that the bills reflect a violation of promises made to the property owners at a public hearing held by Faherty.

THREE ARE SLAIN AND 4 WOUNDED IN N. Y. GANG WAR

Blame Booze Rivalries for Killings.

New York, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—New York's underworld replied today to the declaration on Friday by Mayor James J. Walker and Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney of a war of force against criminals by launching an internecine war of its own in which three men are known to have been killed and four wounded. Two others also were killed, according to unconfirmed reports to the police, but their bodies were spirited away.

Most of today's shootings, which flared up in the early morning hours, centered about war between two rival gangs for the lucrative alcohol business of the east side, with a probability that a third gang, with headquarters in another city was involved.

Two Killed on East Side.

Two of today's killings took place on an east side street and in the Hatfield house, an hotel on East Twenty-ninth street. The third man killed was a victim of the traditional "ride."

The known dead from the day's shootings are John [Aces] Mazza, 20 years old, of Brooklyn; Al Wagner, 25, and John Franzone, 24, both of Manhattan.

Mazza was reputed by the police to be the leader of a gang of alcohol wholesalers and hijackers operating on the east side. Abe Wagner, now wounded and missing, is described by the police, as a rival who won the enmity of Mazza by branching out into east side territory. Still a third gang, with headquarters in another city, was said to have been levying tribute on Abe Wagner.

Killed from Automobile.

Mazza was the first to die. He came out of a cafeteria which he had entered, apparently looking for friends, and walked into the line of fire of several men in a sedan at the curb.

Police attributed the murder of Mazza to the Wagner gang and said they believed two other members of the Mazza gang had been killed and left in some remote spot.

The killing of Al Wagner occurred just before daybreak in a two room suite on the seventh floor of the Hatfield house. He was the victim, according to the police, of a ruthless effort to wipe out the entire Wagner gang.

Only Friday morning Abe Wagner escaped alive from a machine gun ambush.

The police were not certain whether John Franzone died because of some connection with the Mazza group or whether he paid the penalty for giving information to the police.

COMMITTEE MAY KILL MINNESOTA GAG LAW REPEAL

Majority Is for Keeping Law on Books.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—A possibility that the bill to repeal the Minnesota newspaper "gag" law would die in committee was revealed today.

The measure, asked by Gov. Floyd Olson in his inaugural address and passed by the house of representatives on Feb. 4, has been in the hands of the senate printing committee since that time. Members of the legislature interested in the bill said today that a majority of the committee were opposed to the repeal.

Governor for Repeal.

The repeal measure, sponsored by Representative Ralph Davis of Breckenridge, is supported by Senator George H. Lommen, who sponsored the original gag law bill in 1925.

This, together with the governor's demand for repeal of the law, may eventually force the bill out of committee and before the senate. Although Lommen has been trying to line up his colleagues for repeal of the law, a substantial bloc is still strongly in favor of retaining it on the statute books.

Chances of action in the senate also are lessened by the fight that looms over the reapportionment bill, which comes up this week. If debate on this measure runs according to indication, a legislative jam is likely, with the possibility that the "gag" repeal bill will still be in its pigeonhole when the session ends in mid-April.

Senate Closely Divided.

Feeling in the senate is much the same as its was in the house, where the bill was not passed until after two days of intense debate and then only by a margin of ten votes.

Proponents of the repeal measure base their strongest argument on the fact that the gag law was created by a group of politicians who had been attacked by a Duluth, Minn., newspaper known as the "Rip-Saw," and that its effect on newspapers in general was not considered at the time of its passage.

CARROLL'S SHOW CAST ACQUITTED AS CHORINES DOZE

2 Girls Attack Charges of Indecent Dress.

The cast of Earl Carroll's revue, "Sketch Book," was acquitted of participating in an obscene show yesterday by Municipal Judge Justin F. McCarthy. Charges against 26 chorus girls and four principals were not pressed and a motion to quash the evidence was sustained.

The defense put two sleepy eyed chorines on the stand to show the court that the costumes in the show were much more modest than the censors represented them. Defense attorneys urged the judge to take the police raid of last Saturday as a gesture politically inspired by the city hall.

Defendants Sleep in Court.

Only 15 of the 26 chorus girl defendants got out of bed in time to keep their court appointment. Four male principals who also had been made defendants were there. Most of the defendants slept through the court session.

Lydia Resch, who, the show's press agent asserts, is a Russian beauty who came to this country not long ago, and Frances De Lacey, who said she lived on Long Island, were the two defense witnesses. Lydia testified that her name wasn't Viola Hunter and that Deputy Police Commissioner James B. Scanlan was wrong in his identification of her by that name.

The De Lacey girl was indignant over the things that were said about her dress by Miss Effie Sigler, the movie censor, and Scanlan during the last three days of testimony.

Defense Attacks Censors.

"I wore an evening gown," she said. "I was completely covered from the knees up. Besides I wore bloomers and a heavy slip underneath."

The testimony of the censors and of Scanlan was attacked by the defense lawyers, Cornelius J. Harrington and J. J. McDermott, who moved to quash the evidence against the show troupe.

Incidentally, the revue packed up last night to move on to Milwaukee after enjoying the patronage of full houses since the raid, ordered by Acting Police Commissioner Alcock, started ticket sales soaring. After a week's stand in Milwaukee the show will return to take advantage of the generous publicity gained during the court trial.

"The state's witnesses have been unable to identify any one," they declared. "Miss Sigler said that she sat 200 feet from the stage, which would put her in the mayor's office. Miss Riley, the other censor, said she had viewed a million feet of moving pictures in two months. It would take her five years. She admitted she did not know whether Raphael's 'Fall of Adam' was a work of art or not. These warrants are based on the opinions of these people."

the judge that she could not remarry within one year.

Mrs. Sidley gave her age as 52 and said her husband was 50. They were married at Racine June 30, 1909.

Made Official of Company.

Dr. Sidley, who is a brother of W. P. Sidley, president of the Chicago Bar association, was a practicing physician in Denver, Colo., before his marriage to Mabelle Horlick. After the wedding he left his practice and moved to Racine, where he became an official in the Horlick organization.

It was in Racine, through the Horlicks, that Dr. Sidley met Bull, who had become acquainted with the Horlicks on an Atlantic liner. On one occasion Dr. Sidley invited the barrister to be a guest at his home over night. According to friends of the family, Bull visited at the Sidley home intermittently for six months thereafter.

The Sleuthing Starts.

When Dr. Sidley left his home he also left the Horlick organization, and it was shortly after that, he charged in his suit, that private operatives directed by Bull began shadowing him, trying to compromise him and sending reports to Bull.

Dr. Sidley after a while decided to cultivate the friendship of the detectives, feeling that it would be more comfortable to have them with him than always behind.

Finally, according to Dr. Sidley, his health broke under the strain and then he brought suit against Bull and J. J. Harrison, head of the Harrison detective agency, retained by the barrister.

The suit brought Bull into the limelight. Ten days ago federal narcotic agents raided his suite in the Drake hotel, detained Mrs. Sidley when she arrived next door at the Lake Shore Drive hotel and questioned them, with Dr. W. C. Wootton, Bull's friend, on suspicions—later said to be unfounded—that they were implicated in a dope smuggling plot.

Three separate groups of detectives were working on the case. Five days later Bull, with two companions, walked out of a Ted Newberry speakeasy in Walton place, engaged an automobile, and sped away from Chicago bound for Canada. It was in an accident on this trip that Bull was injured. Another of Bull's party who was injured in the auto crash is Bernard Magruder, an official of the Horlick company. His wife yesterday sailed for London.

Get Warning on Gunmen.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—The Toronto police force were warned today that three of Al Capone's gunmen were in town bent on killing W. Perkins Bull, who is in a hospital here as result of injuries incurred in an auto accident near Coldwater, Mich., on his way from Chicago.

An Italian known as "Billy the Blood" told S. Boyd Thompson, editor of a Toronto weekly, that the gunmen were in town. Soon afterward a chauffeur was reported to have told the police of a telephone conversation he had overheard between two gunmen, threatening that "Bull never would get far from the hospital unless he came across." The gunman was said to have remarked that "Bull had three warnings to pay up and ignored them."

DIVORCED BOSTON HEIRESS WEDS BARON IN ROME

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 21.—Paris friends of Countess Festetics de Tolna, the former Alice Wetherbee, Boston heiress, report her marriage in Rome today to Baron Szekessy de Sopron. Msgr. Giuseppe Candidori performed the ceremony in his private chapel. The baron and the baroness will return to Paris to live in March.

The marriage today is the culmination of a romance that began during the war when Capt. Szekessy, said to be a naturalized American, came to one of Countess de Tolna's parties in New York in 1917 in order to trail her husband, an Austrian nobleman under suspicion of being a spy.

Following their divorce in 1921, Count de Tolna sued Capt. Szekessy for $100,000 for alienation of affections. Capt. Szekessy for a time was employed as special aide to former Police Commissioner Richard E. Enright of New York. Count de Tolna is said to be employed as a riding master at a fashionable Long Island academy.

M'LEAN CALLED ON TO DEFEND SELF IN COURT

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Edward B. McLean, publisher of the Washington Post, was ordered today to show cause why he should not be held in contempt of the District of Columbia Supreme court for seeking a divorce in Mexico after being directed by the court to pay his wife $7,500 monthly.

The publisher was ordered to show cause why his estate should not be impounded and the income applied to the support of his family, and also why he should not be imprisoned.

Several weeks ago Justice Adkins ordered the monthly payments. On Feb. 4 Mr. McLean instituted divorce proceedings at Cuernavaca, Morelos, against his wife, Evelyn Walsh McLean, and she was required to answer by next Tuesday.

Michigan Student Cleared of a Holdup Charge

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 21.—[U.P.]—William L. Whalen, University of Michigan student from Pittsfield, Mass., was exonorated today of an armed robbery charge filed after police accused him of aiding in the holdup of a drug store of the campus. The charges were dismissed upon arraignment.

DRY LEADERS PARLEY TO UNITE RANKS FOR 1932

Plan Board of Strategy at Secret Meeting.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—(AP)—A dozen national dry leaders met secretly here today to work upon the constitution of a close knit organization, encompassing all the nation's dry organizations and dedicated to "the placing of dry planks in both political platforms in 1932."

This was disclosed tonight by one of the leaders at the meeting. All those at the gathering were members of the "board of strategy" appointed late last year by the national conference of organizations supporting the eighteenth amendment.

The proposed constitution of the new organization today was described as making room not only for the thirty-three organizations of the national conference, but for other dry groups and outstanding business and professional men not members of any organization.

At least one leader denied emphatically tonight that the meeting considered the choice of a dry "czar" to guide the work of the dry organizations in the coming presidential campaign.

Admit Lack of Capable Leader.

"No man capable of filling that rôle has yet loomed up," it was said.

"The present plan contemplates establishment of a mobile organization more along the lines of a board of directors, where a group will sit around a table to decide upon the policies to be followed."

Under the plan, it was said, none of the member bodies, such as the Anti-Saloon league, the W. C. T. U., or the Methodist Episcopal Board of Temperance would lose their identities, but all would coöperate in coördinating one central plan.

Work on the new constitution was described as virtually completed. The "board of strategy" will hold another meeting Monday to consider plans for the 1932 campaign.

Protest Reputed Raskob Plan.

Meanwhile dry Democrats were aroused by persistent reports that Chairman Raskob intended to bring up the prohibition issue at the March 5 meeting of the Democratic National committee. Party leaders in congress today hastened to send out notice that any such move would be opposed as out of order.

The antagonism to opening the prohibition issue at the March 5 session is not confined to the dry ranks alone. Some of the members of congress with wet inclinations are prepared to send word, also, to Raskob that they feel it would be a mistake to stir up this issue so far in advance of the presidential campaign.

Southern Democrats are taking the initiative in the protest against the prohibition commitment. They have the active support of Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader and vice presidential candidate with Alfred E. Smith in the 1928 presidential race.

It is their contention that the national committee is without authority to commit the party on issues, and that such authority rests solely with the national convention.

Southern Pines, N. They will be married in New York City March 31. Mrs. Child, who writes under the pen name of Maude Parker, was granted a divoce from Richard Washburn Child, ambassador to Italy from 1920 to 1923, in Paris in 1926. CHAMBERMAIDS UNDER 40 BARRED AS MORALITY AID

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUDAPEST, Feb. 21.—The Hungarian ministry of interior has sent a circular letter to all hotel and inn keepers of the country prohibiting them from employing girls or women under the age of forty as chambermaids. This drastic measure was taken to avert immorality.

Private and state detectives recently toured the whole country to investigate the morals of the chambermaids in the hotels. No hotel was spared in the investigation, the large as well as the smallest ones being closely watched.

The reports brought in by the detectives were shocking, hence the ruling of the ministry of interior. Heavy fines, even jails, await those owners who do not obey the order that chambermaids must be over forty.

ALL THE FACTS IN DRY LAW SURVEY, SENATE DEMANDS

uors, generally unfit for drinking, to a degree that is "ruining the family and social life," that more drinking is going on and "certainly there is much more alcohol being taken into the system," that women are being taught to drink and violate the laws, that drinking is increasing immorality, that the claim that workers are more prosperous now is a fallacy, that increased wages and not prohibition account for increased prosperity, that prohibition has been harmful, not beneficial, to the workers and their families, that violation is still on the increase and is already out of hand.

Iowa Has Wet Spots.

Iowa, a state with stringent local dry laws, was described by Frederick C. Desendorf, senior attorney of the prohibition bureau, as being, on the whole, fairly dry, but he found many wet spots and considerable evidence of violation.

The report quotes one witness: "The violators fix up stills in the fields of tall corn and they are hard to discover. There are not large liquor rings controlling the supply. It is everybody for himself."

"The chief of the state bureau of investigation and identification said that trafficking in liquor and drinking is not decreasing in that state and that drinking among young people in Iowa is worse than ever before since he has been in Iowa and since he has been connected with state service—16 years; that there are not many families that don't have some liquor in the homes, either whisky or home brew."

Michigan Violations Large.

In Michigan, where the survey was conduced by A. R. Brindley, senior attorney of the prohibition bureau, the records of the commissioner of pardons and paroles disclosed that violations of the liquor laws headed the list with a two year total last recorded of 1,512 or a gain of 174 or 13 per cent over the preceding two year period.

Among the testimony submitted were two pictures of conditions in Wisconsin as presented by Amos W. W. Woodcock, now director of the prohibition bureau, and Frank Buckley, senior attorney of the prohibition bureau, then under the treasury department.

Woodcock reported little drinking in the University of Wisconsin, quoting Dean Scott Goodnight as his authority for saying that there was less drinking now than in 1915. Buckley, on the other hand, quoted Dean Goodnight as saying that drinking, among both men and women students, was general. He visited the chapter house of his own fraternity, Delta Kappa Epsilon, to find the members trying to get two of their brothers up in time to go to morning classes after a night of imbibing, and he heard that two other brothers had had to leave the university because of ulcers of the stomach caused from moonshine liquor.

Buckley told a romantic tale of the "queen of the bootleggers, attractive young Italian girl, who caters exclusively to a fraternity clientele," while Woodcock strolled around the campus, and couldn't imagine the students doing much drinking. Buckley was told by the assistant dean of women that she knew of no revelry and drinking among the women students, but the skeptical investigator thought she was of the k' l who wouldn't be cognizant of such things anyhow. Dean Goodnight told him about wild drinking parties, Buckley reported.

WICKERSHAM BILL TIGHTENING PADLOCK IS PASSED BY HOUSE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Another Wickersham proposal to aid prohibition enforcement was approved today when the house passed the Christopherson bill to strengthen the padlock law.

The measure now goes to the senate. It was the last of the proposals submitted a year ago by the Wickersham commission to be given house sanction.

It permits the institution of proceedings by serving notice on absentee owners of property used for liquor law violation through publication. Under the existing law, federal authorities have to serve the individual personally. Many absentee property owners have thus avoided service.

HOLD THREE AS SLAYING SUSPECTS.

Three men were held by police yesterday for questioning in connection with the murder Friday of William Taraszkiewicz, 45 years old, who was beaten to death with baseball bats in his beer flat at 1037 North Ashland avenue.

DOOMED PAIR OF SLAYERS ARRIVE AT PRISON GATES

Bellefonte, Pa., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Their last journey at an end, Mrs. Irene Schroeder, 22, and W. Glenn Dague 34, convicted slayers who are to die Monday morning, arrived late today at Rockview prison, scene of Pennsylvania electrocutions. The trip, made by motor, was started from New Castle earlier in the day, with the couple under heavy guard.

The two, sentenced to pay the extreme penalty for the killing of Corporal Brady Paul of the highway police on Dec. 27, 1929, were taken at once to the death house, where quarters had been prepared for them. They will remain in cells near the execution chamber until summoned to begin the death march shortly before 7 o'clock Monday morning.

A gathering of the curious was present at the prison gates as the automobiles passed within.

RAIL COMBINE TO BRING INCREASES IN ELECTRIFYING

Roads to Extend Systems Out of New York.

New York, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Provided that the interstate commerce commission approves the proposed consolidation of the eastern railroads into four systems, several important railway electrification projects will be started almost immediately, it is reliably reported in railway circles here.

The density of traffic over several important railway lines entering the port of New York has reached a point, one important executive said, where electrification is not only warranted from an economical standpoint but is almost necessary in order to handle traffic properly. The comparatively low prices for steel and copper and the efficiency of labor, he asserted, were particularly favorable for such development at this time.

B. & O. Must Electrify.

The electrification project of the Pennsylvania railroad between New York and Washington, which, Gen. Atterbury, president, announced this week would be completed in two and a half years instead of four as originally allotted for it, will almost certainly result in the electrifying of the Reading-Jersey Central and Baltimore & Ohio lines between Washington and New York.

It is understood that the electrification of the Jersey Central between New York and Trenton has long been contemplated and has been only waiting for more settled conditions. Under the four system plan in the east recently agreed upon by the railway executives, the Baltimore and Ohio was assigned both the Jersey Central and the Reading.

May Electrify to Pittsburgh.

For some years the Pennsylvania Railroad has been contemplating electrifying its line over the Alleghany mountains between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. Owing to a desire to complete the electrification of its New York-Washington division, it is not likely that much headway will be made on electrifying its line between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh until this job is completed. The density of traffic at present over the Pittsburgh-Philadelphia division is not believed sufficient to warrant the starting of this development, but by the time the electrification of the New York-Washington line is completed, it is believed that traffic will have increased to a point where this development will not only be warranted, but probably necessary.

The Pennsylvania railroad, it is said, is electrifying its Washington-New York line for the purpose of economy. The management, it is understood, believes that traffic can be moved more efficiently and cheaper by electric power than by steam locomotives.

Central to Extend Electrification.

Another outstanding electrification project likely to be started in the near future will be that of the New York Central's main line from Harmon, just outside of New York City, through to Syracuse.

According to all available information, plans for this project were understood to be under consideration, and actual work will probably start shortly after the eastern consolidation plan is finally approved by the interstate commerce commission. It is estimated that the total cost of this job will approximate $150,000,000.

In addition, there is the probability that the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, which goes to the New York Central under the general consolidation, plan, will extend the electrification of its tracks from Dover, N. J., to Scranton, Pa., about 100 miles, and later from there to Buffalo, N. Y. It was early during the last few weeks that the Lackawanna completed the electrification of its line from Jersey City to Dover.

VOTE FOR LYLE.

The only contest in the Republican mayoralty primary is between William Hale Thompson and John H. Lyle.

Every vote cast for Arthur F. Albert is a vote for Thompson unless the voter, in the absence of Albert from the contest, would prefer Thompson to Lyle. The Albert vote is in theory an anti-Thompson vote. In fact, it is a pro-Thompson vote, since there is not the slightest reason for expecting Albert to win the nomination.

The citizen who wishes to make his vote immediately effective at the Republican primary has, therefore, a choice between Thompson and Lyle, and that choice only. Some citizens of repute have announced their preference for Albert because of that candidate's character and record. We do not quarrel with their judgment of Ald. Albert's character and record. We share it. But it is irrelevant, and if acted upon at the polls it is worse than irrelevant, it is mischievous, for that action will profit not Albert but Thompson.

The only choice before the Republican voter is between Thompson and Lyle, and it is a choice over which no citizen having any intelligent concern for his own or the city's welfare need hesitate.

The character and record in public life of William Hale Thompson need hardly be reviewed here. Twelve years of the worst misgovernment Chicago has suffered in her history speak for both. In THE TRIBUNE'S opinion, the reelection of Thompson to the mayoralty would be the worst civic disaster this or any other American city has ever encountered. It should be made impossible at the Republican primary.

As for Mayor Thompson's opponent, Judge Lyle, there has seldom been a candidate for the office of mayor who has had more substantial claims to the consideration of the voter. He has had in this campaign to face a campaign of unparalleled and unmerited personal slander, a campaign so vile as to be unprintable. From more respectable sources he has suffered a campaign of studied and largely irrelevant detraction. Neither should obscure his outstanding service to the community, nor the claims founded upon that service to the support of his fellow citizens.

Judge Lyle has served in the legislature and in the city council with approval from civic agencies concerned with the conduct of those bodies. But it was in the emergency which this community found itself in, and still is trying to cope with, through the power of crime and corrupt politics, that Judge Lyle has rendered his greatest service to Chicago. As a Municipal judge, and in spite of the narrow limits of that office, Judge Lyle made himself a leader of the forces of public defense. To recognize this is in no sense to disparage the splendid service of other citizens and officials, such as Chief Justice McGoorty, State's Attorney Swanson, Federal District Attorney Johnson, and other leaders in the war on crime and political corruption. It is merely to emphasize the truth of Judge Lyle's outstanding service and the weight of his claim to the law-abiding citizen's gratitude and support. The paramount issue before the people of Chicago today is crime; is the crushing of the alliance of organized criminality and corrupt politics, which, entrenched in public office or raiding from its coverts in the underworld, has imperiled law-abiding citizens and law-abiding business and dishonored the good name of the city before the world. Other problems the city has to solve, but they are entangled in this and overshadowed by it. This Judge Lyle has recognized and made the test of his action. In so doing he made himself the most formidable foe of the alliance, and it is using all of its resources to defeat him, resources of money, lavishly expended in this campaign and to be expended at the polls next Tuesday, and resources of widespreading political influence.

These forces can be defeated at the Republican primary by the nomination of Judge Lyle, and only by his nomination. It is for the law-abiding citizenship of this community, or such of it as may vote in the Republican primary, to insure that defeat.

THE JOY THAT FAILED.

Service in Argentina, the need of it having been publicly felt, took to what would be regarded up here as a method characteristic of the Latin approach to life. A lack of animation, of joy and mirth, was apparent, and public spirited citizens decided that something had to be done about it. Depression like black care had been riding the shoulders of the populace and despondency had gayety run up the alley.

It is a Yankee idea that when something is wrong the community can get hold of it and with a heave-ho dispose of it, but it has never occurred to the spirit of service here that it would be civic to be gay. That was the Latin touch. The American genius, although recognizing that the pursuit of happiness is an inalienable right of man, has always regarded service more seriously. Occasionally it can be organized with a smile, but its purposes are mainly the betterments.

The Argentinians endeavored to restore gayety by organized community effort, with four minute speakers, full page newspaper advertisements, with posters on the walls reading "We want to be happy" and with other exhortations to the people to be merry. Unfortunately the campaign failed. Buenos Aires remains glum. This is unfortunate. If it had succeeded there might have been some encouragement to try it here, opening the stock exchange with some snappy Gilbert and Sullivan choruses by the brokers, putting Ruth Page in charge of the mail carriers, and teaching Russian dancing to the traffic cops.

Service, it seems, must remain civic in other fashions and function only in connection with alley cleaning, garbage collection, parent-teacher associations, ice funds, and summer camps. It is rather a pity.

THE WASHINGTON OF REALITY.

Profits, curiosity, skepticism, and a responding interest in general readers combined several years ago to bring in a biographical era which is still going fairly strong. Its publishing requirements were condiments. The monumented characters of American history were examined for their imperfections, their less judicious moments, for the streaks of clay which might be in the sublimated matter. The zest of the business was in the upsetting of tradition. Characters which had been accepted as uniformly white were shaded off into other colors, and, turn about, the black ones were to be given their juster share of balanced composition.

A good deal of the work was not done by scholars and much of it was done with glee. Realism set out to run tradition down and it had considerable fun in doing so, shocking conventional ideas. By and large no real values suffered. Controversies arose and some temper was developed, but a market was created for some good scholarly writing which may be in debt now to the preliminary snappy journalism.

Washington was the greatest subject the new biographers could undertake. He had the most complete legend, the most consistent tradition. His virtues were transcendental and, conceivably, incredible. Realism would take him out of the steel engravings and make a man of him, understandable as such by Americans of today. But the marvel grew. The more Washington was made a man in the new biographical manner, the more clearly his virtues were perceived as transcendental. The closer the scrutiny of his character, of his acts and his times, of his associates and conditions, the more towering his moral nature appeared. A veritable demigod arose out of the processes which were to divest him of the supernatural attributes in which fond countrymen of a later period had dressed him.

In severe tests applied to minute details as well as to momentous occasions Washington appeared as the only possessor of all the qualities which could have made the revolution a success. His character was its only reserve when it had spent the first flush of its enthusiasm, and the more his character was tried in the ordeal by fire the whiter it emerged. The Washington all clothed in facts was an infinitely greater man than any myth could have been. The history of English speaking people has not produced his equal and probably never will.

SHORTENING THE SEA VOYAGE TO EUROPE.

The port of Brest in France aspires to take the place of present French channel ports as the first place of call for trans-Atlantic passenger traffic. There is much to be said for its claims. While it is farther by rail from Paris than the channel ports—a trip of ten hours, now to be shortened to eight—it is nearer by about a day by water and it is not so often fog bound. Thus the traveler from or to America is a shorter time at sea and avoids some of the possibilities of delay and even danger by staying out of the channel. Also the harbor of Brest is or may be made a better harbor than the present harbor of the channel ports, for which not much can be said.

This project suggests a similar shortening of the sea voyage on the American end. A leading American business man has urged the adoption of New London in place of New York as the American terminus of the trans-Atlantic trip. The arguments are somewhat similar to those for the choice of Brest. New London has a very good harbor or it can be made so by a little dredging. It is nearer Europe than New York and ships would not be so often slowed down and even held for hours by fog as they are in the narrow approach to New York. They would encounter less shipping than near New York and thus both danger and delay would be substantially lessened. New London also is situated satisfactorily as a point of departure or arrival by rail to and from New England and the west and convenient connections could easily be developed.

For years there has been talk of landing passengers at Montauk on Long Island in order to shorten the sea trip from Europe and avoid conditions at the New York terminus. But this has some objections which do not apply to New London, and they seem to have been sufficient to prevent the change. Of course, New York would like the New London project even less than Montauk, but, while New York is very influential, its self-interest ought not indefinitely to block at least serious consideration of New London's possibilities. To shorten the sea voyage to and from Europe has been the object of great effort and expenditure by the shipping interests. This seems to be one method of doing it which would involve less expenditure and would reduce the problems of safety. Passengers from the west and north who wish to stop over in New York could still do so conveniently from New London.

Editorial of the Day

LET IT SLUMBER.

[New York Sun.]

By a vote of 10 to 8 the senate foreign relations committee rejected a motion of Senator Walsh of Montana to reconsider its decision to postpone to the next regular session of congress consideration of the league of nations court protocol. This is taken as virtually assuring no consideration at the present session. If there should be a special session the protocol might be taken up at it; that is only one more reason for hoping an extra session may be avoided.

The longer the protocol slumbers in a pigeonhole of the foreign relations committee, the smaller grows its chance of approval by the senate. The Seventy-second congress will be more closely divided on political and economic question than is the Seventy-first; it will have enough domestic entanglements without flirting with foreign entanglements contrary to American political traditions.

PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITIES

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
Dean of Washington Correspondents and Head of The Tribune Bureau at the Capital.

[This is the second of a series of articles discussing the shaping of the national campaign for President to be held in 1932.]

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—When you are shown into the New York governor's office in the capitol up on the hill you find yourself face to face with a tragic yet inspiring figure. A countenance of classic mold etched deeply with the lines of suffering. But a chin and eyes proclaiming the indomitable will that has enabled Franklin Delano Roosevelt to conquer physical disability, to win the governorship of New York twice in a record smashing performance each time, and to become today, just turned 49, the leading candidate for the Democratic nomination for President in 1932.

Stricken ten years ago with infantile paralysis, Mr. Roosevelt was carried to the speakers' stand in Madison Square Garden in 1924 to present the name of Al Smith for nomination. In 1928, at Houston, he made his way painfully to the edge of the platform, walking, but leaning heavily on an attendant, to repeat, and this time successfully, his proposal of Mr. Smith for the party's candidate.

Today, thanks to a rigorous ten year regimen of exercise and therapy that would daunt a less determined person, Gov. Roosevelt walks unaided, though not without difficulty, which, however, is steadily lessening.

It is with twinkling eyes and a smile, lighting up in a flash that lined countenance, that the governor waves aside the reporter who would interview him as a presidential "prospect." He is not a candidate for President, he insists, and he will not be drawn into a discussion of national issues which would imply the remotest interest in a White House objective.

At the same time he does not conceal an honest pride in the two circumstances that, capping the climax of his qualifications, have made him the outstanding Democratic presidential possibility. One is his first election to the governorship in 1928 by a plurality of 25,000 when Al Smith for President lost New York by a margin of 103,000. The other is his reelection last November by the thundering plurality of 725,000, breaking all previous records, including the best showing the redoubtable Al ever made in his races for governor.

Thus, Gov. Roosevelt commends himself to his party as a candidate of unrivaled qualification for capturing the 47 electoral votes New York will have in 1932, which will be a powerful consideration in the Democratic national convention, not to mention the further circumstance that he will be sponsored by the 90 delegates from New York and how many more 'tis too early to guess. It already appears likely, however, that he will be the leading candidate in the early balloting and that if he is beaten it will be by the Democratic requirement that the nominee shall receive the votes of two-thirds of the convention.

Though refusing to discuss national issues, Gov. Roosevelt tells the interviewer he has not modified his stand on such national questions as one finds he has touched upon in his public utterances. As to prohibition, for example, he stands on his letter to Senator Robert F. Wagner [Dem., N. Y.], last September, in which he declared for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment and its replacement by another amendment, which, while outlawing the saloon, would allow regulation of the liquor traffic by state and local option.

The governor is one of those who at first favored prohibition, but eventually came to regard it as an iniquity instead of a blessing.

"The force and effect of the eighteenth amendment," he said in his letter to Senator Wagner, "can be eliminated, of course, only by a new constitutional amendment. This would supersede and abrogate the eighteenth amendment and substitute therefor a new constitutional provision. That is clear.

"The fundamental of a new amendment must be the restoration of real control over intoxicants to the several states. The sale of intoxicants through state agencies should be made lawful in any state of the Union where the people of that state desire it, and, conversely, the people of any state should have the right to prohibit the sale of intoxicants, if they so wish, within its own borders. This recognizes the undoubted fact that, in a nation of such wide extent and with such diversity of social conditions, public opinion and practical administration in regard to methods of seeking a greater temperance differ very greatly in different parts of the country, and even in different parts of the same state.

"There is no doubt that in many states the actual sale of intoxicants would continue to be prohibited at least by statute, whereas in many other states a reasonable sale of intoxicants through state agencies would, in the opinion of the great majority of citizens of these states, do much to bring about less intoxication, less corruption and bribery, and more regard and respect for law and order. This latter applies definitely to the state of New York.

"It is therefore clear to me that it must remain not only the right but the duty of the federal government to protect states which continue to prohibit the sale of intoxicants.

"Furthermore, I am positive in saying that there must be some definite assurance that by no possibility at any time or in any place the old saloon can come back. Therefore, the control of any sale of any intoxicants should be wholly in the hands of the states or of state agencies.

"Finally, there should be definite recognition of the extension of home rule to the lower subdivision of government; in other words, a recognition of the right of cities, villages, or towns by popular vote to prohibit the sale of intoxicants within their own borders, even though intoxicants may be sold in other parts of the state through state agencies.

"So widespread in this state is the resentment against the results of the eighteenth amendment that the time has come to stop talking and seek action."

Next to prohibition, the electric power issue bids fair to be a prominent one in the presidential election next year. Gov. Roosevelt advocates retention of public ownership of water power sites, public development of power at such sites, and public operation of such power plants, and proposes "that the electricity so generated be sold to distributors by contract, upon a basis to insure a fair and reasonable rate to the consumer, especially the household user."

Gov. Roosevelt's view of what he regards a fundamental solution of the farm problem is disclosed by a recent message to the New York legislature proposing a survey of the rural lands of the state to determine what production they are best suited for.

"Land which is suitable for the raising of crops on a profitable basis," said the governor, "should not be left idle or devoted to forest purposes, and, conversely, land which can be used only for tree planting should not be cultivated year after year in a futile effort to raise profitable crops thereon. The continued maintenance of farms on land which is not adapted to farming will be a drag on the social development of rural life. Such farms cannot support an American standard of living; as Americans, we cannot encourage a lower standard of living to continue on them. The social significance of readjusting our rural population, gradually but ultimately, to the end that only the good farm land be used for farming and the poor land be used for reforesting or other purposes should immediately arouse our attention."

At the instance of Gov. Roosevelt, New York has initiated a system of old age insurance, applying to persons 70 years old.

"Unemployment insurance," he also says, "we shall come to in this country just as certainly as we have come to workmen's compensation for industrial injury; just as certainly as we are today in the midst of a national wave of insurance against old age want."

REDUCING HARD WORK.

THE ordinary, every day fat man might as well become reconciled to his fat. At least, there is not much chance that he will do anything about it except talk. If he has pluck enough to pull his weight down the chances are strong that he has not the inclination to stick. There are very strong reasons for trying, even though the effort is not continued. That phase of the subject will be left for another story.

In 1923 the Metropolitan Life Insurance company became convinced they had too many fat people on the pay roll. This was not a guess, for they periodically examine their people and they had the story of the scales before them. They offered a course of weight reduction to their fat employés. The service of physicians and dietitians was offered.

About three hundred accepted the offer. The treatment consisted of regulation of diet, though a few required and were given thyroid. At the end of several months 81 per cent of those under treatment had lost weight. The average loss was 15 pounds. Twenty of the very heavy ones had lost 30 pounds or over apiece. At the end of the first year 224 of the group were still on the pay roll. Only a third of them had kept up the treatment and had continued to lose weight. These had lost an average of 14 pounds. A majority had gained weight. On an average, they had gained about 10 pounds, more than half the amount lost by the average person of the same group while on treatment.

At the end of five years the group were again examined. About 200 were still accessible. Of these, about one-fifth had continued to lose weight. The average loss of this group while under treatment was 10 pounds. The average loss during the five years following was 9 pounds. These people had learned how to control their weight by diet and they had continued to carry out what they had learned. The remaining four-fifths of the group had either forgotten what they had learned or else they had not had enough stick-to-it-iveness to carry it out.

The average loss of this group when under treatment was 16 pounds. But the average gain during the five years after treatment ended was 18 pounds.

This experience shows that only one fat person in five has enough self-control to carry out a weight reduction program and to stick to it for years. Fat people like what they eat, and in the quantities they eat it. The chances are four to one that any particular fat man prefers his food and his fat to a svelte figure and a diet that doesn't appeal to him.

THEY WILL DO NO HARM.

S. C. writes: I was wounded about a year ago with a shotgun on the right side of my chest. The local doctor took out all the buckshot he could, but I still feel quite a few pieces. Will this remaining buckshot come out in time? What would you advise me to do?

REPLY.

Do nothing. The shots will stay where they are probably, and they will do you no harm.

BRUSHING HELPS.

R. J. C. writes: I am getting bald in the front part of my head and I would like you to give me some information regarding the specialist I should see. I am only 20 years old.

REPLY.

Why see any? In the end, if your hair is saved, what you do will save it. Spend many minutes a day brushing your hair. Keep your scalp clean. Oil your hair if necessary.

PUSH YOUR OWN NOSE.

J. C. writes: I would like to have my nose made smaller. The only thing the matter with it is that it is pointy. If I push back on the pointy part is it O. K.? Is there a free clinic where I could have it done? Is this dangerous to do?

REPLY.

Do your own pushing. There is no danger.

STATUS OF EMPLOYE.

Chicago, Feb. 10.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I worked for a wholesale concern for seven months. Jan. 3 they laid me off, stating they had to cut down expenses. But they hired another man, I understand, a friend of a former employé who induced the boss to take him in my place. Can this concern be made to give me at least $10 a week for a period of time? Is there anything I can do? E. D.

Depends on whether the employment is by the week or by some other period. Illinois cases tend to hold that the wage payment interval is not conclusive on this point. If the employé is discharged without legal ground during one of the recurrent periods of the employment he is entitled to pay to the end of such period, although he can be discharged at the end of the period without notice.

Chicago, Feb. 10.—[Friend of the People.]—We have spent considerable time and money improving property at our address, but our neighbors persist in dumping all their refuse matter along the front of our property. Chicago, Feb. 10.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—"A" has a first mortgage on a piece of property. "B" has a second mortgage on the same property. "B" is going to foreclose. 1. Please advise if "A" will have to employ an attorney to protect his interest. 2. If not what must "A" do for protection? 3. If attorney is employed by "A" can his fees be charged to mortgagor? C. B.

1. Not unless he so desires.
2. If there has been default on the first mortgage, most parties would choose to foreclose.
3. Yes, on the paper commonly used in Cook county. We cannot advise to advantage without having your wording before us.

ON TRIAL AWAITING THE VERDICT

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 22, 1915.

LONDON.—The American steamer Evelyn, cotton laden and bound from New York to Bremen, struck a mine and sank off Borkum island in the North sea. The captain and twenty-seven members of the crew were saved. The Evelyn was the first American ship which has met with disaster as a result of the sea warfare of the European nations. It has not been established whether Germany or Great Britain was responsible for the loss of the Evelyn. The mine was not in the district which was declared a war zone in the decree of the German admiralty.

GRAYSON, Utah.—In a battle between a force of deputies under United States Marshal Aquila Nebeker of Salt Lake City, who sought to arrest Tse Na Gat, or Everett Hatch, the Indian outlaw, and a band of Piute Indians outside of Bluff, two redskins were killed, six taken prisoner, one white man lost his life, and two were wounded. A call for help has been sent to the Indian police at Ship Rock agency, N. M., to come to the aid of Bluff. The Indians surround the town and are keeping up a steady fire on the whites.

BERLIN.—German successes at the eastern and western ends of the Franco-Belgian battle line are reported. A trench was captured from the allies near Ypres, and in the Vosges several small towns were taken.

LONDON.—The Petrograd correspondent of the Daily Mail telegraphs: "The lightning blow which the Germans attempted in East Prussia has definitely failed. They scored a success in clearing their own territory and gained the upper hand in several minor engagements, but the effort to fall upon the Russians with staggering force missed its mark. They are not attacking, but are actually being attacked now. The German leaders have become cautious."

FEBRUARY 22, 1901.

PORT ELIZABETH.—President Steyn of the Orange Free State and Gen. De Wet have issued a proclamation charging the soldiers of Great Britain with every cruelty known in war and appealing to "the civilized world to assist, in behalf of our joint civilization and Christianity, in putting an end to the barbarous manner of the enemy's warfare." The proclamation in part charges that "the conditions of Geneva and The Hague are not observed by the enemy, who have not scrupled, contrary to the Geneva convention, to capture doctors and ambulances and deport them in order to prevent our wounded from getting medical assistance; that they have seized ambulance material; that they have sent out marauding bands to plunder, burn and damage burghers' private property; that they have been capturing and mistreating women and children and old and sickly men."

LONDON.—Maj. T. J. Atherton of the 12th royal lancers has begun a suit for divorce from his wife, Mabel L. Atherton, naming as co-respondent the duke of Westminster, whose marriage to Miss Sheiagh West took place recently. The parties to the suit are among the best known in London's inner society circles, the duke being the richest peer in England.

FEBRUARY 22, 1881.

LONDON.—Parnell, speaking at Clara, Kings county, denounced the government for introducing the coercion bill, and charged the ministers with trying to intimidate the nation and with deliberate conspiracy to prevent him from exercising his constitutional right of speaking in parliament. In case of threatened eviction he advised the neighboring tenants to plow up the land in order to prevent the landlord from grazing his cattle thereon. Yesterday notice was given in the house of commons that question would be asked today in the house as to whether Mr. Parnell's remarks might not be interpreted to mean incitement to tenants to perpetrate acts of violence, and whether Mr. Parnell ought not to be arrested in consequence.

LONDON.—It is said that the Porte has informed Germany and Austria of the maximum concession it is prepared to make. This includes the cession of the whole of Thessaly and a portion of Epirus, but the Porte refuses to cede Janina, Metsavo, or Prevesa.

WHY WOMEN LIVE LONGER.

Lombard, Ill., Feb. 7.—I see the scientists are discussing the greater longevity of women over men. It's strange they do not discover a greater difference than the 2½ years reported.

About 1897 some of my neighbors organized a literary club in a Chicago suburb. It consisted of about 60 members, all young married couples averaging 30 years old. Today almost all the men are deceased, only about 4 of the original 25 men remaining. The women are almost all now living, only 5 having died.

The reason is not hard to find. A man of say 50 becomes ailing. Does he stop work? He cannot. He is the support of 4 to 6 persons and must keep going. He is also probably spending $1,000 a year extra to keep some children in college. He gets no rest, so at about 50 or 60 he dies. His wife can rest any time she wishes [when indisposed] any time the previous 30 years, so is comparatively fresh. She goes to live with one of her married children and continues to rest when necessary.

The doctors say the man died of heart disease, kidney disease, etc., but the doctors are now finding out it is want of rest that is killing the men of 55 to 60 or 65. A working man keyed up to the responsibilities of business cannot throw off disease as can a man resting. The above were all "white collared" men—not day laborers.

OLD RESIDENT.

INCOME TAX PARADOX.

St. Joseph, Mich., Feb. 11.—F. E. F.'s income tax paradox is not as paradoxical as he would have us think. As a matter of fact, he has made an error in his computation of tax in the example given so that the tax law would seem unfair.

If two single men, each with a salary of $2,500, are considered, both having no exemptions or deductions but one having an independent income of $2,500 from corporation bonds in addition to his salary, the latter will pay the greater tax by far. The one with the total income of $2,500 will pay $11.25, as computed by F. E. F. However, the man with the total income of $5,000 will pay a tax of $39.37 as compared with the $1.87 computed by F. E. F. The difference of $37.50 between my computation and F. E. F.'s is the result of the 1½ per cent tax on the $2,500 interest income, which is not exempt. Where F. E. F. obtained the figure $1.87 is not apparent. MILTON J. DRAKE.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—President Hoover's Lincoln speech would impress us more if it would propose to restrict the federal power not only while giving but also while taking. Or is it again, yes and no? FRANK E. RODER.

PROFIT SHARING.

Chicago, Feb. 10.—It seems to me that the entire problem of wages is approached from the wrong angle. The employer wrangles because he has to meet severe competition and every increase in wages is an added disadvantage. He has a heavy fixed charge to meet every week or month, and he must keep up his sales or lose out. The employé wrangles because under present conditions that is the only way he can better his condition. The worker with a steady job and an assured income is worse off than his employer in times of high prosperity and in times of depression he is "on top of the world" because he still gets that amount while others are starving and his employer is borrowing money to pay him.

Capital and labor could agree on some form of profit sharing, such as a reduction of the wage scale to about half and a sharing of the profits after proper deductions had been made for depreciation, insurance, taxes, and the like. A division of something like 25 or 40 per cent of the remainder among the employés, according to their income for the period, preferably a period of a month, would follow. This would give the worker an incentive to increase his efficiency in order to increase his income; it would obviate to a certain extent the disastrous layoffs that derange business, and would facilitate the introduction of hours of labor and the laying by of reserves for unemployment as it would reduce the heavy burden of fixed charges that the employer must carry. It would promote a better relationship between the owner and his workers. It would guarantee the worker food and shelter during periods of depression, and would obviate to a large extent the necessity for the employer going to the bank to tide himself over the dull period, for his fixed charges would not be so high.

I know positively that it would reduce waste of time and materials and would promote efficiency to that extent at least. I am now a worker and know whereof I speak. I have also been an employer on a tiny scale, and I employed the principle to advantage. H. F. M.

GENEALOGY FOR CHICAGOANS.

Elgin, Ill., Feb. 13.—It has just occurred to me that THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE might have a genealogical column. The Newberry library claims to have a genealogical department that at least rivals Boston's famous institution, the library of the New England Historical and Genealogical society, and it serves its patrons well, but an exchange column in some widely read newspaper would perform a service of its own. NORTHWESTERN U LAUNCHES NEW LAW SCHOOL PLAN dy Social Control by Human Results.

"Law is not the letter, the word, or the book, any more than the power we call electricity is the button, the wiring, or the appliances through which such power is made available for use.

"Law is the expression of acceptable human judgment on the matter in hand and not some abstract principle good for all time.

"Law in operation is government."

—From a statement by Dean Leon Green of Northwestern university law school.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Around the cloister of Northwestern university law school, a quiet, grass bordered, flag paved court which has become in a few years one of the world's centers of legal thought, a silent revolution in the theory and practice of law teaching has been taking place.

It is a change as radical in its field as that in general education which has been started at the University of Chicago, one with the same aim, but with a different method. Its aim is to put the teaching of law in line with the new physics and modern medicine, to turn out "dependable judgment passing instrumentalities in the form of lawyers," just as an automobile factory turns out a dependable mechanical device.

Study Human Effects.

Deeper than this is its hope of effecting a more scientific control of society, in new administrative and legislative action, its work with society in the great laboratory of Chicago, its view of the law as a power which must be judged by its working results, its human effects. It cuts across all the social sciences, into philosophy, psychology, and history, and amounts to a new study of the problem of life itself.

President Walter Dill Scott announced the new law school program yesterday and Dean Green explained the hopes and purposes behind it.

Four major steps in legal education have been put into operation. These are:

1. Coördinating formal classroom training with highly individualized training.

2. Alliance of the cloister and the field laboratory of metropolitan Chicago, through the teachers who take this as part of their work.

3. Fostering of a large group of publications.

4. A new teaching technic showing how and why the law and judicial process reacts upon society.

Expand Physical Facilities.

"It is believed," said President Scott, "that the intellectual program under way is not surpassed in comprehensiveness, in articulate terms of objectives, in significance to legal education in particular and science of government at large, by any law school program now in process of execution."

Within the next two or three years the law plant on the lake front, consisting of Levy Mayer hall and cloister and the Elbert H. Gary library, will be completed with library additions and student housing, making it one of the most beautiful and adequate institutions in the country.

One of the devices to get rid of the deadening routine of formal classroom work is the adoption of a curriculum designed to give about two years of intensive formal class work, to be followed by a period of one or two years during which a program will be worked out for the special needs of each of the students. A realignment of teaching materials over the whole curriculum has been worked out. The prime function of the teachers with advanced students is to train the individual. From doctrine the way is led into the actual problems which are troubling business and governments.

Use City as Laboratory.

Unlike the University of Chicago, which is basing its student progress on comprehensive examinations, the law school program makes general examinations needless. The bar examination is enough, they think.

"For school purposes," it is stated, "the student will be under constant examination by a group of teachers whose judgment as to his worth is based upon close association and close acquaintance with his work."

In the teaching program it is stated: "This school first of all has taken the Chicago metropolitan area as its laboratory into which to pour the energies of its highly trained experts, and through the study of its problems to train students who will gain an understanding of the problems with which they are to deal later as lawyers and citizens.

Study Law as Social Power.

"In the field of criminal law administration the school has four experienced members of its staff giving their exclusive time to the study of problems in this field and working with the criminal law agencies of Chicago. They have at their command the best equipped and staffed scientific crime detection laboratory in the country, the rich records of the Chicago crime commission, and the legal clinic of the Raymond foundation."

The same method is pursued in law administration, business, industry, and in public law. The alliance of the school with government and business for the purpose of training men in the science of law is regarded as a step of unlimited possibilities. It is, however, in making the study of law a study of the power of society as made effective through courts and other agencies that this program touches human affairs most closely. In commenting on this work Dean Green said:

"The science of law is about where medicine was 40 years ago, before the schools began to operate with clinics and hospitals. Legal education is as yet little more than a name. The legal profession has failed adequately to articulate its function in society. The layman's notion of law demands a complete revision.

A Disciplined Judgment.

"Law is the power that men in society generate and employ to order and control their affairs. It is made available through men as officials of government, as well as through citizens known as lawyers. In the last analysis the lawyer has to pass judgment on all human action. Law is not the crisp rules or improvised generalizations found in books. It is the experienced judgment of men who have disciplined themselves to deal with the power of society in adjusting the details of every day life.

"The only effective teaching about law is through an examination in the utmost detail of how governmental machinery, whether it be the judicial process, the legislative process, or executive process, handles the affairs of men submitted to it; and not only what machinery is employed, but why disposition is made one way or another. Such an examination of the processes of law requires an equally thorough examination of the subject matters upon which they operate, whether those of leisure or otherwise.

"To sustain such an hypothesis as a basis for training law students, our school is developing an institutional process which we hope to be as thorough for its purposes as an automobile factory is for producing automobiles."

LOGAN GRIDLEY, CHICAGO BROKER, KILLED BY TRAIN

Struck While Taking a Walk Near Geneva.

Logan A. Gridley, Chicago investment broker, who maintained a home and prize stock farm near Geneva, was struck and killed yesterday morning by a milk train on the North Western railway a quarter mile west of Geneva while taking a walk. He was 47 years old.

Gridley had been prominent in civic and banking circles for a number of years and at one time was reputed to have been worth more than a million dollars. Two months ago he suffered a nervous breakdown and spent a month in Arizona for his health. Since his return a few weeks ago he had been under the care of physicians.

Takes Daily Walk.

A daily walk through the countryside was one of the physicians' prescriptions. Ordinarily accompanied by an attendant, Mr. Gridley yesterday insisted he was well enough to walk alone. First indication of his death came when the train crew arrived in Geneva and found a coat tangled in the trucks of one of the cars. His body was found by a searching crew under Reuben Anderson, Geneva police chief.

Gridley had been prominent in Chicago investment banking affairs for a number of years. After being associated with E. H. Rollins & Sons, investment brokers, 231 South La Salle street, he became vice president of the Chicago Investment Securities corporation at the same address. After ten years' connection with this concern, he supervised the consolidation with the Continental corporation last December. Since that time he has served as vice president of the new concern, the Continental-Chicago corporation.

Widow and Sister Survive.

His widow, Emily Richards Gridley, is a daughter of R. C. Richards, for many years general claim agent of the C. & N. W. railway. He is also survived by a half sister, Mrs. Irene Hyde of Geneva.

Mr. Gridley was a member of the following clubs: Chicago, University, Mid Day, Attic, Electric, Chicago Golf, and Geneva Golf clubs. He was a graduate of the University of Chicago.

Funeral services will be held privately from the home, Peck road and Jeffie street, Geneva, tomorrow afternoon. Interment will be in Oak Hill cemetery.

A coroner's jury under Deputy Coroner W. A. Keiser in the afternoon decided that Mr. Gridley came to his death while walking on the right of way near Golf Club crossing, west of Geneva.

ALARM TELLS FIREMEN THEIR FRIEND IS DEAD

An obituary notice was clicked out over the fire alarm telegraph system last night. Robert F. Delaware, fire fan and friend of hundreds of men in the department, died at the Jackson Park hospital after an illness of two weeks.

Mr. Delaware was 43 years old, sales manager of a brass castings company, and had been following fire engines for twenty years. He is survived by a widow and two children.

In his bedroom at his home, 7846 Euclid avenue, Mr. Delaware had a fire alarm set, and he seldom missed a big blaze. On cold nights it was his custom to bring the firemen coffee from the nearest restaurant.

With the family at the death bed was Chief Horace McLean, battalion marshal of the Hyde Park district. After Delaware died Chief McLean stepped to the telephone and dialed "Fire 1313."

"Notify the boys that Bob Delaware has answered his last alarm," the chief said, and within a few minutes firemen in stations all over the city heard the message.

Hursen Funerals in Every Neighborhood

HURSEN Funerals are being conducted constantly in every nook and corner of Chicago. They are seen constantly, also, in all the suburbs—north, south and west.

A situation such as this is unusual in this country. Hursen's has always been unusual. Years ago Hursen revolutionized the methods of funeral technique. Service, environment, manner, personnel, automobile equipment, and above all, price, were all revolutionized.

Hursen Chapels are today recognized as the finest institutions of the kind in this country. The North Side Chapel particularly is a masterpiece of beauty, massiveness, facilities and arrangements. It has recently been remodeled. The South Side and West Side Chapels are palaces, convenient for the smallest or the largest funerals.

All Hursen automobile equipment, the finest things on wheels, was built for Hursen along Hursen special designs. Yet, the charge is no greater than for equipment far less desirable.

There is no charge for the use of any of the three Hursen Chapels, each equipped with organs of unmatchable tone and size. The charges for Hursen funerals are less than the charges usually made elsewhere. So, call Hursen, of course!

RUPTURE

Don't submit to avoidable operations or the use of antiquated trusses, as they all set where the lump is and not where the opening is. The opening is seldom larger than a dime no matter the size of the rupture, and all cases can be retained with the point of a lead pencil. The Spermadic Shield-Complex in combination with the Retainer-Simplex (Patent No. 747247, No. 1237700 and other patents pending)—a scientific achievement in a highly specialized art. It will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, but contracts the opening in 10 days on the average case, infinitely superior to any instrument method of operations and producing results in no other way obtainable. It costs no more for a lifetime as against further trouble or expense. Large or difficult cases or incidental rupture (following operations) specially solicited. The Instrument received the only award in Rupture and in Spasm, producing results without surgery. Injection, medical treatment or prescriptions with distinguished personal patrons of all nations. See Booklet on "The Fallacy of Surgical Procedure."

JURY FINDS SALE OF 'HOME BREW' SUPPLIES LEGAL

U. S. Loses in Test Case; To Drop Chicago Suit.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 21.—(AP)—The federal government lost today a test case hinging on its right to confiscate supplies of hops, malt sirup, and other materials which can be used in making home brewed beer.

A jury in the court of Judge F. A. Geiger said "no" to a libel action to destroy $50,000 worth of brewing materials confiscated in a raid on the National Beverage Distributing company last May.

Shortly after the verdict, however, Norman J. Morrison, Washington, special government prosecutor, asked the court for a certificate of "probable cause." It was granted.

U. S. May Have to Pay Damages.

A. H. Sawyer, defense counsel, explained this certifies the court's belief that there was probable cause for the agents to believe the law was being violated and there were grounds for a raid. In case of an appeal for the government to pay the losses caused by deterioration, he said, the government might use the certificate. Losses were chiefly in the damage to ten tons of hops seized in the raid, he said.

The trial lasted four days. Counsel contested, chiefly, intent in the sale of the materials and the store's alleged knowledge of the purchaser's intended uses. The case was given to the jury late yesterday.

Chicago Case Won't Be Tried.

Jury Foreman B. F. Nield, Racine, said the jury took eight ballots. It deliberated six hours and 15 minutes. Judge Geiger had advised the jury it might give the government complete control of the stock, split it according to portions used or intended for illegal purposes, or find as it did.

A similar case is pending against another store catering to home manufacturers of beverages. Raids on the two stores followed a similar raid by E. C. Yellowley, Chicago, federal prohibition administrator for this area. Mr. Morrison will examine the record in the other Milwaukee case, to see if there are new points that might be brought up before asking its dismissal. The Chicago case is still pending and federal officers said no effort will be made to bring it to trial.

ATHEISTS ASK A 'BLAME DAY' FOR U. S. ILLS

New York, Feb. 21.—(AP)—The American Association for Advancement of Atheism suggested today a "blame-giving day" be set aside if President Hoover persists in the old fashioned custom of proclaiming Thanksgiving day.

The association adopted a resolution contending that "the American people have little to be thankful for," what with the drought and unemployment.

The atheists also decided to set up a booth at the Chicago World's Fair in 1933.

Their first annual convention will continue through tomorrow.

BENDIX GIVES A PARTY DE LUXE AT PALM BEACH

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—The winter colony turned out in force tonight at the large dinner dance given at the Embassy club by Vincent Bendix of Chicago and his house guest, Caleb S. Bragg of New York.

More than 350 guests witnessed two exhibition boxing bouts, one featuring the Italian giant, Primo Carnera, and the second Maxie Rosenbaum, light heavyweight champion of the world. A card of five other bouts, refereed by Lou Magnolia, preceded the exhibition bouts. Phil Baker, the Broadway comedian, acted as master of ceremonies.

The boxing bouts were held at 10:30 o'clock in a ring erected in the center of the beautiful patio of the Embassy club, around which the dinner tables were placed. While the ring was being removed and patio prepared for dancing there was a spirited program by the American Legion Drug and Bugle corps.

Every person of importance socially, financially and artistically in Palm Beach, Miami, and other Florida resort centers attended tonight's party. Among those present were Mr. I. Newton Perry, Mr. Howard F. Gillette, and Dr. E. W. White of Chicago, who are house guests of Mr. Bendix.

Shot Two Bandits

The Lambert Tree medal, awarded annually for the greatest bravery shown by a Chicago policeman, was yesterday awarded to Sergt. Herman Meyer, who shot and wounded two bandits, one of them fatally, on Feb. 8, 1930, as he sat between them when they tried to kidnap him in his own automobile.

A committee, headed by Deputy Commissioner James Scanlan, met yesterday to consider the names of two other policemen who were tied for the honor after a preliminary consideration of a list of 28 members of the force. The other two contestants for the honor were Policemen Edward Tyrell and Edward Lynn.

EDGE DENOUNCES EUROPEANS WHO "SNEER" AT U. S.

American Envoy Defends Our Standards.

PARIS, Feb. 21.—[U.P.]—An attack on European critics who have charged the United States with "standardization" of its citizens was made tonight by American Ambassador Walter E. Edge, addressing guests at the George Washington banquet of the American club.

Describing Washington as "part Puritan and part cavalier," the ambassador told some 400 Americans, a representative of the British embassy, and the president of the Paris municipal council, Comte Jean de Castellane, that a spirit of common sense still dominated the United States.

Denounces European Critics.

"I denounce as an absurd fallacy the European criticism that Americans are standardized or that we wish the standardization of others," Mr. Edge said. "Take the educational field, for example. Where in the wide world is there a greater individual freedom and a less rigid curriculum than in our universities?

"What some persons criticize us for is not an American failing but a world-wide error. Contrary to efforts of detractors to picture American civilization as a mad scramble for material success, our spirit of calm common sense is still dominant.

"It is highly commendable for our friends to study us against a background of skyscrapers, but they must not forget that we still have a big Mount Vernon background."

Raps Critics of Paris.

Another American, Theodore Rousseau, vice president of the club, defended Paris against the criticism of some Americans.

After describing the "grotesque blunder" which King George III. of England made when he alienated the American colonies and prevented possible present day influence of the British empire, were the United States still a part of it, Rousseau said:

"Those American Pecksniffs who describe Paris as a modern Babylon and roll their eyes at its wickedness, really are possessed with a virulent, jealous hypocrisy.

Maybe They're Too Old.

"Either they have no soul for joy or are too old to comprehend the beauty and delights of Paris. There is less license here than anywhere else in the world."

Lord Tyrrell, the British ambassador, had accepted an invitation to attend the annual banquet in honor of George Washington's birthday, but at the last moment was forced to remain away because of an attack of indigestion and grippe. His message was read by the British embassy counselor.

Barnett, loop jeweler, who shot himself to death on Feb. 16 while in the vault of the Congress Trust and Savings bank, 510 South Wabash avenue, left an estate of $250,000 it was revealed yesterday when his will was filed with Mitchell C. Robin, clerk of the Probate court. Mrs. Myra Barnett, 5056 Woodlawn avenue, the widow, is made sole beneficiary by the will. Mr. Barnett, who was president of Barnett, Inc., jewelers at 240 South Michigan avenue, is also survived by a son, Philip Jr., 5 years old.

FOUR IN YOCUM KIDNAPING CASE TO GO ON TRIAL

Galva, Ill., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Orville Whisker, sought since Oct. 30 as the ringleader of four farmers who kidnaped Earl L. Yocum, millionaire Galva banker, today was returned from Spencer, Ia., by Deputy Sheriff Charles Nash.

The four men were indicted by the November grand jury and go on trial in the Henry county Circuit court at Cambridge Monday. The other three—Harry Whisker, who was arrested before the banker was released; Gilbert Algren, who is said to have confessed the plot, and Lloyd Winslow, captured in Detroit—are in jail, being unable to furnish $15,000 bonds. Four others are out on bail charged with helping Whisker and Winslow escape.

Rumors persist that the three in jail have decided to plead guilty to a charge of kidnaping, if allowed to do so by the court, but would fight a charge of kidnaping for ransom. Punishment for kidnaping is imprisonment of not less than one year and not to exceed five, while the death penalty is possible on a charge of kidnaping for ransom.

HEARING IS HELD ON BILLS FOR TAX BODIES' REFORM

Curb on Reviewers Called Inadequate.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

The Schnackenberg bills to revise the taxing machinery of Cook county yesterday ran into widely divergent views on the merits of an appointive versus an elective system. At an all day hearing held in the county building by the house revenue subcommittee, representatives of some leading civic organizations favored the scrapping of the present assessing agencies and the substitution of something modern and simple. Supporters of the 30 township assessors in the country towns came to the defense of the town assessors and their jobs. The hearing will be resumed on March 7.

Two house bills, Nos. 26 and 27, were under consideration. They provide for the abolition of the board of assessors and the township assessors and the substitution of an assessor appointed by the president of the county board. They retain the board of review, under new restrictions and control.

Call Bills Inadequate.

The first witnesses, Attorney Max Nurdock, representing the Chicago Association of Commerce, and George O. Fairweather of the joint commission on real estate valuation, held the bills did not go far enough.

"A complete collapse of our public finance would have occurred in 1929 but for one thing," said Attorney Nurdock. "The 1928 reassessment was an artificial restorative—a shot in the arm.

"Sinecurists are no longer in order. A cure must be found. The board of assessors must go. The board of review must go.

"The small army of local township assessors must go. In their place we must have a single county assessor who shall be openly responsible for a just assessment and whose concern must be to acquit himself of that responsibility and not to carry an election. We must have a form of review which shall openly hear complaints on their merits and shall not destroy the assessment."

Reviewers Are Targets.

Mr. Fairweather remarked that the board of review has simply been setting up a duplicate assessment list.

"We'll have no better results," he said, "until you put the man who makes the original assessment right in the middle of the jam to defend his assessment when reviewed."

Lester L. Falk submitted a resolution of the public affairs committee of the Union League club urging the abolition of the boards of review and assessors and the 30 town assessors and the substitution of an appointive assessor and a small appointive board of review of which the assessor should be a member. The idea was that embodied in bill No. 28, which was tabled in committee at Springfield.

Attacks Appointive System.

In the afternoon session, friends of the township assessors had their innings. Axel Lonnquist of Wilmette, who ran for county commissioner in November, ripped into appointive bodies.

"I have an opinion on a bill going from an elective to a feudal system of appointment," said Mr. Lonnquist. "The curse today of our taxes is the special assessment which emanates from the board of local improvements, which is an appointive body.

"Perpetrate upon us an appointive official of that type and we'll all go out of business. The greatest beneficiaries of the scientific reassessment are the biggest tax dodgers in the community."

G. A. Stevenson of the chamber of commerce of Harvey caused a stir by remarking that Harry Cutmore, chief of the scientific reappraisal, told him some of his experts worked in the back rooms of saloons.

"Cutmore told me," said Mr. Stevenson, "he couldn't understand why a man could sit in the rear of saloons and make assessments."

Questioned by Legislator.

"That's a startling thing to say," said Representative T. J. O'Brien [Dem.]. "Do you realize its implications?"

"That's what Cutmore told me," repeated Mr. Stevenson.

"I didn't think there were any saloons in Chicago," said Mr. O'Brien. "This certainly is a revelation that's going to shock some drys. Who's to blame for all this muddle, anyway?"

"The governor of this state," rejoined Mr. Stevenson. "I'm a Republican. I say the governor is the only man who could pull Mr. Malone off. But like Pilate, he just washed his hands of it."

Representing the Cook County League of Women Voters, Mrs. W. W. Ramsey said the league favored bill No. 28, abolishing all the present machinery, including the board of review. Mrs. Laura Lunde of the Woman's City club also reported that the club also favors this bill.

George Harbaugh of Wilmette, who has been assessor of New Trier township since 1916, declared the towns want local assessors.

Among other speakers were Walter Saunders of La Grange, representing the Western Gateway association, and Walter F. Walkowiak of the Affiliated Country Towns association.

Margaret Haley of the Chicago Teachers' federation defended the Cutmore scientific reappraisal, and charged that the board of review is ignoring the property record cards and the valuation data.

Other members of the Schnackenberg subcommittee are M. F. Hennebry [Dem.], Wilmington; Leo D. Crowley [Rep.], Peoria, and David I. Swanson [Rep.], and James T. Boyle [Dem.], Chicago.

TAX RATES COMPARED

Chicago's tax rate is considerably higher than that of other large American cities, according to statistics for the other centers. Chicago's rate varies in different sections of the city, but for the township of North Chicago, immediately north of the river, the rate is $5.31 per $100 assessed valuation.

The New York basic rate is $2.57 for each $100 assessed valuation. The widely varying practices in assessments make accurate comparison difficult, but the information received from other cities may give a rough comparison.

Because of the delay in the appraisal of all real estate in Cook county, the tax rate of $5.31 is for the year of 1928, while New York's figure is for 1931. Chicago's rate for 1929, which taxes are payable April 1, will be 20 per cent higher than the 1928 rate.

Philadelphia's 1931 rate is $2.77, the same as for 1930.

Baltimore's rate will be $2.45 for 1931, or 10 cents higher than for 1930.

In Pittsburgh the rate is $1.25 per $100 on buildings and $2.55 per $100 on land.

Cleveland rate is $2.73½, an increase of 11½ cents over 1930.

The Cincinnati 1931 rate is $2.26, as compared with $3.21 for 1930.

SON PLEADS TO DIE IN ELECTRIC CHAIR IN FATHER'S STEAD

Tallahassee, Fla., Feb. 21.—(AP)—The son of a man condemned to death for murder appealed to Gov. Carlton today to let him die in the electric chair at the Florida state penitentiary instead of his father.

Claude Laramore, an employé at the state hospital for the insane at Chattahoochee, made the strange request in a letter to the governor. The executive was not at the capital today, however, and office attachés doubted the appeal would come to his attention before Monday.

J. Webb Laramore, a farmer and former deputy sheriff, was sentenced to death last Wednesday for killing Leslie Harrell and Alex Porter, youths of his community.

Claude's letter to the governor read: "I am asking you to let me take my dear daddy's place in the electric chair. The others in our family need father and I will gladly go for his sake."

AMES, COMMERCE PUBLISHER, BUYS CHICAGO POST

The Chicago Evening Post, published by John C. Shaffer for thirty years, was sold at auction in Federal Judge Woodward's court yesterday to K. L. Ames Jr., publisher of the Chicago Journal of Commerce, for $132,000.

Hearst's Evening American made the only other bid and no statement as to its amount was made. The successful bid of Mr. Ames was approved by the court on recommendation of George F. Getz, receiver in bankruptcy. Proceeds from the sale, Mr. Getz said, will be applied to the claims of creditors.

A new corporation, the Chicago Post Publishing company, was formed for the taking over of the newspaper, with Mr. Ames as president; his brother, John D. Ames, vice president and secretary, and E. E. Suffern, vice president and treasurer.

The purchaser, who is only 37 years old, announced that he would continue publication of the Post as an afternoon newspaper "in the same building as the Journal of Commerce." He said it had not been determined whether both papers would be published in the Journal of Commerce or the Post building.

The terms of the purchase do not include the lease with the separate corporation owning the Post building, nor the presses used by the Post, which are owned by the building corporation.

The assets acquired by the new publisher include physical properties, appraised at $73,395, an Associated Press franchise and membership in several other newsgathering organizations, and good will.

Sues Crowe for $100,000 in 42d Ward Campaign

Charles F. Henry, Republican candidate for alderman in the 42d ward, yesterday filed the praecipe of a suit for $100,000 damages in the Circuit court against Ald. Dorsey R. Crowe [42d], who is seeking reelection. Attorney Lucius Winchester, representing Henry, said the action is for slander and is based on "an infamous and unwarranted attack which has been made in a whispering campaign."

Paroled Convict Identified as Mundelein Bank Robber

Frank Dzan, 1443 Elburn avenue, a paroled convict, was identified yesterday as one of the gang of robbers who on Dec. 4 held up the State Bank of Mundelein. He was arrested on Friday night by Detective Roy Steffens of the racket division of the state's attorney's office. Dzan was taken into custody as he was making his monthly report to the parole headquarters. He is reported to have been identified by two officials of the bank.

EMMERSON BIDS FOR WEST POINT FOR THIS STATE

Illinois Would Give Suitable Site, He Says.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Illinois, through Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, put in its bid today for selection as the home state of the United States Military academy, or a branch of that institution, in event the existing establishment is retained at West Point.

In a telegram to John J. McSwain [Dem., S. C.], Gov. Emmerson called attention to the latter's bill authorizing the relocation of the military academy and urged that Illinois be given consideration if any new institution is set up in another state. An ample and suitable site could be obtained, Gov. Emmerson said, if arrangements should be made to establish any part of the military academy in that state.

Asks for Offers.

The McSwain bill directs the secretary of state to invite states, counties, towns or other political subdivisions of states to submit inducements, such as lands or money, for the relocation of the United States Military academy, or of a branch or coördinate section thereof. Difficulties met by the war department in securing land for necessary expansion of the government's facilities at West Point are responsible, in part, for the McSwain bill.

Illinois "Interested."

Gov. Emmerson telegraphed that the people of Illinois were intensely interested in securing the military academy or any branch of it, for their state. He asked for information as to how state officials could further any plan to bring the military academy to Illinois.

Representative McSwain suggested, in a telegraphed reply, that Gov. Emmerson take the matter up at once with Illinois' representatives in congress.

Thousands of Storks Killed in African Storm

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Feb. 21.—Thousands of storks, assembled at the foothills of Cathkin Peak, Natal, prior to migrating to Europe, were killed in a violent hailstorm today. One eyewitness says that storks were piled on top of each other over an area of three-quarters of a mile long and 100 yards wide.

LOSES ON STOCK MARKET; SUES HER BROKER; WINS

London Firm Forced to Make Restitution.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 21.—A revolutionary precedent that brokers are liable for losses suffered by clients investing on their advice has just been established by a jury in the king's bench divisional court. The verdict awarded damages and costs to an investor claiming restitution on the ground that the firm was responsible through the advice of an agent for her loss.

The plaintiff was Lady Theodora Davidson, daughter of the seventh earl of Albermarle, who brought action against the brokerage firm of Schwab & Snelling for $2,900 alleged to have been received on her behalf. Alternatively, she claimed the same amount for alleged breach of contract.

The case was heard by Justice Horridge and a special jury, which rendered judgment for Lady Theodora for $1,585, the agreed amount of the damages, with costs.

Bought Shares Through Agent.

The plaintiff testified that she acted on the advice of Capt. Seeley, a commission man for the brokerage firm, and through him bought shares in the Decca Gramophone company and the Continental Waste Food Products company. She claimed she suffered loss on the stock, and sued for restitution on the contention that Capt. Seeley acted as agent for the company.

The brokers denied that Capt. Seeley possessed authority to give advice to any client, but N. G. F. Snelling, a partner in the firm, admitted on cross-examination that it would be difficult to get orders without giving advice, and that business brought in by Capt. Seeley was accepted.

The jury found that in giving advice to the plaintiff Capt. Seeley acted as agent for the defendants, and that he was introduced by the brokers as their representative.

Decision Shocks Finance Circles.

The decision caused consternation in financial circles here, and an appeal to a higher court is expected. A decision holding brokers responsible for clients' losses without giving them a share in profits "is obviously a one sided arrangement," the Daily Telegraph says editorially.

"The verdict raises issues of high interests and importance not only for the stock exchange but for the investing public," the editorial continues. "If stock brokers are to be held answerable for advice which does not turn out satisfactorily it is manifest that relations between brokers and clients will frequently become somewhat strained. Bona fide advice is given when it is sought and is acted upon in the hope that it may prove valuable."

FOES SPLIT OVER 'WAR' TO HARASS KING OF SPAIN

Will Decide on Calling a General Strike Today.

MADRID, Feb. 21.—(AP) — Spanish labor and Socialist leaders tonight were divided as to their attitude toward the new government of Premier Juan Aznar and the advisability of a general strike as a protest against the monarchy.

Executive committees of the Socialist party and the general labor union, unable to reach a decision at an early session, met again tonight.

In the opinion of many, a general strike at this time was unlikely, in view of the popular attitude, the "watchful waiting" efforts of the government, and the opposition of some of the radical left groups to a walkout. Final decision was expected tomorrow.

Interview Jailed Leaders.

During the interval between sessions today members of the committees went to the Madrid jail, where they interviewed a number of radicals, incarcerated there since the revolts of last December.

Meanwhile Premier Aznar and members of his cabinet prepared for a week-end rest after the first strenuous week of their new duties. Tranquillity throughout the country appeared unbroken and business circles reported improving conditions because of the clearing political atmosphere. Another rise in the value of the peseta was reported.

Rumors that an unsuccessful attempt had been made to assassinate Alcala Zamora, republican leader, in the Madrid jail were scouted in government circles tonight. Officials said, however, that an investigation would be ordered to "show the absurdity of such reports."

Pledges Republic—If!

A promise that Spain will become a republic if the republicans win in the forthcoming elections was made today by the count of Romanones, foreign minister. Political circles were not surprised by the announcement, saying it merely was another form of the king's approval of the Aznar program and decision to abide by the parliamentary elections.

It is also considered that there is little chance of such an event taking place despite the considerable republican agitation, for the party would have to elect 207 deputies to obtain a majority and it never has had more than 18 in the past.

OVERGROWN GIRL USED TO ENTRAP CIGARET SELLERS

Dover, N. J., Feb. 21.—[U.P.]—Anna Horvart, five feet eight inches tall and weighing 150 pounds, looks older, but is actually only 14. Her father, Stephen Horvart, is president of the Commonwealth Humane society.

State law provides that any one convicted of selling cigarets to minors may be fined and the money goes to the society making the complaint. Since last June, according to investigation of Prosecutor Orville V. Messlar, Horvart has made around $100 weekly for his society by keeping his daughter out of school busily buying cigarets in all directions.

Horvart is today under $1,000 bond on a charge of having violated the law himself.

REVEAL KING ZOG AS HERO OF GUN BATTLE IN VIENNA

Fired at Assassins While Dodging Bullets.

VIENNA, Feb. 21.—(AP)—King Zog of Albania today was revealed as a hero in the attempt on his life last night which resulted in death to one aide and the wounding of another.

The king's chauffeur said tonight the monarch calmly discharged his revolver at the assailants as they fired, while Paskal Saracci, a friend, who was with Zog, said the king coolly eyed his attackers and swayed his body from side to side, anticipating the direction of the bullets.

It was reported tonight that the Albanian ruler intended to cut short his visit to Vienna, fearing another attack on his life.

Arrest 60 in Roundup.

As the king left the opera last night two men emptied revolvers at him, killing one of his attendants and wounding another. Police captured the assassins, who were said to have confessed, and detained 60 other persons found in the vicinity until they could establish that they were not connected with the plot. The attempt was attributed to the king's political enemies.

Messages from Tirana, by way of Belgrade, today said the elders of the family of Maj. Topollaj, who was killed by one of the bullets intended for the king, had issued a summons to all men bearing the name, wherever they live, to attend a clan council at Tirana to hear a curse on the assassins and to swear fealty to a family blood feud.

Deport 28 Albanians.

As a result of the attack the police decided today to deport 28 Albanian immigrants in Vienna found to be in possession of firearms. Tirana dispatches said thanksgiving services for the king's escape were to be held throughout the country, but that in the meantime his immediate return to Albania was demanded.

At Tirana consternation at the attack was mingled with joy at King Zog's escape.

Colorado Law Designed to Halt Hasty Marriages

Denver, Colo., Feb. 21.—(AP)—A bill designed to prevent hasty and ill-advised marriages was signed by Gov. W. H. Adams today. It requires that a five day period must elapse between the issuance of the marriage license and the wedding ceremony.

FOE OF NEPOTISM UNPOPULAR MAN AT WASHINGTON

Author of Bill Tells His Troubles to Hoover.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.—Representative U. S. Stone [Okla. Okla.] has discovered there are certain things a member of congress must not do, if he would be popular in Washington, and one of them is to call attention to the nepotism at the capital.

Today Representative Stone visited the White House to enlist the support of President Hoover for his bill barring relatives of members of congress and of high officials from becoming government employés and at the same time of telling his grievances over his experiences as a result of his action. Not only is he scowled at by colleagues, he says, but his wife gets cool treatment at social functions.

"Yes," said Mr. Stone, "I never dreamed that a simple, constructive move on my part could make such a difference. I pass fellow house members in the hallways of the office building and they do not speak to me. My wife is punished for my daring. Even bureau clerks in legislative departments give me the cold shoulder and interfere with my work as a member of the house.

Abused and Commended.

"I have had members whisper that I am right, but that I would not succeed. Others have warned me that I would suffer for my rashness. The reaction against my proposal to make it 'unlawful' for any legislative, ministerial, or judicial officer to appoint any person related to him when the pay is to come out of public funds has been most extraordinary. It has been far reaching. In anonymous letters, writers have abused me. But, on the other hand, I have received a lot of valuable information, showing to what extent nepotism in congress has gone."

Mr. Stone tried to get a hearing on his measure, but was told it was impossible at this time. He has in his possession facts he thinks would retire members of the house and senate.

The last annual report of the clerk of the house reveals that approximately 100 relatives are now on the pay rolls of members, and a survey shows that many of these have never done a lick of work in the offices for which they got their appointments.

One letter to Mr. Stone points out that the daughter of a certain representative signed vouchers for $3,500 last year and spent almost the entire time abroad. Another report which he would like to investigate before a committee is that a southern member has paid his father $16,000 and the man has never been in Washington.

One-tenth of Clerk Hire.

The Pathfinder, a weekly paper published by David S. Barry, sergeant-at-arms of the senate, and others, says:

"They (relatives of house members) draw approximately one-tenth of the money paid out for house clerk hire and would be drawing more if the law did not specify that a representative cannot pay any one person more than $3,900 a year, or $325 a month. Even some members get around this restriction by placing more than one relative on the roll."

Two years ago the amount allowed a senator for clerk hire was raised from $6,800 to $10,000 and a representative from $3,200 to $5,000. The Pathfinder says the purpose of the raise has been defeated, "for not many of the clerks who do the actual work are getting more than they did before."

"On the other hand," it added, "the family incomes of solons has been proportionately increased."

This magazine has been filed by Mr. Stone for use in his fight against nepotism.

Mr. Stone has information that another member of the house from the south has had his wife on the pay roll since January, 1929, and she has drawn $6,410. The report of the clerk of the house confirms this. His wife has been in Washington less than six months and has never worked in her husband's office.

Scores of clerks who serve during sessions of congress at nominal salaries and are dropped after adjournment, while congressmen's relatives get the big end of the $5,000 and play around, are ready to testify. A number of them have volunteered to appear for the Stone bill.

MRS. COOLIDGE GIVES HUSBAND'S NAME TO LINER AT LAUNCHING

Newport News, Va., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Mrs. Calvin Coolidge today christened the ship that is to bear her husband's name over the seven seas.

While water from the Merrimac river, that flows across the Vermont farm where Calvin Coolidge was raised, trickled down her bow, the S. S. President Coolidge slipped smoothly out of her cradle at a point just above where the historic James river empties into Hampton roads.

Mrs. Coolidge, in a taupe coat with a big fur collar, carried American Beauty roses with stems almost as tall as herself. With a low exclamation she flung the bottle suspended on a long silk cord from the main deck against the side of the hull.

Mrs. Coolidge, accompanied by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. John Coolidge, and her friend, Mrs. R. B. Hills of Northampton, arrived in a private car aboard a special train which brought other guests from New York, Philadelphia, and Washington. They started back to New York in the late afternoon.

Plowing in Wooden Shoes Wins a Wife Her Divorce

After testifying that her husband gave her a pair of wooden shoes and then forced her to plow the fields on their farm near Glen Ellyn, Mrs. Mary Pscheidt, 8203 South Sacramento avenue, was yesterday granted a divorce from Conrad Pscheidt, a farmer. The decree was granted by Superior Judge Desort on grounds of cruelty. The couple were married on Feb. 9, 1924.

Maid Who Took Coat from Employer Gives Self Up

Valeria Babnik, 18 year old housemaid, who stole a $100 coat on Friday from her employer, Mrs. Arthur Gareiss, 9339 Longwood drive, and left the city, walked into police headquarters at St. Louis last night, according to a dispatch, and asked to be locked up "before I steal anything else." Informed of the girl's surrender, Mrs. Gareiss said she was undecided whether to prosecute.

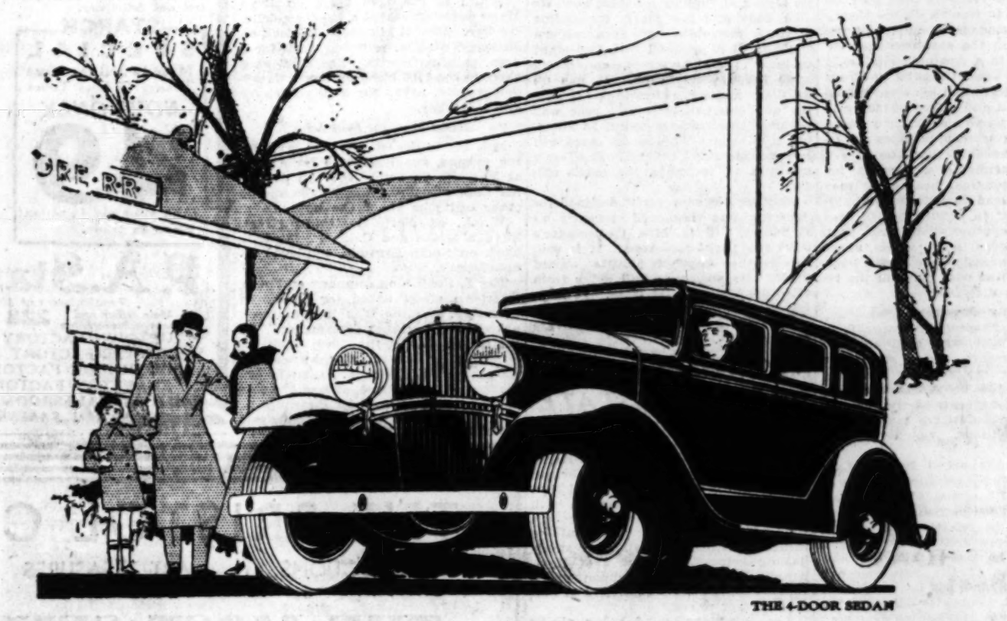
THE NEW OLDSMOBILE HAS FINER BODIES-INCREASED POWER and the SYNCRO-MESH TRANSMISSION



THE 4-DOOR SEDAN

The many new features incorporated in the 1931 Oldsmobile are not confined to any one part of the car. Body, engine, and chassis—all offer evidence of the advanced engineering which makes the new Oldsmobile such a remarkable value at its new low price.

Advancements in construction make its new Fisher bodies unusually strong, quiet, and serviceable. New insulation makes them warmer in winter and cooler in summer. And smart new tailoring and appointments add to the attractiveness and luxury of body interiors.

New features which have been added to Oldsmobile's dependable engine make performance even more pleasing than in the past. New down-draft carburetion brings increased power—with higher speed and faster acceleration. It also makes starting in cold weather quicker and easier. And a new carburetor-silencer contributes to quieter operation throughout the entire speed range.

In addition, new ease of handling is offered by the famous Syncro-Mesh non-clashing transmission—a feature heretofore found only in higher priced cars. Gears can be shifted quickly and silently at all speeds, without clashing. And Oldsmobile's new Quiet Second Gear . . . an added feature . . . assures smooth, swift acceleration which rivals high gear performance in quietness.

These many important new features are typical of the exceptional quality which prevails throughout the entire car. Examination will reveal many others. But only when you take the wheel can you fully appreciate how much these modern fine-car features really add to the zest and thrill of driving the new Oldsmobile.

CONSIDER THE DELIVERED PRICE AS WELL AS THE LIST PRICE WHEN COMPARING AUTOMOBILE VALUES. WE WILL BE VERY GLAD TO DETAIL FOR YOU THE VERY REASONABLE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN OLDSMOBILE'S LIST AND DELIVERED PRICES.

FOUR OF STATE'S OFFICERS SEEK BIGGER BUDGETS

But Emmerson Trims His Own Department Heads.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Springfield, Ill., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—In the face of Gov. Emmerson's plea for curtailed expenses and rigid economy, four Republican state officers have asked increased appropriations to operate their offices the next two years, which total $423,150 more than they received for the same purpose for the current biennium. The governor's personal budget estimate is for $240 more than he had at his disposal the last two years.

The officers who are asking for increases, as revealed by a study of the budget recommendations given to the house, are: Secretary of State William J. Stratton, State Auditor Oscar Nelson, Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom, and Superintendent of Public Instruction Frances G. Blair. This table shows the amount of increases:

Officer—	1929. Appropriation.	1931. Estimates.	Increase.
Stratton	$2,937,820	$3,089,320	$131,500
Nelson	1,531,400	1,735,600	204,200
Carlstrom	897,400	957,800	60,400
Blair	272,850	299,900	27,050
Total increase			$423,150

Likely to Be Clipped.

It is not expected that all of the increases asked for will be granted, inasmuch as the budget bills will be scanned closely by the appropriations committee when they are introduced in the house. It is also whispered about the state house corridors that sometimes state officers ask for more in their budget requests than they actually expect to receive, on the theory that the cuts made, if any, will not greatly disturb the expenses they expect to bear in a coming biennium.

But it is known that the governor called the officers and his own department heads in and talked economy to them. That he was sufficiently forceful with his own appointees is reflected by the fact that the eleven "code" departments under his immediate jurisdiction, headed by men he chose, turned in budget estimates which amount to $7,804,715 less than their 1929 appropriations. At that, six of the department heads asked for increases, but these were overshadowed by the cuts made in the remaining five divisions.

Economy Message Read.

This week a special message from Gov. Emmerson was read to both house and senate, which stressed a necessity for tax reform. His long message to the convening assembly early in January carried the admonition that the legislature must, under current conditions, watch expenditures closely.

The increases asked by the four state officers are only for expenses in operating their offices. They do not include items for permanent improvements. Thus, Secretary of State Stratton's total appropriation for 1931-'33 will actually be smaller this year than in 1929, even if the increases are granted, for his request for permanent improvement moneys is only $259,902 for the coming biennium as compared with the $430,000 he received in 1929.

This $430,000 went toward repairs for the state house and for the building of a tunnel connecting the capitol with the Centennial building some yards away. The state house repairs have not been completed and this necessitated the request for permanent improvement money from this legislature.

More Asked in Employé Wages.

In each case the officers are asking more money for salaries and wages in their offices.

Gov. Emmerson's 1929 appropriation for office operation was $141,320. This year he is asking $141,560. Here, too, the increase of $240 comes under the head of salaries and wages.

The preceding general assembly appropriated $90,000 for equipping the executive mansion, and, this having been done, the item is removed from the mansion budget request. In 1929 the mansion figure was $154,200. The 1931-33 request is for $54,200.

RELIEF FUND $54,413 SHORT OF GOAL; DRIVE WILL END WEDNESDAY

Contributions of $14,983 were received yesterday for the relief fund being raised by the governor's commission on unemployment and relief. This leaves the fund $54,413 short of the goal of $5,000,000, which must be raised before Wednesday, when the campaign ends. The day's response to the home appeal, made possible through the granting of a franking privilege by the federal government, was $6,256.

"So far the mail appeal has brought in $30,629, a showing far under expectations," said Philip R. Clarke, director of the drive. "All told 1,250,000 appeals have been sent to homes. We have received only 10,000 replies and a great number of those were additional appeals for help. The $5,000,000 sought will barely suffice for the needs of 70,000 destitute families until April 1. We are hopeful we can raise our quota by Wednesday."

WM. VANDERBILT BUILDS 3,500 TON LUXURY YACHT

KIEL, Germany, Feb. 21.—The last word in maritime luxury, the 3,500 ton motor yatch Alpha, built by order of William Vanderbilt at the Germania shipyards, is nearing completion. Mr. Vanderbilt has arrived in Keil to enjoy the boat's test cruise scheduled to start within a few days.

The vessel measures 240 feet in length and 52 feet in breadth. With its high and slightly receding bow, its slim body and low stern, its outline strongly resembles that of a modern cruiser. It is powered with two eight cylinder Diesel engines, generating 2,100 horse power each. It has an auxiliary motor for electric power supply and emergencies. The boat was designed to attain a speed of 16 knots, but it is believed the actual speed will be considerably higher. The crew numbers 44, including the ship's officers.

Another pleasure yacht destined for America was launched recently at Hamburg. It is Mrs. Cadwalader's 5,000 ton yacht Savarona. It is said to be the greatest private owned yacht. Its silhouette will differ from all other boats of its class. It is to have two funnels. Its crew will total a hundred—a record crew for a private owned yacht.

$5,000,000 SET AS VALUE OF ESTATE OF HARRY HART

An inventory of the estate of Harry Hart, president of Hart, Schaffner and Marx clothing company, who died Nov. 20, 1929, was filed yesterday with Nuncio Bonelli, assistant to Probate Judge Henry Horner. The estate is valued at $5,000,000, the largest single holding being 30,500 shares of Hart, Schaffner and Marx common stock, worth approximately $2,300,000 at current market prices.

The inventory listed other stocks valued at $24,692; bonds worth $1,837,810, of which $1,618,435 is in municipal bonds, and $141,000 in cash. Mr. Hart did not own any real estate.

Under the terms of Mr. Hart's will $130,000 is left to charitable organizations and $201,500 is to be distributed among relatives and friends. The widow, Mrs. Sara L. Hart, is left $100,000 and the remainder of the estate is left in trust for Mrs. Hart and three children.

SPRAINS ANKLE IN SUICIDE LEAP.

Frank Rutkowski, 40 years old, 8539 Burley avenue, sprained his ankle yesterday when he attempted to commit suicide by jumping from a ledge at 79th street and the lake where the water is only 2 feet deep.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

DO you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of skin renewal by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. Then the underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty.

To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of unusual merit. One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel.

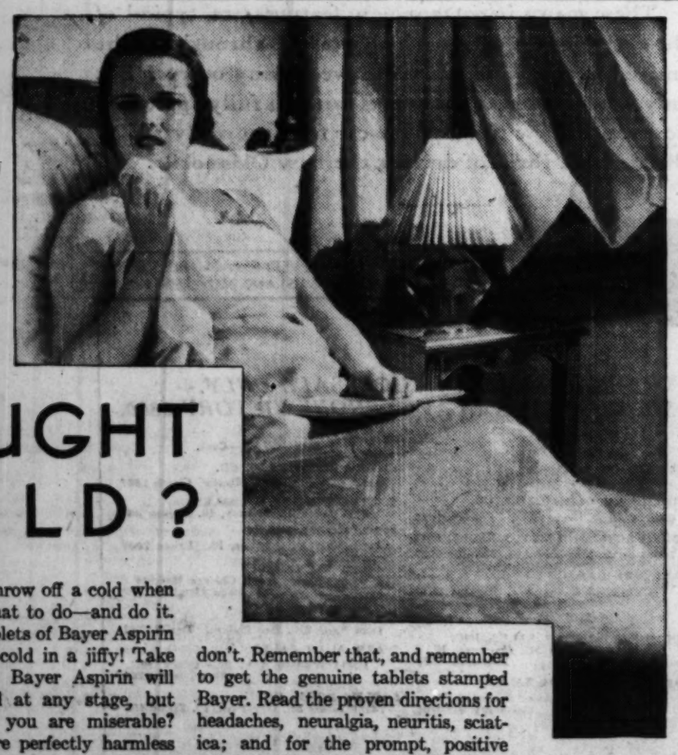
CAUGHT COLD?



IT'S easy to throw off a cold when you know what to do—and do it. Two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin will break up a cold in a jiffy! Take them promptly. Bayer Aspirin will check your cold at any stage, but why wait until you are miserable? These tablets are perfectly harmless because they don't depress the heart. If your throat feels sore, crush three more tablets in half a glassful of water and gargle. This will ease your throat instantly and reduce any infection. A cold needn't worry you when you take these simple precautions. But the simplest cold is serious when you don't. Remember that, and remember to get the genuine tablets stamped Bayer. Read the proven directions for headaches, neuralgia, neuritis, sciatica; and for the prompt, positive relief of periodic pain. Until you are familiar with the many valuable uses of Bayer Aspirin you can't realize how much suffering is really needless.

All druggists have the genuine tablets of Bayer Aspirin. The box says Bayer, and you will see the word Genuine printed in red.

CROCEFISSA BRUNO

Crocefissa Bruno, 2048 N. Lavergne ave., Chicago, Ill.

Born September 18. . .,
Ambition: "To do social work among poor children."

You are a Virgo child, combining excellent reasoning faculties with a sparkling imagination. Your chief characteristic is steadfastness of purpose; you can carry any work to a successful conclusion because you have a capacity for detail and will persevere even in the face of discouragement. For the most part you take the middle course and avoid extremes, but this is not the case where your sympathies are concerned. You are greatly touched by any thought of suffering and inclined, on occasion, to let your sympathies overrule your better judgement. Capricorn, Pisces, Taurus, and Scorpio people are most congenial to you.

EDWARD A. RADKE

Edward A. Radke, 214 Mississippi Ave., Joliet, Ill.

Born August 27th. . .,
Ambition: "To give boys the benefit of knowledge gained through years of practical experience."

You, also, are a Virgo child, with methodical tastes and habits. The stars have made you particularly sensitive to harmony in all things. You find beauty in orderliness and perfection. Artistic and literary leanings are strongly indicated; study and hard work should bring you some success along these lines. You are apt to be retiring and somewhat solitary; you are also inclined to worry too much about yourself and others. You are facing what seems, on the whole, to be a good year. May, August, and September appear to be particularly advantageous for you.

PLAN GREAT FUR CENTER IN LOOP OFFICE BUILDING

30 Firms Take 4 Floors of State and Lake.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Old Pa Dearborn can now wear his coonskin overcoat with a more nonchalant air than he formerly did when in company with Father Knickerbocker and other city dads, for yesterday leases were signed which, it is claimed, will do much toward making this city independent of the Gotham fur markets for the first time. The fur industry of the west will now be centered largely in one loop structure as a result of 30 nationally known fur houses renting space in the State-Lake building.

B. F. LINDHEIMER. [Wallinger Photo.]

This announcement was made yesterday by B. F. Lindheimer, one of the owners of the State-Lake building and a member of the south park board, who stated that the concerns already signed were in reality the nucleus of a much larger group of dealers and manufacturers who plan to make the building their headquarters.

Firms connected with the fur industries already have leased approximately 30,000 square feet of space, comprising a majority of four floors. The total of these leases for the next five years is in excess of $350,000, it is stated.

Will Concentrate Activities.

"Nine-tenths of the raw materials division of the fur industry in Chicago," said Clarence H. Hoffman of Hoffman Brothers, "ultimately will be located in this one building. All operations of the business, including securing of pelts, dressing, matching, and selling to retailers and manufacturers, will be conducted from this headquarters. A committee has been formed to concentrate all fur activities of Chicago and vicinity in the State-Lake building."

Members of this committee are Albert Jodie, Mr. Hoffman, Abe Stein, and Monroe Lang.

"Twenty years ago," said Mr. Jodie, head of the firm of Albert Jodie & Bros., and one of the country's leading fur merchants, "there were only three large raw and dressed skin dealers in Chicago. Merchants of this city were obliged to search elsewhere for their furs or buy from representatives of New York firms who stopped at the old Palmer house.

"Under the new arrangement at the State-Lake building there are enough dealers not only to supply the needs of Chicago but also to handle a large percentage of the entire fur trade of the country.

Buyers Now Visit Chicago.

"While once Chicago furriers were obliged to travel to markets in other cities, buyers now make special trips to Chicago from San Francisco, Seattle, and many intermediate cities. We now send our own representatives abroad and will be represented this year at both Leipzig and the first soviet auction sales at Leningrad.

"Despite the fact that furs provided materials for the world's first industry, they haven't been of tremendous financial importance until the last few years. The volume of fur business in Chicago has grown at the rate of nearly a million dollars a year since 1910."

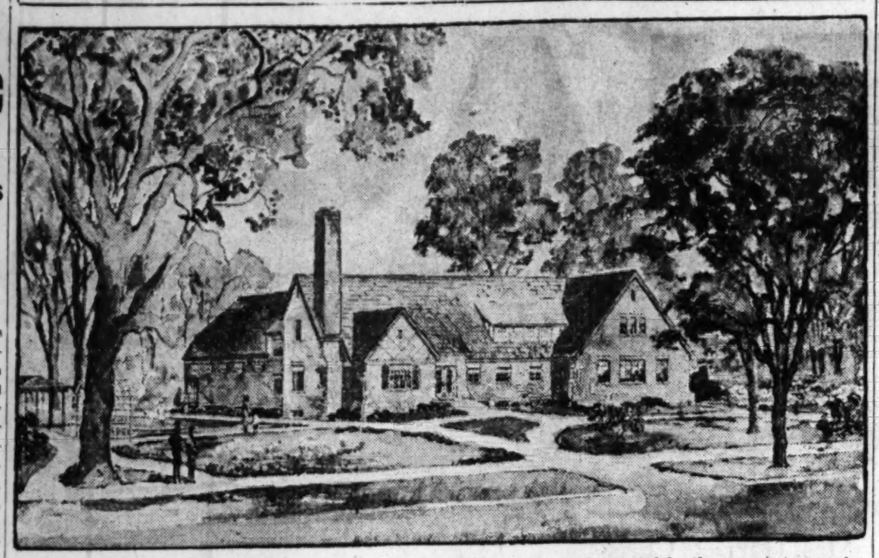
Among the concerns which have taken space in the new headquarters are the Fur Merchants' Exchange, Inc.; Thorer & Hollender, Hoffman Bros., John J. Kelly, Leon Waitz, Hecht & Becker, John Blacklock & Co., Hyman Smith, M. A. Wedeles & Co., Albert Jodie & Bro., M. Weininger, Meyer Richman, Cantor & Angel, N. Sobel, Inc.; Monroe Lang, Dernberg Fur Co., Benjamin Kroll, Maurice Snitzer, Jack Maier, Ben Angel, L. Bornstein, Shapiro & Gutstein, Sam Mandel, Stein & Walzer, Max Rajewsky & Bro., Louis Cohen, Joe Netzky, Joe Hendler, Abe Topper, and Harry S. Polk.

Fur Mart Idea an Old One.

This group of leases apparently settles a problem which local real estate men have been attempting to solve for many years—how to group all of the local fur industries in one building. Several sites have been considered for towering structures, but none ever materialized. Perhaps the most conspicuous and also by far the most ambitious was a plan to erect a tall fur mart on the property where 333 North Michigan now stands. That idea, originated several years prior to the erection of 333, blossomed out into the picture stage and then faded away.

It is considered a probability that, despite the present advertising value of the name "State-Lake," the eventual acquirement of a majority of space in the building by the fur industry will necessitate a change to "the Chicago Fur Mart." This, however, has not yet been determined.

HOLLYWOOD PARK COMMUNITY BUILDING



Clarence Hatzfeld is architect of the above community building to be erected by the commissioners of the Hollywood Park district in the new park bounded by Thorndale, Spaulding, Christiana, and Peterson. Work is to be started in the early spring and will be rushed to completion. It will have a commodious assembly hall, parlors, board rooms, secretary's office, club rooms, banquet hall, kitchen, playroom, etc. Roffe Beman made this picture.

PLAN COMMUNITY BUILDING FOR NORTHWEST SIDE

Hollywood Pk. District to Have New Unit.

Plans have just been completed by Clarence Hatzfeld, architect, for a fieldhouse and community center to be erected by the Hollywood park district commissioners in the new park bounded by Peterson, Thorndale, Spaulding and Christiana avenues. Work is to be rushed, according to A. C. Zwengel, with a view to having it dedicated at an early date.

The commissioners have just approved plans for the development of the park so that when completed, in addition to the community building, it will contain well equipped playgrounds for boys and girls, a wading pool and a sand pit for the youngsters, an outdoor shelter, trees, shrubs, flowers, curving walks, shady nooks and a rock garden.

The community building was designed by Mr. Hatzfeld to fit into the park surroundings. It will be old English design, with walls of brick, trimmed with variegated limestone, with low roof lines of blended colors.

The structure will provide for the usual community building activities, with a large assembly hall, parlors, board room and secretary's office on the first floor. On the second floor there'll be club rooms. The basement will contain a banquet hall, kitchen, a playroom, etc.

JUST TO SHOW WHAT CAN BE DONE EVEN IF TIMES ARE DULL

The seventeen story apartment building at 5421 Cornell avenue, erected three years ago and for the first two years of its existence having only two tenants, is now completely rented with the exception of one suite, according to John J. Ready & Co. Last May the owners, discouraged because of the slim renting list, then totaling only two, turned the property over to Ready & Co. Although a north side concern and with the spring renting season closed, the firm took hold and yesterday Mr. Ready announced that with the signing of a lease with Federal Judge Samuel Alschuler for the fifteenth floor, all but one suite is occupied.

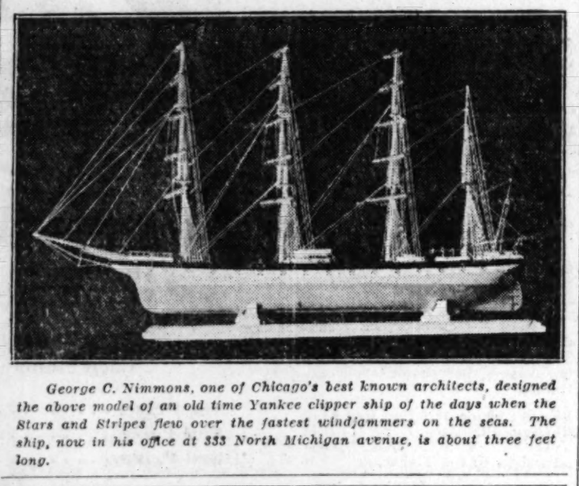
IN THE DAYS OF SAIL



George C. Nimmons, one of Chicago's best known architects, designed the above model of an old time Yankee clipper ship of the days when the Stars and Stripes flew over the fastest windjammers on the seas. The ship, now in his office at 333 North Michigan avenue, is about three feet long.

Architect Kills Time with Windjammer Model Making

George C. Nimmons, senior member of the nationally known architectural firm of Nimmons, Carr & Wright, Chicago, which has designed most if not all of the Sears, Roebuck & Co. buildings throughout the country, has temporarily become marine architect and ship builder. Perhaps this should be written in the past tense for Mr. Nimmons is now down at Ormond Beach, Fla., playing golf and trying to forget architectural worries of any sort, land or sea. Some months ago he decided that he'd take advantage of the building lull and do something different.

"I set up a workshop out in the country and determined to make the drawings and build a clipper ship, one of those marvelous greyhounds of the sea that could travel 350 miles or more a day just under the power of its sails," he writes from Ormond Beach.

Appreciates Old Windjammers.

"I secured the accurate dimensions and data of one of the best of them and tackled my job with much enthusiasm. The only difference between my undertaking and that of the ship builder was that mine was in miniature—a boat about three feet long, built to a scale of 1-12 of an inch to a foot, just as we build models of buildings to see how they look.

"I never undertook any recreation or amusement that was any more enticing or interesting. As you work upon one of these model ships you come to understand their construction and appreciate the ingenuity and skill employed by the old skippers to get every bit of speed and power for the boat out of the wind.

Yankee Clippers Took the Lead.

"The beauty and grace of line of the hull of these ships is copied to a considerable extent in our racing sail boats of today. While these ships, on account of the nature of their rigging, could not go much up into the wind and followed generally the trade winds, still, they sailed all over the world with the American clippers taking the lead in the boat navigation of that day. Skipper MacKay of this country made the astonishing record of sailing his boat to England in nine days.

"With the possibility of securing all of this speed and power for a ship from the wind, it's a wonder they don't build clipper ships now and save much of the cost of fuel in carrying on the commerce with the different parts of the world."

The model of the clipper is now in Mr. Nimmons' private office at 333 North Michigan avenue.

Plan Four Residences in Galewood on the West Side

Four permits have recently been taken out for the construction of one story homes in the Galewood section of the west side, lying north of North avenue and west of Narragansett avenue. For the last few years the chief developers of this section have been David Gowdy and John Duff, operating under the name of the David Gowdy company. Much of the land of this section has been in the possession of the Gowdy company for some years. It was conveyed to them by G. Whittier Gale, whose forbears were the early settlers of the Galewood tract.

China-Russia Call Chicago City Planner

Jacob L. Crane Jr., nationally known city planner and a resident of Highland Park, has been called to the orient and soviet Russia to show the Chinese and the Slavs how to lay out model cities along Yankee lines. Mr. Crane, who has been active in town planning and zoning throughout Chicagoland, as well as in distant American cities, leaves Chicago for the far east next Tuesday, Feb. 24. He will sail from Vancouver on Feb. 28 on the Canadian Pacific steamer Empress of Japan.

On his way to China Mr. Crane will spend a few days with city planning and real estate authorities in Tokio. His most conspicuous bit of Chinese work will be consultation on the city planning of Canton and also on a new seaport and town site. This latter project is one item in the ambitious program for the development of China as outlined ten years ago by Dr. Sun Yat Sen, first president of the Chinese republic.

In spite of civil warfare the Nationalist government in China is carrying out a huge list of improvements, highways, railways, bridges, harbors, airways, and land reclamation.

From China Mr. Crane will proceed to Russia, where soviet authoritios have invited him to come and advise on technical policies connected with city planning and state planning. Several new cities are being laid out and built in Russia and the supreme economic council there has control over state planning, city planning and rural planning, which are being prosecuted vigorously in coördination with the five year plan.

As with industrial production itself, the soviets are desirous of adopting the best American city planning and city building principles.

On his way home from Moscow Mr. Crane will be a delegate to the International City Planning congress in Berlin the first of June.

INSULL PLANS SUBSTATION ON NORTH WABASH

The Commonwealth Edison company will erect a substation at 11-15 North Wabash avenue on the 40x170 parcel now improved with an old six story building. This was announced yesterday when it was learned through the Brownlee Realty company that it had represented all parties in the acquiring of the leasehold estates of the Globe-Wernicke company and John P. Harding. These have been merged with the fee as the Insull interests purchased the land back in September, 1928, for $712,500 from Babette Mandel, Edward M. Mandel and Rose M. Louer.

The total cost of fee and leaseholds is reported to have been approximately $1,000,000, which is at the rate of $25,000 a front foot or $147 a square foot. All existing leases, all of which expire in 1935, also were acquired. No details could be learned as to the time construction will begin, but it is understood work will start within a few weeks.

New Automobile Painting Firm Gets Broadway Space

The Broadway Body corporation has leased from Frank and Harold McKey the automobile salesroom at 5719-23 Broadway, fronting 75 feet, with a depth of 226 feet, for a term of years at an undisclosed rental. The lessee is a new organization composed of officials of Emrich & Co., automobile painting and repairing, at 3538 North Clark, where they have been for 11 years and will continue. The new firm also will do motor repairing and painting. Mark Levy & Bro. were brokers.

Economic Club Leases La Salle Street Quarters

The Economic club has leased quarters on the sixth floor of the One La Salle Street building for its executive offices. The organization, of which Lucius Teter, vice chairman of the National Bank of the Republic is president, has more than 1,000 members. It formerly was at 79 West Monroe. L. J. Sheridan & Co. were brokers.

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

SOUTHERN TYPE OF COLONIAL IS OLD FAVORITE

Endears Itself to Each Generation.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

Amid all the changing tastes and preferences of our vast home owning, home building public, the southern colonial type of dwelling stands out, a perennial and beloved favorite with many people. To each generation it endears itself anew, winning staunch friends through its unchallengeable virtues and loveliness, its fine proportions, and its dignified restraint.

LOUISE BARGELT.

Today we have a fine example of a home which follows the southern colonial traditions; a dwelling designed for a 75 foot lot, or a wider one, and which can be built in the Chicago area for about $15,000. Architect, Bertram A. Weber, A. I. A., 343 South Dearborn street, Chicago.

To be successful and consistent, the modern colonial home need not be an exact copy of its prototype. By keeping the best and discarding the nonessentials in its designing, it can perpetuate the charm of the past without sacrifice of the standards of the present, and when finished, stand beside any early example without fear or apology.

Some modification of interior plan there must be to include bathrooms, closets, breakfast nooks, butler's pantries, lavatories, and garage. In the façades and general mass of the structure not so much divergence is necessary since neither our various activities nor our physical size are essentially changed from those of our forefathers.

Materials Used.

Concerning materials employed, these need not be identical, as long as similarity of appearance is kept. Suggested materials here for the exterior are white shingles or board siding for the center portion with wings of old colonial brick. Thick butt shingles cover the roof and the shutters are painted green, a color long associated with old southern colonial homes.

The materials at the present time for the exterior of a consistent colonial home may be wood frame covered with shingles, clapboard, siding, or may be of brick, stone, or stucco.

Where brick is used care should be taken in its selection since all kinds of brick are not suited to a colonial residence. Again if stone is employed, the more roughly coarsed masonry is preferable, excepting where the house is in the formal Georgian type.

Wood Shingles Used.

As for roofings, wood shingles were used mostly during the colonial period. If one wishes a fireproof roof on his colonial home, he will have to compromise a little and make a concession to consistency.

This dwelling in the manner of the colonial sits closely to the ground. Here again if one wishes a light cellar with sizeable windows—lighter than is possible where the windows are below ground level and set in areas, one must compromise. Where a colonial is large and formal, the first floor can be pushed up more easily than where the house is of the simple, informal type.

A dry rubble stone wall adds charm here and a note of interest. This wall, together with a hedge, builds up a terrace around the house. If the true southern tradition is carried out, the walk as well as the porch will be of brick. Another suggestion for the walk is that it be of flagstone or blue stone.

The garage doors are turned towards the rear so that the appearance of the house from the street is not impaired and a covered way leads from the dining room to the drive, offering a convenient entrance for guests.

Details Given Attention.

Careful attention has been given to exterior details, doors, windows, dormers, chimneys, and entrance way, as these details give to a colonial home those qualities which can render it consistent or ruin it.

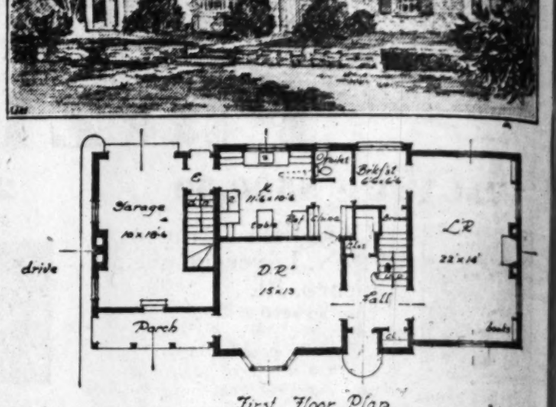
The entrance leads into a small hall with oblong living room, 22x14 at the right and almost square dining room, 15x13, at the left. The first floor plan includes also a kitchen, 11x6, a breakfast room, china, broom, and coat closets and a toilet and lavatory in the small hall between kitchen and breakfast room. The attached garage is 10x18 feet 6 inches.

All the interior woodwork is to be painted and the walls of the living room and dining room can be canvased and painted or decorated with interesting colonial print wallpaper.

On the second floor there are four bedrooms, with two of them provided with windows on three sides. One bedroom has a bath of its own, while the second bath is reached from the hall.

The house is planned to show to best advantage with a south or a west front.

DESIGNED BY CHICAGOAN



First Floor Plan

To be successful—and consistent even—a modern colonial home need not be an exact copy of its prototype, as is evidenced here by this delightful home in the southern colonial spirit, which perpetuates the charm of the past without sacrificing the standards of the present. Designed for a 75 foot lot, this house has seven rooms, two baths, and an attached garage, and can be built in Chicago area for about $15,000. Architect, Bertram A. Weber, A. I. A., 343 South Dearborn street, Chicago.

FARM and GARDEN

FARMERS SLICE CORN CROP COST BY EFFICIENCIES

Men on Two Illinois Farms Offer Facts.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Operators of at least two Illinois farms with cost per acre and cost per bushel records on corn crops are letting figures tell anew the story of how practical, modern methods will produce efficiently and profitably even in discouraging times.

In Bureau county Henry Ehlers and his sons kept records for 1930 on every operation that had to do with 200 acres of corn. When the corn was in the crib they had a 55 bushel per acre yield that had been produced at a cost of but 11.04 cents per bushel, excluding the charges for rent of the land and marketing. With the rent item included, the cost of the corn per bushel was but 30.1 cents, which at harvest time would have meant a profit of $12.53 per acre.

Methods Spell the Difference.

Similarly Mueller brothers near Taylor Ridge in Rock Island county kept records on 120 acres of corn that was not pampered but that did see the use of well handled machinery, good seed, and proven methods.

Mueller brothers reported after harvest that their corn had cost 14 cents per bushel, or but $6.34 per acre, not including rent of land and taxes. With those two items added to the cost charges the 5,400 bushels harvested cost a total of $1,779.41, or 32.9 cents per bushel.

"How do they know?" their neighbors might ask. Each man listed all his machinery, labor items, use of horses, cost of seed, and any other costs for the season. Many of the points in which they might differ with others in harvesting the crop with a total low cost is in the care of their machinery, the efficiency of their methods, doing the right things at the right time.

On the Ehlers farm all of the work in the corn fields except picking was done without horses. The tractor, although small, was used on other jobs besides that of plowing, seeding, and cultivating in the corn fields, thereby reducing the tractor cost per day to $4.07.

Plowing, including labor and a charge for a two bottom plow, cost a total of $152.20; disking, $78.70; planting, $72.73; harrowing, $27.48; cultivating three times, $156.32. The cost of the seed was $125, indicating that the Ehlers believe in good seed.

On the Mueller brothers' farm additional information was obtained on how a farmer can figure just what tractor operation costs per day and per year. The first step is to estimate the life of the machine, usually set at 10 years with average usage and care. The yearly depreciation is then spread out, taking one-tenth of the original cost for an annual charge.

Repairs Estimate Proves Correct.

Interest on this investment is considered fair at 7 per cent of one-half of the first cost. Repairs average 4 per cent of the first cost, and Mueller brothers found that on their $13 tractor, this $35 item was just what they did spend during the third year of their ownership of the machine.

Taxes, insurance, and housing brought the total annual overhead cost to $169.10, which was divided by the number of days used during the year, which was 50, giving a daily overhead charge of $3.41.

More bookkeeping took care of operating expense for fuel, oil, and grease. This totaled just 19 cents less per day than the overhead, giving a total charge, for each of the 50 days the tractor was used, of $6.63.

They can show even more figures. The Rock Island county corn growing experts, for instance, have watched repairs and the life of other machinery enough to estimate that each day they used a disk it cost $1.78; one day for a plow, 83 cents; and other daily charges, such as a three row planter, $9.23; three row cultivator, $2.35; one row corn picker, $7.29; corn elevator, $6.05; harrow, $1.06.

As a result, on both of the farms there is a new impetus in the direction of placing farming as a business on a par with other industries in the matter of knowing costs and being able to compute profit or loss to a percentage.

QUESTIONS

PLANTS FOR INDOOR GARDENS.

I was interested in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE article Feb. 15, telling about indoor gardens. Could one use ordinary house plants such as geraniums and ferns in making such a garden?
MRS. W. L. H.

Reply.

Plants you have mentioned would hardly be applicable to indoor gardens such as were described in The Tribune article. The reasons are that they would be too large or would become so, whereas the indoor garden is so planned and so constructed that the live plants do not exhibit much growth nor change in leaf or flower structure to mar the original scene or design.

WHEN TO SPRAY FRUIT TREES.

Is this a proper time to spray fruit trees such as apple and plum? The trees last year bore fruit, but much of it was deformed, although wormy fruit was not very evident. C. J.

Reply.

The present dormant period is suggested for the use of what is called a dormant oily spray which will help curtail disease. It should be followed later by a series of sprayings with poison applications that will take care of insect pests. These are timely when the tree has developed leaves, also the pre-pink stage, when the blossoms are getting ready to open and another period after they have blown but before the blossoms have fully closed to form the tiny green fruit.

AIRCRAFT PROVE THEIR WORTH IN CANAL 'DEFENSE'

Both Sides in Naval 'War' Claim Victory.

U. S. S. LOS ANGELES, Feb. 21.—(AP)—New fighting dirigibles planned by the navy will be able to search an ocean area of 6,000 square miles each hour for signs of hostile craft, Commander Vincent A. Clarke, commander of this big airship, said today.

The Los Angeles, "destroyed" in the navy war game that ended last night, nevertheless made a very gratifying performance and contributed vitally to the "defense" of the Panama canal, according to her commander.

"In two flights," he said, "the ship cruised 2,315 nautical miles, searching an area during daylight hours averaging 1,000 square miles an hour.

"This figure far exceeds that which can be covered by any type of surface craft, but is only half what the navy's new dirigibles will accomplish. These ships will also be able to remain in the air at least five days."

Expected to Be Downed.

The commander said the fact the Los Angeles was theoretically brought down by planes from the attacking fleet was of no significance.

"Without armament of any kind and without fighting planes that the new military ships will carry," he asserted, "it was a foregone conclusion that she would be sunk on making contact with the enemy main body.

"The military ships will have high speed, machine gun, and plane defense and will use the clouds and high altitudes to cover their approach and escape, for trailing, and for night attack."

Commander Clarke said that on two occasions during the week's maneuvers storms were encountered without any undue stress being placed on the ship. Minor breaks of wiring and fabric were easily repaired, and at no time was there engine trouble.

BOTH SIDES CLAIM VICTORY

BY COMMANDER THEODORE S. WILKINSON.

U. S. S. Arkansas, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Ships of the United States navy, their annual war games completed, were anchoring successively in Panama bay today like the proverbial lion and lamb lying down together. The battle fleet, which formerly was the enemy "black" fleet and was bent on capturing the Panama canal, was finally glad to drop anchor after 16 days out of California ports.

And the scouting fleet, which made up the "blue" forces defending the waterway, were just as glad to have the sham war over and resume relations with their brethren from the Pacific coast. The entire fleet will remain here until March 3.

Personnel of the black fleet believe that they drove doggedly through to their objectives, the Panama canal and the theoretically completed Nicaraguan canal, despite the serious opposition of the blue attacks.

Blues Say They Won.

The blue forces, on the other hand, believe that with their superiority in aircraft they defeated the menace to the Central American waterways.

No definite decision as to the winner has been announced, nor is it likely to be, but the official observers are preparing data for discussion and a formal critique of the maneuvers at a gathering of ranking officers March 1.

The navy's annual war game began on Feb. 14 and in the ensuing operations at sea its aircraft demonstrated scouting capabilities both for search and for attack. Wider flung aerial and surface searches located far at sea the advancing "black" fleet in two main detachments, one descending from the Nicaraguan coast, near that canal, and the second aiming for the coast of the republic of Panama westward of the Panama canal.

Attack with Aircraft.

The "Blue" forces concentrated after discovery of the enemy and attacked both detachments in force by aircraft and surface vessels on Thursday.

The southern area, down the South American coast and up to Costa Rica, was covered by big patrol planes, searching far to sea. The first contact with the advancing enemy was made by planes from the cruiser Trenton sighting a big cruiser late Tuesday afternoon far out in the Pacific.

RICH WIDOW STARTS ACTION TO DISAVOW FOSTER GRANDCHILD

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Mrs. Mary F. Henderson's recent offer to give the United States a home for the Vice President today resulted in an effort by the aged and wealthy widow to disown her adopted granddaughter, Mrs. Beatrice Henderson Wholean.

Mrs. Wholean went to the courts in an effort to prevent Mrs. Henderson, widow of the late John B. Henderson, senator from Missouri, from giving the mansion to the government.

It then became known that Mrs. Wholean, who had been regarded as the daughter of the late John B. Henderson Jr., was a foundling, and today Mrs. Henderson attacked her in the District of Columbia Supreme court the validity of her adoption several years ago of the young woman. She said Mrs. Wholean's parents had not given their consent and raised technical points in her legal assault on the adoption proceedings.

EXPERTS FINISH PROBE OF CANAL FOR NICARAGUA

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Three members of the interoceanic canal board, appointed by President Hoover to investigate the feasibility of building a canal across Nicaragua, today completed a three weeks' tour of the projected canal route from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The three commissioners, Dean Anson Marston of Iowa State college, S. B. Williamson, former division engineer of the Panama canal, and Ray G. Finch, former state engineer of New York, talked over the project here today with Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, in charge of the army engineers who have been surveying the proposed route. Col. Sultan will accompany the commissioners to Panama tomorrow to inspect the Panama canal before they return to Washington. The army survey having been almost completed, it is expected the engineers will be withdrawn next July.

The proposed Nicaraguan canal would be 172 miles long, require ten years or more to build, and cost about $700,000,000, according to the estimates of army engineers.

INDICT FORMER GARY ASSESSOR ON FRAUD CHARGE

John McFadden, former veteran assessor of Calumet township, which includes Gary, was indicted yesterday by the Lake county grand jury on a charge of filing a false claim of $180 for William Weir, Republican party chairman of Gary.

Weir served under McFadden as deputy assessor, and the $180 claim, it is alleged, was for services not actually rendered. Deputies arrested McFadden in his Gary home, where he is ill, but did not remove him when he furnished $10,000 bond.

An inquiry into McFadden's affairs was begun last October near the close of his 20 years of office as township assessor. Grand jury recommendations urged his ouster and the filing of a civil suit for the recovery of $28,000, but nothing developed. Last week Robert Estill, new Democratic prosecutor of Gary, reopened the case.

DISCOVERY — IS THE FIRST IMPORTANT STEP

SINCE the dawn of creation discovery has been an outstanding factor in the development and continuance of human life and happiness. And it is of even greater value today, especially in the preservation of good health. For health authorities declare that discovery and early treatment are the first and most important steps in the prevention and control of dangerous communicable diseases.

This applies particularly to syphilis and gonorrhea—both dangerous communicable diseases and capable of causing serious damage to almost every part of the body—including the eyes, brain, heart, muscles and nerves. Gonorrhea is ranked as one of the most prevalent of all diseases—syphilis as the greatest killing disease. No one is immune from infection. Even little children are often innocent victims.

Serious as they are these diseases can be cured if discovered and properly treated in time. Medical science through years of research and study has provided, not only efficient treatment but accurate tests to aid in the diagnosis of either infection. Most important of the latter are the blood tests for syphilis.

Since the discovery of these tests physicians have been able to determine the presence of syphilis when other signs have disappeared—and often when the patient has no knowledge of its presence. For this reason every complete and thorough medical examination should include these tests. A little blood taken from the patient's arm is all that's required to make the tests.

Fortified with these discoveries health authorities have been waging a winning fight against social diseases. Every year increasing numbers of men, women and children are being restored to health and happiness. These numbers will increase more rapidly as individuals can be made to realize the serious consequences which may result from these infections. Infected persons and those who have been exposed to infection should seek experienced medical attention at once.

Good medical treatment for either gonorrhea or syphilis, including Wassermann and Kahn blood and other necessary laboratory tests, can be secured within your means from an experienced family physician, or from the Public Health Institute. Treatment also is available through the Institute and many free clinics for those without funds.

The Public Health Institute was organized more than ten years ago to combat "social diseases" (syphilis and gonorrhea) in Chicago. Every facility necessary for competent and reliable medical service is provided. Members of its medical staff are experienced and are registered by the State. All treatment and advice are given by these men and women physicians.

The fees are within the reach of all. The first examination is only $3.00, and includes Wassermann and Kahn blood and other laboratory tests. Six consecutive treatments in the Urological or Gynecological Departments for $4.00. Examination and treatment are available to those without immediate funds. No one is turned away because of inability to pay.

More details of this subject will be found in Leaflets Nos. 1 and 2 sent free in plain envelope on request.

Announcement . . . This advertisement has been submitted to and been approved by the Medical Advisory Board which has been formed at the invitation of the Trustees. It is published by a health agency established for public service to inform the public of the dangers of "social diseases," of the importance of securing good medical care, and the facilities whereby this can be obtained.

ON THIS Washington's birthday, resolve to be true to the motor you bought. Have no embarrassing confessions to make that you have allowed the wrong kind of gas to chop down its efficiency.

Your high-compression engine was designed to use only a proper non-knocking fuel. In no other way can you enjoy what the car-maker promised you — nimblest get-away — greatest power-pull — smoothest, most economical glide on the straight-aways

Change now, if you have been forcing it to get along with gas that is rough and ill-firing — that knocks so you flinch from accelerating — that can be quieted only by retarding the spark below the point of smart response and profitable power-yield.

Better Performance from Medium Compression, too

If your older type motor clanks from carbon or is poor starting or is stuttery in power delivery, try the marvelous smoothing, quieting, power-increasing benefits of this "go" gas. Response will be immediate.

[ENTRIES ON THIRD SPORTS PAGE.]

The sectional campaign for Golden Gloves sweeps into the final week tomorrow in five states. Seven days after 168 amateur boxers, qualifiers in 13 cities and three metropolitan sections, will inaugurate a three night tournament of champions at the Coliseum.

This field in these bouts on March 1, and 4 will be cut to the 32 most courageous and best drilled boys, four in each weight division. Then, on March 11, at the Stadium, the eight Golden Gloves champions will be determined.

These preparations naturally are regarded as secondary to the fourth intercity series between New York and Chicago in Madison Square Garden March 26, but the thousands who have seen the qualifiers in city and state in action probably regard the preliminary bouts as climactic. In truth, Golden Gloves tournaments are a series of climaxes.

Interest Is Widespread.

Daily reports from Davenport, Ia., from Springfield, Ill., Vincennes, Ind., and Benton Harbor, Mich.—to bound Golden Gloves territory—have concurred in telling of intense interest manifested by huge crowds gathered to applaud local heroes. And Chicago, which already has chosen its west and north section qualifiers, has led all.

Friday night at the Rainbo Fronton, 1331 an all time sectional throng, watched the north Chicago finals. Hundreds stood for hours, banked densely along distant walls, to cheer boxing's greatest show.

Tomorrow night at White City Chicago's biggest preliminary meet opens. Three hundred and twenty boys from Joliet, Ill., and Hammond, Ind., in the Calumet region, and the far reaches of the south side have entered this tournament. A team of four boys from Cleveland, O., also will fight. Thus far the call of Golden Gloves has reached.

Extended to Three Nights.

The White City sectional, originally planned for two nights, has been extended. Four weight divisions, from 115 to 135 pounds inclusive will compete tomorrow. On Tuesday the featherweights on to the heavyweights are scheduled. Wednesday night the semi-final and final qualifying bouts in all divisions will be staged.

While Chicago completes its sectional combat, four Indiana cities, Kokomo, Fort Wayne, Gary, and Lafayette, and Milwaukee, Wis., will name champions. Then comes the tournament of champions and the crowning of central states winners.

Competition everywhere is keener, but Chicago probably awaits the Gary

Watch Champions Win Their Crowns!

Eight young fighters—champions in every sense of the word—will be on top when the last Golden Gloves bout is fought. Each lad will be up there because he carries a wallop in his mitt and reckless courage in his heart.

You can watch these boys win their titles if you act right now and get tickets before all the good ones are snapped up. The champions of fifteen cities, together with the best battlers of Chicago, will fight at the Coliseum on March 2, 3 and 4—and you can see them for $1, $1.50 or $2.

Then the winners meet at the Chicago Stadium on March 11 to determine the team which will go to New York. You can be in on this grand climax for $1, $2 or $3.

Tickets are on sale at the Tribune Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street, or you can mail in your order today with a check. Address it to the Ticket Manager, Golden Gloves tournament, The Tribune, Chicago.

KEEPING UP WITH THE TRAVELING SOX, CUBS

Hack Wilson and Kiki Cuyler find a way to break monotony of travel. They've put this portable phonograph to work.

Bob Weiland has a new incentive to become a regular member of the White Sox pitching staff—his bride, and she is confident he will succeed.

Riggs Stephenson, Cub left fielder, attempts to brush up on his literature, but Kiki Cuyler strolls in to ask if the quiet southerner wouldn't like a little company. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

Lester Bell and Woody English were so eager to start training they used the aisle of the Cubs' special car to steal march on their teammates. Bell is enacting the role of a catcher and English, with a golf club serving as a bat, is ready to "hit one a mile."

A PITCHER NAMED PAGE IS FOUND IN WHITE SOX PARTY

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 21.—When the White Sox advance squad departed from the home town this morning an added starter was discovered. He's a left handed pitcher who has had plenty of experience. He has pitched in the Big Ten and played football and basketball in that organization. Moreover, he has coached in the same western conference. The name is Pat Page, University of Chicago, '10, football coach at Indiana until recent difficulties arose, and assistant to A. A. Stagg on the Midway starting April 1.

Page joined up at the last minute because Donie Bush, Sox manager, had instilled into him some of that Hoosier fellowship of which Pat had almost been denuded as the result of his difficulties with overemphatic alumni at Bloomington.

Four Rookies in Party.

Except for the presence of Page the White Sox getaway was just another one of those things. With only six players in the expedition, four of them rookies, naturally there wasn't much excitement. However, there seemed to be plenty of interested folks at the station platforms as the train slipped down through Illinois during the afternoon. Some of them might have been trying to get a glimpse of Hack Wilson. Last year when the Cubs were going west a party at some stop in Kansas asked to see Art Shires. Things like that can happen both ways.

A couple of other fellows joined the getaway party at Chicago. They are John Rychlock, an outfielder, and James Phillips, a catcher. Both are from the Pullman team. They want a tryout and so they will wear White Sox uniforms at San Antonio until their vacation expires. The trouble is that even if they prove worthy the Sox can't sign them. Under the recent draft agreement the majors must keep their hands off free agents, college players excepted. The former are reserved for the minors who had to get a break some place.

McKain, Tate Join Team.

When Bush took his party out of here this evening over the Missouri Pacific, he had two more athletes under his wing. One arrival was Hal McKain, right handed pitcher who is starting his third season with the Comiskey troops. McKain started to go well last summer and then suffered an injury. There is reason to believe that he will be of more than ordinary help in the impending campaign. If he is otherwise, he undoubtedly will be released. The other fellow checking in was Catcher Benny Tate, who has no reason to worry about his status.

Travel for the members of the party will continue until 8:30 tomorrow evening, provided there is no delay in the scheduled arrival at San Antonio, Tex. Spring labors will start Monday morning.

BRAXTON SIGNS.

Greensboro, N. C., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Garland Braxton, southpaw hurler, announced today he had come to terms with the Chicago White Sox, and tonight he left for the spring training camp at San Antonio.

Equipoise Heads 130 Kentucky Derby Entries

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—C. V. Whitney's Equipoise, which led all the 2 year olds as a money winner last season with a total of $156,835, tops the list of 130 thoroughbreds nominated for the 57th running of the $50,000 added Kentucky Derby, which will take place at Churchill Downs on Saturday, May 16.

COL. MATT WIN.

Nominations were announced today by Col. Matt J. Winn, president of the American Turf association and executive director of Churchill Downs.

Between 15 and 20 of the 130 horses named probably will go to the post for the annual American turf classic. Most of the remainder will be scratched for one reason or another long before Derby day.

Other Favorites Named.

The Greentree stable's Twenty Grand, and A. C. Bostwick's Mate, which have with Equipoise, ruled as the three favorites in the winter books, were nominated along with a string of other stars which included Vander Pool, Don Leon, Oswego, Siskin, Ladder, and Insco.

The Belair stud of William Woodward, under whose colors Gallant Fox raced to victory over Gallant Knight and Ned O. last season, Mrs. Payne Whitnee's Greentree stable, and Mrs. Charles M. Amory's Sagamore stable led in numbers nominated with five each. The Belair entry included three stalwart sons of Sir Galahad III., Ormsby, Sir Ashley and Launcelot.

Equipoise built up a record as a juvenile which entitles him to the consideration he received in the winter wagering. The chestnut son of Pennant-Swinging started 16 times, won eight races, and finished second five times and third once. Among his triumphs were the Juvenile Stakes at Belmont park, Great American stakes at Aqueduct, and the Pimlico futurity.

Mate Consistent Winner.

Mate's performance was impressive, as far as victories were concerned, as he was first 8 times, second 4, and third twice in 15 starts. His winnings totaled only little more than one-third of those of Equipoise, amounting to $58,650.

A number of the entries won fame on Chicago tracks last season. Insco scored his most notable victory for Owner Griffin Watkins when he captured the Post and Paddock stakes at Arlington Park.

Siskin, hope of the Nevada Stock farm, was a consistent performer in the Chicago area. The son of Epinard-Ruddy Light won the Hyde Park stakes at Arlington, the Joliet handicap at Lincoln fields, and finished second to Don Leon in the Chicago Juvenile handicap.

Don Leon Makes Money.

The Juvenile handicap was Don Leon's only startling performance in Chicago, but he had great success at other tracks, winning a total of $44,443 for his owner, R. W. Collin.

Following is last year's record of the leading stake winners which have been nominated for the Derby:

George Simpson Loses 2 Dashes in Australian Meet

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Feb. 21.—(AP)—J. Carlton, Australia's Olympic runner, today defeated George Simpson of Ohio State in both the 100 and 220 yard dashes in the invitation sprints at the Wellington track games. Running against a strong wind, Carlton won the 100 in 10 2-5 and the 220 around a curve, in 22 1-5 seconds.

Harlow Rothert of Stanford won the shot put, with a toss of 51 feet 1½ inches.

Capt. Campbell Is Knighted by King for Speed Record

LONDON, Feb. 21.—[U. P.]—King George today conferred a knighthood on Capt. Malcolm Campbell, the world's motor car speed king.

The knighthood was in recognition of Campbell's accomplishment at Daytona Beach, Fla., where he set a world speed record by driving 245.73 miles an hour in his car, Blue Bird II, on Feb. 5.

The ceremony, in which the racing driver, who came home to England from his conquests in America as a popular conquering hero, was at Buckingham palace.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, Campbell talked to the newspapermen 40 minutes about King George.

"He amazed me by the number of technical questions he asked about the car. He wanted to know about the engine, and what about skidding at such high speeds.

"Then he wanted me to tell him just what it felt like to travel 245 miles an hour, and how I could see at such speed.

"When I talked about the United States and some other subjects I told him about seeing the Harvey-Dundee fight [Vince Dundee beat Len Harvey, English boxer in Madison Square], the king immediately showed remarkable knowledge of boxing."

"Men like Campbell and Lindbergh," Ambassador Dawes said, "are better than a thousand ambassadors and 50,000 politicians."

Campbell gave credit for his achievement to Miss Marion Carstairs, who supplied the financial assistance necessary for the speed trials. She furnished $50,000.

North Central Wins, 36-25; Regains Lead in Little 19

North Central college regained the lead in the Little Nineteen basketball race and practically clinched the championship by defeating Western State Teachers college of Macomb at Naperville last night, 36 to 25. North Central led at the half, 18 to 11.

Badgers Win Quadrangular; Ohio Second

Wisconsin's well balanced track team, which picked up points in all events except two hurdle races, won the eighth annual quadrangular track and field meet at Patten gym last night with a total of 46 points. Ohio trailed in second place with 42 points. Chicago was in third place with 22 points, and Northwestern finished fourth with 20 points.

BILL HENKE.

Coach Tom Jones' cardinal jerseyed athletes clinched the meet by their preponderance of power in the shotput and the two mile run. In the former they won the first three places. In the two mile, they won first, second and fourth.

Keller High Point Man.

Jack Keller, Ohio's sophomore star, won high point honors with 11 points, winning both the low and high hurdles and picking up a fourth place in the sprints.

Sammy Behr of Wisconsin participated in the only record breaking of the evening when he tossed the shot 46 feet, 1 inch to better his own mark of 45 feet, 10 inches set last year. Bill Henke of Wisconsin tied the 40 yard dash record of :04.5 held by Simpson of Ohio State.

The Buckeyes pulled a surprise by winning the one mile relay. Northwestern's quartet, which figured to be a contender in this event, had to be

CUB THIRD BASE WORRY THING OF PAST, SAYS BELL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 21.—The Cubs' worries about a third baseman capable of carrying the club through the season seem to be at an end. That is the most important bit of gossip aboard the train carrying the Cubs' second squad, composed of outfielders and infielders, toward Catalina island and spring training.

The authority for this encouraging news is Lester Bell, present incumbent at third base. If any other is better fitted to discourse on the subject, let him step forward.

Bell parted company with a pair of balky tonsils some time before Christmas and immediately set about to find out if the arm that kept him on the bench most of last year reacted to the operation.

Kink Has Disappeared.

But let him tell it himself: "I never knew there was anything wrong with my tonsils, but there was, so I had them out," he explained. "Then I started in throwing, and I've been throwing for two months. Of course, it had to be inside where there wasn't any wind resistance, but if the kink was still there I would have felt it, and I haven't felt the least catch or any pain. I really cut loose, too."

If actual outdoor work at Catalina shows the recovery to be a fact, the development will aid Cub pennant chances materially, for Bell is a heady fellow and a hitter of ability.

The party, under the guidance of Dan Cahill, "undersecretary" of the club, is due to make the trip to Catalina island on the noon boat Tuesday. Charlie Grimm and Clarence Blair joined the players here.

Barton a Rangy Fellow.

Vincent Barton, the new outfielder from Baltimore, is a fine looking, rangy fellow and a natural born mixer. He became involved in the first bridge game along with Riggs Stephenson, Kiki Cuyler and Bell. Bill Jurgens, another recruit, is smaller and a more retiring sort, but immediately became one of the gang.

Hack Wilson reported himself only six pounds overweight. Stephenson looks better than at any time last year and somewhat thinner. Woody English seems to have packed a few pounds on his frame. Cliff Heathcote also has added poundage, most of it resembling a toothbrush and adorning his upper lip.

CUBS PLAY TODAY

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Avalon, Cal., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Cub pitchers who think they are born hitters—and there's not a one of 'em who doesn't think more should be made of his slugging talents—those Cub pitchers, we say, are going to have their big moment in honor of George Washington tomorrow.

Pat Malone and Gabby Hartnett got to worrying about nothing being planned to celebrate the birthday of the father of our country and asked Manager Hornsby what could be done about it, and Rogers, a great patriot in his own right, came back with the suggestion that a ball game be played tomorrow afternoon, one team to be

Iowa City, Ia., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Frank Marshall, veteran Northwestern guard, stood at almost any given distance from the basket tonight and dropped in field goals, thereby giving the Big Ten leaders a 40 to 30 victory over the lowly University of Iowa quintet.

The Purple guard scored 18 points, including eight field goals. Almost all of his baskets were made on long shots which were arched scarcely at all.

Hawkeyes Make It Battle.

The Hawkeyes, tenants of the Big Ten cellar, pulled a surprise in the first half when they battled the Wildcats on even terms most of the time and even held a three point lead at one time. Northwestern pulled out in front, 21 to 19, before the half ended, however.

It was the desperate floor plays and brilliant shooting of Joe Mowry, forward and acting captain of the Iowans, that kept the Hawkeyes in the running during the first half and enabled them to hold a 15 to 12 lead at one time. Marshall, the Wildcat star, matched his efforts, however, scoring ten points before intermission against the nine for Mowry.

Immediately after the recess, the Purple quintet opened up a barrage which put them ten points in front of the Hawkeyes, 29 to 19, before Iowa scored when Rogers dribbled down the floor.

Northwestern had struck its stride, however, and at no time thereafter were the Hawkeyes closer than nine points to the Purple.

Riel Also Stars.

The rangy Wildcats flashed a smooth, easy passing game, keeping the ball above the reach of the shorter Hawkeyes, particularly in the last half.

Marshall coupled his uncanny basket eye with bursts of dazzling speed to romp away with honors for the Northwestern quintet, although Capt. Riel turned in a fine floor game. Joe Reiff, the Purple sophomore star, was held to two field goals and a single free throw, and missed four other chances from the charity line.

ILLINOIS, 45; CHICAGO, 22

Champaign, Ill., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Illinois won its fourth straight basketball victory tonight when the refurbished Illini ran wild against Chicago, which was overwhelmed by a score of 45 to 22.

The Maroons held the count down to 19-11 for the first half by making seven out of ten free throws while the Illini converted only three out of nine attempts into points.

In the second half, after a slow start, the Illini machine began to click and made the game a runaway. Parsons and Ashley went out on personals early in the second half, materially weakening the Midway squad. However the Illini were hitting the net from all points of the floor. Capt. Harper, Bennett, and Babe Kamp led the foray.

content with third. The Maroons finished in third place, but were disqualified.

Warne Wins Pole Vault.

Tom Warne of Northwestern was an easy winner in the pole vault with a leap of 12 feet 3 inches. Three other competitors, Lovshin and Fox of Wisconsin and Bierney of Chicago, went out at 12 feet. Warne, who was handicapped with an injured ankle, made one attempt at 12 feet 9 inches but failed.

The mile went to Dale Letts of Chicago in 4:30.2. The Maroon ace went into the lead on the last lap and spurted to an easy victory. The battle for second place was a heated one between Brainard of Chicago and Thompson of Wisconsin, the former gaining the verdict.

Wisconsin took most of the points in the shotput, Behr winning first place with a heave of 46 feet 1 inch, and Gnabah and Simmons placing second and third. Fried of Ohio State finished fourth. Behr's effort broke his own meet record of 45 feet 10 inches, set last year.

Ohio State won the two mile relay, largely through the work of Bloor, who ran as anchor man. The Buckeyes were in third place when Bloor started the last half mile. He made up the 10 yards which separated him from first place in the initial lap, and finished five yards ahead of Burgess of Northwestern.

Ted Shaw of Wisconsin leaped 6 feet 2 inches to win the high jump. He missed at 6 feet 4 inches in an effort to set a new meet record. The record of 6 feet 3⅝ inches is held by Burg of Chicago.

Romp Over Line Together.

Thompson and Wright, both of Wisconsin, clasped hands as they crossed the finish line in the two mile race to win in a dead heat. Their time was 10:03.9. Brainard of Chicago finished third, five yards behind the winner. Cortwright of Wisconsin was fourth.

Jack Keller, Ohio sophomore, was an easy victor in the 40 yard high hurdles, which he stepped in :05.3. His teammate, John Black, followed in second place. Summaries:

TWO MILE RUN—Thompson and Wright, Wisconsin, tied for first and second; Brainard, Chicago, third; Cortwright, Wisconsin, fourth. Time, 10:03.9.

PURDUE, 46; WISCONSIN, 27

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Purdue fairly loafed to a 46 to 27 victory over Wisconsin here tonight as the Boilermakers did their best to conserve their energy for the tough battle with Michigan here Monday. From the first minute of the game there was no doubt as to the outcome, for Harry Kellar and John Wooden, working in combination with a smooth passing trio of mates, formed an offensive attack that the Badgers could not stop.

In the first eleven minutes of the game Purdue ran up a 14 to 0 lead. The Badgers finally scored when Poser slipped down the floor to make a basket.

Wooden and Kellar were in form during the first three quarters of the battle, when Purdue was piling up a 20 to 2 lead that put the game on ice. The Badgers, in their frantic efforts to stop Purdue's offense, became overzealous in their guarding and committed frequent fouls that the Boilermakers took advantage of in piling up their lead.

With five minutes of the first half yet to play, Lambert started making frequent substitutions and the Badgers were more effective for the remainder of the game.

Wooden took the high point honors of the evening with five field goals and a like number of free throws, while Steen, who was effective from long range i. the second half, kept the game from being an utter rout by sinking six long field goals and a pair of free throws.

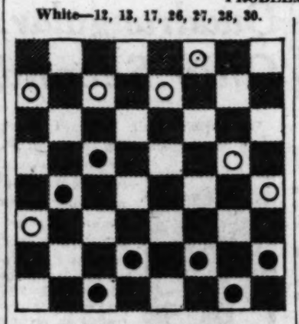
CHECKERS

By NEWELL W. BANKS

(American Champion)

PROBLEM NO. 7.

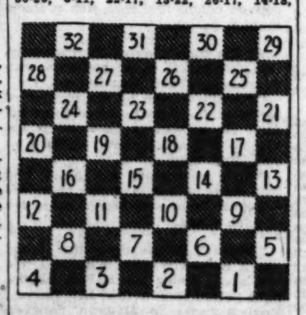
White—12, 13, 17, 26, 27, 28, 30.



Black—1, 3, 5, 6, 7, 16, 19.

Black to move and win. 19-23A, 27-18, 3-8, 12-3, 16-19, 3-10, 6-31, 17-14, 1-6, 30-26, 31-26, 26-21, 24-22, Black wins. The above ending occurred during a simultaneous exhibition at Miami, Fla., last week.

A—6-10 and 7-10 both lead to powerful Black endings. However, the text move forces a winning shot at once and again proves the weakness of the White single piece on square 12. Black uses the piece on 12 for backing in this position.



GAME NO. 7—CROSS.

23-18-A	6-9	32-23	12-26	25-21
8-11	26-22-B	13-22	31-13	17-22
27-23-B	9-13	28-9	8-11	21-17
4-8-C	26-23	6-13	24-19	22-26
23-19	1-6	29-25	11-15	17-13
9-14-D	30-25	13-17	19-10	26-31
18-9	15-18	21-14	7-14	6-9
5-14	22-15	10-17	13-6	Drawn

A—This move forms the cross opening, which is one of the most common on the board and is played by all classes of players. In most variations Black has a slight advantage, yet the game admits of many beautiful strokes which win for White.

B—This is the usual White defense, yet 26-23 leads to a safe game also.

C—Black now has two other good attacks: 10-14, or 9-13, the latter leading to a complicated midgame.

D—This is by far the safest line of play for the student. However, 10-14 leads to an excellent Black game.

E—Best at this stage; 17-13 is often played and is met as follows: 11-16, 12-6, 16-23, 26-19, 2-9, 25-22F, 9-13, 30-26, 8-11, 22-17, 13-22, 26-17, 14-18, 17-14, 10-17, 21-14, 7-10, 14-7, 3-10, and White must use the utmost care to escape disaster.

F—This is not the best White move, but is a natural one. However, it leads to a very weak ending. The following is the correct continuation: 24-20, 15-24, 28-19, 8-11, 26-22, 11-15, 22-18, 14-23, 19-16, 12-19, 21-17, 13-22, 25-2, 10-14, 20-16, 14-17, 16-11, 17-22, 11-7, 3-10, 2-6, or 2-7, both lead to a draw.

There are several ways Black can play the midgame after the 24-20 exchange, yet all seem to lead to a very equal position. The cross game should be given special attention, as many players prefer it to the single corner opening against 11-15. Many players make a special study of the double corner opening where the opening move is 9-14, as it limits the White play, yet it is not so good an opening move as 11-15.

Bill to Abolish Indiana Prep Sport Body Advances

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—In spite of an unprecedented jam of bills the Indiana senate here this afternoon advanced to third reading the bill which would deprive the Indiana High School Athletic association of control of Hoosier prep sports, including the annual state basketball tournament, and vest it in a commission under the state department of education.

SWEDES BATTLE DETROIT SOCCER ELEVEN TODAY

Meet at De Paul Field in National Cup Series.

The Swedish-Americans of Chicago, International league champions, and the Workers' club of Detroit, who played a 4-4 tie at Detroit last Sunday, will replay their second round National cup match at De Paul field, Sheffield and Webster avenues, at 2:45 p. m. today.

These two clubs, the Chicago Brickies, Slavia of Cleveland, and the Ben Miller club of St. Louis, are the only western entrants left in the title chase.

The Detroit club is composed mostly of Scots, and has some of the finest booters in the west. Sprott, the goalkeeper, distinguished himself by his great display against the Glasgow Rangers. McLaughlin, Rae, Syme, and Neilson are other stars.

Granquist, goalkeeper, is given credit for keeping the Swedes in the competition. In the game last Sunday he saved two of the three penalty kicks awarded against the Chicagoans. Firpo Kvist, who was hurt, will return to the game today.

The Bricklayers, who put Sparta out of the United States title race last Sunday, will be in action on the west side, meeting the Olympias at 47th avenue and 19th street. Hugh Hill and Pete Quinn will perform for the Brickies, replacing Willie MacDean and Tom Scott, who have injured legs.

Lineups for the game at De Paul field:

DE PAUL TO DROP BASEBALL FROM SPORT SCHEDULE

De Paul university will not have a baseball team this year. As a result of the unsuccessful season last year, officials of the school yesterday announced that discontinuance of the sport would be decided at a meeting Tuesday.

"It is certain that the board will vote to abandon baseball," said Athletic Director Jim Kelly. "Last spring only twelve candidates reported for the team, and we expected less this season.

"Our baseball season is short. Four or five games make up our schedule. Last year we played Valparaiso, North Central, Lake Forest, and St. Viator."

In the WAKE of the NEWS

"WE POINT WITH PRIDE."

SHORTLY before laid low by the flu, The Wake published a small notice in this column at the request of a Helper, 72 years old, who had forgotten the words of "Grandmother's Old Arm Chair," or "Granny's Chair." Although we date back fairly well, we never had heard of the song, described as popular 50 years ago, but we thought the notice might bring a response or two.

The result was one of the most surprising in our long career in conducting this column. There were exactly 55 replies with the song in full or in part. Consider that The Wake, appears on the sporting page, and is fundamentally a sporting column, we consider it a marked example of the wide variety of readers, since these replies came from many localities. This is not a tooting of The Wake's horn exactly, but if advertising were carried in this column per use, we'd certainly tell advertisers about it.

Naturally we regret that so many persons took all this trouble, but we think they, too, will be gratified by this example of The Wake family's loyalty and willingness to coöperate with one another. It certainly was very gratifying to us, and we thank one and all.

From Erie, Pa., John Kelley, former TRIBUNE police reporter, who retired after 40 years' service, writes: "The proper title of the ditty is 'Grandmother's Old Arm Chair.' I first heard it 50 years ago when I was selling shirts for a firm at Canton, O. That was 5 years before I broke into the newspaper game."

The first and last verse and chorus are subjoined:

My grandmother, she, at the age of eighty-three,
One day in May was taken ill and died;
And after she was dead, the will, of course, was read,
By a lawyer as we all stood by his side.
To my brother, it was found, she had left a hundred pound,
The same unto my sister, I declare,
But when it came to me, the lawyer said, "I see
She has left to you her old arm chair."

CHORUS.

How they tittered, how they chaffed,
How my brother and my sister laughed,
When they heard the lawyer declare
Granny had only left to me her old arm chair.
One night the chair fell down. When I picked it up I found
The seat had fallen out upon the floor;
And there, to my surprise, I saw before my eyes
A lot of notes, two thousand pounds or more.
When my brother heard of this, the fellow, I confess,
Went nearly mad with rage and tore his hair.
But I only laughed at him, and said unto him, "Jim,
Don't you wish you had the old arm chair."

Because of the wide response to this song, perhaps you will be interested in names of Helpers who supplied the words. [Note the different localities from which they came]:

SOUTH BEND BOY JUGGLES APPLES, DEVELOPS PUNCH

Johnny Nate Seeks to Win Golden Gloves.

BY HOWARD BARRY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 21.—You might think that life would be just one cabbage after another to a boy who drives a delivery truck for his dad's wholesale fruit and vegetable house. But there's more to it than that—for Johnny Nate—because while's he's rassling tomato boxes and apple barrels and cucumber crates he's thinking of some new punch he's going to try on Bill Magarrall out at Notre Dame after his day's work is done.

Both boys have won places on the team which will represent South Bend in the Golden Gloves tournament of champions to be held at the Chicago Coliseum, and they spend their spare moments helping one another polish up ring technique.

Is Senior at Notre Dame.

Magarrall is a senior in the college of journalism at Notre Dame and hails from Pittsburgh, where he took the city flyweight championship five years ago. Since that time he has moved into the bantam class and has continued putting away opponents with sufficient gusto to win the bantamweight championship of Notre Dame for two consecutive seasons.

Magarrall's comparatively long experience in the ring makes him a mighty rough partner for Johnny Nate, who holds the flyweight title. But even so it's probable that Johnny has to ask very few pointers from his more seasoned mate, because his record, though brief, speaks eloquently for his skill. He has been in the ring only fourteen times, but every bout has resulted in a victory.

Nates a Fighting Family.

Johnny is strictly a home town boy, having been born and raised in South Bend. It was his brother George, now a professional, who got him interested in the game, which seems to run in the family. His younger brother, Joe, also swung a formidable pair of gloves in the sectional tournament, but couldn't quite make the grade. Then there's cousin Joe Nate, and cousins Sammy and Rocco Papandria, all of whom feel quite at home in the ring.

Johnny is planning to follow in the footsteps of his brother and become a professional. He showed that he has the makings of a good one by the way in which he slugged out four victories in winning his place on the Golden Gloves team.

He began the tournament by taking a decision from Ronald Nelson of Elkhart. Then he knocked out Tony Gariat in the second round, and had Charles Christianson so helpless that the referee stopped the bout in the first round. He was given a real test under fire when he went up against Frankie Bodish, the defending champion. It was a close fight, but another victory for Johnny.

Who's on the Team.

Besides Nate and Magarrall, the South Bend team is made up of George Van Der Hayden, Joe Veney, John Rudendy, Emery Nemeth, Henry Robbins, and Roy Spoober. It's a team which has drawn young fellows from a variety of callings, including as it does a radio advertising man, a farm equipment mechanic, a truck driver, a former telegraph messenger boy, and a university student. But when they climb into the Coliseum ring and stand there beneath the white lights while the announcer bellows an introduction, they won't be radio men or college students or truck drivers. They'll just be fighters.

BOBBY M'LEAN TO SKATE HERE TOMORROW NIGHT

An attempt to revive interest in professional ice skating will be make tomorrow night when Bobby McLean undertakes to break several world's sprint records as part of the program in the tristate ice carnival and hockey tournament at the Stadium.

McLean, one of the best professional speed skaters in the world, will try to lower three of his own records in races against time. He hopes to receive sufficient public encouragement to warrant bringing over McGovern, Minneapolis; Ben Ansickley, Cleveland; Harry Flemming, Boston; Bob Hearn, New York, and Francis Allen of Chicago together in a series of professional races here.

All of these men have signified their willingness to compete in the Stadium or on an outdoor rink here. Such a meeting would be for the world's championship, McLean explained. The last professional skating championships were held at Saranac Lake in 1924.

In addition to McLean's record breaking attempts, tomorrow night's program will feature a round robin hockey tourney between teams from Milwaukee, Detroit, and Chicago for the tristate championship. The games will be thirty minutes long and will be followed by public skating.

600 Service Men to Carry Packs in Long Race Today

Six hundred men wearing the uniform of either the army or navy, and carrying regulation army packs, will run over a two and one-half mile course at Washington park at 3:30 p. m. today.

Every military unit in Chicago will be represented in the race. The 132d infantry has entered fifteen ten men teams. The 131st infantry and 8th infantry each have ten teams wearing their colors, the Naval Militia has a team, the 202d coast artillery and 122d field artillery six. Division Special troops and the 124th field artillery four each, and the 108th engineers and the 108th medical regiment are represented by one team each.

The start and finish will be just west of the bridle path at the 124th Field Artillery armory, 5200 Cottage Grove avenue.

COME ON, YOU CHAMPIONS! PEORIA TEAM'S READY

STRUGGLE FOR GOLDEN GLOVES NEARS CLIMAX

and Milwaukee bouts with greater interest. Gary has contributed inter city champions in other years, and it is hoped the steel city once more will strengthen the western forces which invade Madison Square Garden.

Wisconsin Strong Ally.

Milwaukee, center for the first elimination tournament ever held in Wisconsin, long has been reputed a stronghold of amateur boxing. And the Badger state is a welcome ally in intersectional combat.

The Wisconsin meet starts Thursday night, continues Friday with preliminary contests, and closes on Saturday with eight championship matches. The tournament is sponsored by the Milwaukee bureau of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

LAFAYETTE FINALS TUESDAY

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—The final night of the most popular sport spectacle Lafayette has ever witnessed will be staged in the local armory Tuesday night, when eight champions of the Lafayette Journal and Courier-American Legion Golden Gloves tournament will be crowned.

Twenty-six fighters will battle for trips to Chicago to compete in the CHICAGO TRIBUNE tournament and medals which are being awarded by the local committee. Every one of the eighty fighters taking part in the Lafayette tournament has been presented with a sweater.

Forty-four hundred people have witnessed the first elimination cards and at least twenty-five hundred more will attend Tuesday night's eighteen bouts.

The general opinion here is that this year's team will be much better than the one which made the trip to Chicago last year. Jimmy Fidler, Jack McClary, Tudy Fromer, L. R. Harvey, Charles Clark, John Binford, and several others appear good enough to give the Chicago boys everything in the way of fighting that they will care to look at.

NINETEEN WIN AT FT. WAYNE

Fort Wayne, Ind., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Nineteen boys will battle Monday night in the Gort Wayne Journal Gazette-CHICAGO TRIBUNE Golden Gloves boxing tournament finals for the eight championships. The nineteen fighters won the right to compete in the finals by winning their bouts last night.

Boxers remaining in the tournament are:

FLYWEIGHTS—Wendall Bupp and Richard Hurst.
BANTAMWEIGHTS—Billy Evans and Harold Patterson.
FEATHERWEIGHTS—Russell Luce and Joe Liggett.
LIGHTWEIGHTS—Jimmy Romano, Mike Walker, and Clarence Welch.
WELTERWEIGHTS—Kenneth Manes, Bob Hosler, Kenneth Jordan, and Don Geller.

BETTY ROBINSON TO COMPETE IN INDOOR MEET

National track stars will compete in the first annual indoor meet of the Illinois National Guard and Naval Militia at the new 124th Field Artillery armory, 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue, tomorow night.

Betty Robinson, Olympic champion of the Illinois Women's Athletic club, and Myrtle Cook, Canadian titleholder, will compete in the 100 yard dash. Stella Walsh, who was scheduled to race against them, strained a tendon at Cleveland yesterday and will be unable to compete.

Marty Brill and Clarence Kaplan of Notre Dame will race against Pug Rentner, Dick Fency, and Bob Hails of Northwestern. Competing for the University of Chicago will be Marvin Pink, Everett Ramsay, and Ted Haydon.

Silver Skates Winners Seek Indoor Titles

The North American indoor speed skating tournament, to be held at the Chicago Stadium next Friday and Saturday under the auspices of the Norwegian-American A. A., will be a battle between Silver Skates champions.

Twelve Silver Skates winners, five in the senior men, three in the senior women, two in the intermediate boys, and one in the junior boy classes are conceded excellent chances to capture the four championships.

Ross Robinson of Toronto, North American and Canadian champion; Charles Delpier of Detroit, five mile champion of the United States and Canada; O'Neil Farrel and Eddie Murphy, members of the 1928 Olympic team; Eddie Schroeder, Illinois indoor titleist and northwest outdoor champion; and Bill Minster are the Silver Skates winners who have a golden chance to take the senior title.

Elizabeth Du Bois, United States titleholder; Helen Bina, Illinois outdoor and southwestern indoor champion; and Eleanor Thiel, all of Chicago, are former Silver Skates winners in the running for the North American indoor crown.

Ed Stundl, winner of three pairs of Silver Skates and now intermediate champion of Canada and North America, is a slight favorite over Wilbur Marks, another Silver Skates winner, to take the title for boys under 18. Marks won the national championship at Oconomowoc, Wis. Victor Ronchetti, 1931 winner, will race in the junior division.

Art Staff, who won the first pair of Silver Skates in 1917, is expected to come here from Detroit to give an exhibition.

GAMES TONIGHT.
Chicago at Detroit. Philadelphia at Rangers.

The Tulsa Oilers, leaders of the American Hockey league race, will meet the Shamrocks tonight at the Stadium.

The Oilers bring with them five of the high scorers of the league, including Burr Williams, young defense man. Williams is the fourth high scorer of the circuit with 10 goals and 11 assists.

On their last appearance here the Oilers drubbed the Sramrocks, 7 to 3. But at that time the Shamrocks did not have Jack Riley and Ralph Taylor was on the bench with a broken bone in his ankle. Sunday night both these men will be in the game.

Two additions to the active Oiler lineup have been made since Tulsa's last appearance here. At goal, Tony Christello, who sat on the Tulsa bench for two years and a half before he got his chance, has been substituting for Red McCusker, who is incapacitated by injuries. On the forward line will be found Roy Powley, a swift youngster purchased from St. Louis. Powley pairs off with Metcalfe at the wings.

Sheppard, Moffat, and Wakeford are the Oilers' pony line, one of the fastest combinations in the circuit. Sheppard is third high scorer of the league. Heavier but equally effective is the Keats, Marker, La France combine.

Brydson, Shamrock forward and leading scorer in the league, will be eligible to play tonight, following a ruling by William F. Grant, league president. Brydson was given his third major penalty of the season for fighting last Thursday night at Buffalo and automatically suspended for one game. The Shamrocks protested because the penalty was assessed against Brydson while he was in the penalty box serving out a minor penalty. Grant decided in favor of the Chicago club.

Probable lineups:

Mulligan	D.	Williams
Taylor	D.	Hanson

CANADIENS WIN, 6-4.

MONTREAL, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Les Canadiens of Montreal tonight defeated the New York Americans, 6 to 4, in a National Hockey league game. The flying Frenchmen spotted their rivals four goals in the opening period, then rang up six counters in succession to win.

Normie Himes started scoring less than four minutes after the game started on a solo rush. Then Johnny Sheppard got two quick goals on passes from Hughes and Carson, and Bill Burch made it 4 to 0 on another solo.

Facing this bad situation, the Canadiens turned on all their speed and whittled the score to 4 to 3 before the period ended. Howie Morenz scored twice on Johnny Gagnon's passes and George Mantha added another goal. Al Mondou tied the count late in the second period and a three man play with Gagnon shooting put the world's champions ahead in the third. Aurel Joliat sank the final counter, sneaking away from an American rush in the last two minutes of play.

LEAFS WHIP BRUINS, 4-2.

TORONTO, Canada, Feb. 21.—(AP)—The Toronto Maple Leafs turned an unexpected trick tonight and downed the Boston Bruins, American division leaders of the National Hockey league, 4 to 2. The victory tightened the Leafs' grip on second place in the Canadian section.

There was not a dull moment in the entire 60 minutes as both tams skated at full speed through three periods to wind up with Boston's first defeat in ten games.

HAWKS TO MEET FALCONS IN FIGHT OVER 2ND PLACE

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—The Chicago Blackhawks will have their backs to the wall in tomorrow night's National Hockey league game with the Falcons. The Detroit team is tied with the New York Rangers for third place, the two teams trailing the Hawks by a margin of two games.

The battle for a place in the Stanley cup finals is the most desperate three teams have waged for years and the importance of the game, coupled with the fact that the Detroit team has defeated the Blackhawks easily in three out of four encounters, is expected to draw a new record crowd for Detroit hockey.

PARE AND HUNTER ON TILDEN TENNIS CARD AT STADIUM

Pro Net Stars to Clash Wednesday Night.

While Big Bill Tilden and Karel Kozeluh, the Czech professional star, will feature the program of professional tennis at the Chicago Stadium next Wednesday night, two other prominent players will appear. They are Emmett Pare, Chicago youth who attended Georgetown university, and Frank Hunter, former holder of the national doubles crown with Tilden.

Hunter has played the game for many years, although his business of conducting a string of newspapers in the east has kept him from playing extensively in tournaments. Hunter was born in 1894 and weighs 190 pounds. His great strength made it natural for him to adopt a hard driving game.

Ranked Among First Ten.

Hunter first crashed into the select ranks of the first ten players in 1922 at the age of 28. He rose to fifth place in 1923, but then dropped from among the leaders until 1927, when, after several seasons of playing under the tutelage of Tilden, he won second place in the rating list. He also was rated second in 1928 and 1929.

Emmett Pare was born in Chicago in 1908. He attended St. Mel's High school. Even while in high school Pare showed exceptional promise, except that his backhand was faulty and erratic. A couple of summers with Hinchcliffe, Yale coach and professional at Skokie Country club during the summer, ironed out the faults, and Pare now possesses one of the most accurate backhand shots in the game.

Stars in College Play.

Two years ago Pare advanced to the fifth round of the national intercollegiate championship, representing Georgetown. He was defeated after a bitter struggle by Berkeley Bell of Texas, who was ranked ninth in the country that year. Paired with Gregory Mangin, Pare went to the finals in the intercollegiate doubles.

Favor Walker to Beat Risko Again Tuesday

Miami, Fla., Feb. 21.—(AP)—The first of Miami's two winter fistic carnivals under the palms, featuring a ten round bout between Mickey Walker and Johnny Risko Tuesday night, drew the spotlight of preparations today with an assortment af ballyhoo stunts.

Their training completed, Walker and Risko joined in the demonstration of welcome to Max Schmeling, German holder of the world's heavyweight championship. The Teuton was greeted with flowers, music, and a parade on his arrival with his manager, Joe Jacobs, and two sparring mates.

On tour in the interests of the build-up for his title match with Young Stribling, probably at Chicago in June, Schmeling will appear on the Risko-Walker card in a three round exhibition. So will Stribling, who varied the monotony of training routine today by taking two newspaper friends for an airplane ride, during which he gave them a thrill by executing several vertical turns with his cabin plane.

Walker will concede upwards of 20 pounds to Risko, but the middleweight champion is favored to repeat the victory he scored over the Cleveland baker boy in Detroit. Risko, on the other hand, has trained faithfully and is confident of adding another upset to his record, besides spoiling Walker's heavyweight ambitions. Mickey will scale around 168.

LOYOLA TRACK TEAM DEFEATS ARMOUR, 55-22

New York, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Two track records fell by the wayside today as Judge Primrose from the Oakland stable and W. L. France's Morsel sped to victory in feature races at Hialeah park, Miami.

Judge Primrose cut one-fifth of a second off Kayo's mark for the Nursery course [75 feet less than three furlongs] in winning the Nursery stakes, while Morsel trimmed three-fifths of a second off the mile and 70 yard record in the Fort Lauderdale handicap. Judge Primrose's time was 32 1-5 seconds and Morsel's 1:41 3-5.

In winning the purse of $2,790 in the juvenile event, Judge Primrose defeated 14 of the best two year olds in training. Three lengths back at the finish trailed F. A. Carreaud's Va Carriendo, coupled with the winner in the field, while E. B. McLean's Port Den followed in third position.

Morsel Whips Sandy Ford.

Morsel, odds-on favorite, took the measure of M. Shea's Sandy Ford, one-eyed victor in the Dixie last year, and F. E. Brant's Eli Weir.

Bargello, C. V. Whitney's candidate for the $100,000 Agua Caliente handicap, made his second start since returning to the races, but finished far back of Dewey Bentham's Martis in the Old Hickory purse at Jefferson Park, New Orleans. Although the odds-on favorite at 50 cents on the dollar, the five year old Whitney horse could do no better than fourth in the field of six as the Colgate stable's Blimp and George Collins' Thistle Ann followed Martis across the line. The Bentham sprinter was an outsider in the wagering, paying $20.20 for $2.

Dolan Wins Claiming Race.

Dolan, which once was good enough to win the Brooklyn handicap, dropped down into a cheap claiming class to gain an easy decision in the mile and one-sixteenth feature at Oriental Park, Havana. Installed the favorite at 2 to 1, the seven year old horse raced over the heavy route in 1:53 3-5 to beat J. E. Small's Voyage and Evening Sky from the Paradise Stock farm.

WOODLAWN GETS READY FOR 1931 BOWLING CLASSIC

City's Pin Stars to Roll Saturday, Sunday.

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

Two important bowling tournaments, one for the city's best pin crashers and the other for ex-service men and their friends, are in the offing.

Next Saturday and Sunday the Woodlawn Recreation alleys, 6225 Cottage Grove avenue, will stage its annual individual classic, which is considered one of the best events of its kind in Chicago. All leading pin bowlers have competed in past tourneys, and Tom Crocombe, manager of the Woodlawn alleys, says they'll all be back to seek the first prize of $100. Total pins for four games across eight alleys will decide the winner. Prizes aggregate $800.

Opening on March 21 and continuing Saturdays and Sundays until April 6, will be the Cook county American Legion tournament on the Neva alleys, 2362 North Neva avenue. The event, sponsored by the Gen. George Bell Jr. Post No. 716, will be decided in three classes, namely, A, B and C. The latter class is for women bowlers who are friends of the American Legion.

Pace setters in the Woodlawn major league built up a stronger advantage in their last assaults on the wood. The leading S. & L. Motors held their two game margin over the Brucks, as both won a pair of contests. Quinliven tops the circuit with a 204 average. Next are Weisner and Wright, both with 203, who passed Mericich, 202. Receipts at Chicago for Monday are estimated at 14,000 cattle, 61,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep.

Yesterday's meager supply of hogs sold at steady to 10c higher prices, medium and weighty stock showing the most improvement. The extreme top at $7.65 was down 10c, due partly to quality, while the general average advanced 5c at $7.10, comparing with a top of $7.85 and average of $6.95 the previous Saturday.

Hardly enough hogs were on the market to test quotations after directs had been deducted from the supply. Receipts at 8,500 included 6,500 directs to packers from other points. Only 1,000 penholders remained at the close.

Governing influences in the hog market were extremely bearish during the last week and prices were forced to new low levels in face of the smallest supplies of the year. The week's general average price at $6.90 equals the lowest weekly average since December, 1923, and compares with $10.80 in 1930, with $10.45 two years ago, and a five year average of $10.55.

Receipts for the week at 189,600 were 60,000 below the average weekly total so far this year. However, eastern demand was narrower and local prices of fresh pork lower. Light hogs were more plentiful and the estimate average weight at 235 lbs was lightest since the second week of January, but 3 lbs heavier than a year ago and 7 lbs above two years ago.

Trading in hog futures was slow at the end of the week, with offers and bids too far apart for trading. March light were offered at $9.00 and bid $8.35@8.40. March, April and May mediums were bid $7.00@7.25, while bids of $6.50@6.75 were made on heavy grades for those months.

Lambs in Firm Position.

Last week's uneven distribution of supplies failed to change the strong position of the lamb market. Offerings at the opening of the week were largest of the year and above normal, while midweek supplies were unusually meager and were followed by liberal receipts on Thursday and Friday. Daily top prices held within a 10c range at $8.90@9.00.

Attempts to break the market met considerable opposition from the country, where supplies are reported in strong hands. The week's general average price at $8.20 is only $2.80 under a year ago. Six weeks ago lambs were averaging almost $6.00 lower than in 1930.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 14,000 cattle, 61,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep, against 14,423 cattle, 52,413 hogs, and 21,433 sheep a week ago and 14,202 cattle, 59,368 hogs, and 20,535 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 37,000 cattle, 185,000 hogs, and 75,000 sheep, against 34,015 cattle, 164,242 hogs, and 79,217 sheep a year ago, and 36,803 cattle, 183,137 hogs, and 70,127 sheep two years ago.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

Commerce

FEBRUARY 22, 1931. A * PART 2—PAGE 7.

HEAR U. S. FARM BOARD BEGIN STO UNLOAD WHEAT

Rumor Brings Drop in Old Crop Months.

All leading stocks and commodity exchanges and banks will be closed tomorrow in observance of Washington's birthday, which occurred 199 years ago today—Sunday. The Chicago Board of Trade will be closed, but the live stock market will remain open.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Reports that the federal farm board has started to dump its holdings of cash wheat were in circulation on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday and were instrumental in causing a decline in futures toward the last, the old crop months finishing unchanged to ¾c lower with March, 79¾c, and May, 82¼c, while the new crop deliveries were off ¾@⅞c with July, 61½c, and September, 68⅝c.

In answer to a request for information as to how authentic the reports of sales of hard winter abroad by the farm board were the Uhlmann Grain company received the following from their New York office, quoting one of the leading exporters: "Bunge confirms sales at both Antwerp and Rotterdam which figure about 10c per bu under the Chicago May futures, f. o. b. the gulf. Quantity not known. Farm board denies sales, but Bunge positively confirms the transactions at this price. Further in their denial they claim to have bids equal to 8c under, which Bunge states is positively not true."

Winnipeg Wheat Breaks.

There was considerable liquidation by scattered longs in the Winnipeg wheat market on the reported sales of cash wheat by the farm board, numerous selling orders being received from Chicago and the Canadian market closed 1¾c lower with July at 65c. Reports of rains in parts of Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado, and Nebraska also had some effect in all of the leading North American markets, and the forecast for over the week-end held out promise of general precipitation this side of the international line.

As Chicago May wheat closed at 82¼c, and the farm board was said to have sold at about 10c under this figure it would indicate a price of around 72¾c at the gulf, or 2¼c under Kansas City May, and about 6c over the May delivery in Liverpool. The latter finished 7/8@1d lower for the day with July, 67⅝. Buenos Aires was 5/8@¾c lower with May at 52¾c.

Export demand for Manitoba wheat was lacking and no sales of consequence were reported. Liverpool cables said Russia was offering liberally while milling demand seemed satisfied for the time being.

Grains Lower for Week.

Grain markets fluctuated in an erratic manner during the last week and while strong early the finish was unchanged to ⅝c lower on the old crop deliveries of wheat while the new were ⅛@1c lower, the latter on July as compared with a week ago. Corn was ⅛@1¼c lower with March selling at a new low for the season. Oats finished ⅝c lower to ⅛c higher as compared with the previous week. Rye showed pronounced strength and was ⅛@1⅝c higher than a week ago. Lard finished 2½c lower to 5c higher and bellies 20c lower for the week.

Scattered commission house liquidation was on in corn futures due to the continued slow shipping demand and further liberal offerings of cash grain to come here from other terminals. Buying against bids checked the declines but the close was at net losses of ⅛@⅝c with March 61⅝c to 61¾c; May, 64¼c to 64⅝c; July, 66¼c to 66⅝c, and September, 65⅝c to 65¾c.

Purchases of 120,000 bu winter shelled corn were reported made to come here from other terminal markets, while the country sold 12,000 bu, and buyers turned down offers of grain from other terminals equal to the amounts bought. March corn sold down to 61⅜@61⅛c during the day, a new low for the season. Buenos Aires closed ¼@⅜c lower.

March Oats Weaken.

March oats were under pressure from scattered longs and closed ⅝c lower while cash houses bought March and sold May at 1c difference. The deferred futures unchanged to ¼c lower with March, 32½c; May, 33⅜c; July, 33c, and September, 33⅜c.

Spreading operations furnished a good part of the trade in rye, the latter being bought against sales of corn. Final trades were unchanged to ¼c lower with March at 39¾c; May, 41⅝c, and July, 42⅞c.

Finds Basic Industries Are Now Making Headway

The Mid-Month Review of Business, issued by the Irving Trust company of New York says it is significant that the number of new companies which took out charters in New York state in January was the largest since last March; also that some appropriations for advertising are reported to have been increased. "It is now certain," the review says, "that a number of the country's basic industries have made headway recently, and among those which registered advances during January were iron and steel and automobiles."

Reserves Decision on Move to Inspect Firm's Books

New York, Feb. 21.—Supreme Court Justice Alfred H. Townley has reserved decision on a motion of Richard Reid Rogers, attorney and stockholder of the American Tobacco company, for a writ of mandamus to inspect the company's books. In the motion filed yesterday, Rogers charged officials of the company with attempting to give themselves a $30,500,000 bonus through sale of stocks to themselves at a price below actual worth.

Sees Increase in Protests on Deflation

BY SCRUTATOR.

Perhaps the soldiers' bonus legislation, the dispensing of millions in losses by the government in the wheat market, and even the demands of politicians with their ears close to the public voice that huge sums be hurled out in public works are reflections of a deeper and little discussed protest against deflation.

Certainly there is a large group who hold this view. They are, it appears, getting along with their demands. As late as Friday the senate suggested by resolution to President Hoover that he call an international conference to agree on the restoration of silver as money. That, too, is a step toward a halting of deflation that has been going on for a decade; it may even be a step toward an inflation.

No attempt is being made in this writing to guess whether the restoration of silver in any degree—and the suggested basis is rather moderate, to fix the value of silver at about one-fortieth that of gold by the ounce—would or would not be advisable for the world. It can only be stated that the absolute sovereignty of gold as a money metal has existed for a short era in the world's history and that free-silverites did not all die out when Bryan was defeated.

Seen Natural Sequence.

We are having, of course, a recurrence of a phenomenon that appears at intervals after almost every major war. It is a demand for a debtors' and a sellers' money, and naturally follows when an inflation period is succeeded by a long continued time of deflation. The farmer protests because the wheat with which he pays debts contracted when wheat was $2 a bushel brings him only 60 cents, and he has to deliver more than three bushels to pay for the one he borrowed. It is inherently human that he should and probably inevitable that he demand action even if that action be unwise.

Financiers, from Secretary Mellon down, are set rather strongly against the bonus legislation. They see it for what it is, a move toward inflation, and they distrust all such movements. They have seen the wrecking of currency and property values in Germany and Russia by deliberate inflation carried to an infinite degree and know how serious these events were. They prefer to have depressions wear themselves out, and they rightly fear to see any disposition to tinker with hard money growing up.

At least three prominent financiers can be recalled who have stated recently a belief that the proper thing now is an admission that lowered price levels in commodities must be met by lowered price levels in finished manufactures and in wages. There is a strong opposition to this, although some acute observers maintain that the present conditions are forcing some acceptance of the doctrine.

May Start Inflation.

The bonus money, to be borrowed at 4½ per cent, may give us a period of inflation within the next year. Several ex-service men have told the writer that they intend to take the cash and buy securities with it. A half billion dollars of real money thrown into the markets might make something of a boom. Whether it could spread much further is doubtful. The last stock boom ran along for five years against a commodity price level that was on the whole downward.

Unsupported by further action, any inflation from the bonus money probably will be short. The agitation for the restoration of silver as money is much more important. If this agitation gets beyond the going-to-have-a-conference stage and a program is actually outlined, we may have again campaigns for public office fought out on the hard and easy money question.

Undoubtedly some stiffening in the wholesale price indexes would hasten the return to better business conditions. It would do more, and quickly, than a reduction in prices of goods and labor that are out of adjustment with the whole level. It has yet to be demonstrated that things are enough under control to be handled that way. It can be said with some safety that protest against deflation is fully as loud as the demand to let things alone.

Says Manitoba Has Lost $3,000,000 on Wheat Pool

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 21.—Premier John Bracken, in his budget speech here, announced that the province of Manitoba has lost over three million dollars in guaranteeing seven Canadian banks against advances made to the Manitoba wheat pool on the 1929 wheat crop. Bracken thought securities of the pool held by the government would eventually repay losses. Saskatchewan lost $12,500,000 as their share of the guarantee to banks, but Premier Anderson claims assets of the pool held by the Saskatchewan government amply cover the loss. These include terminal and country elevators of the pool running to nearly a thousand buildings.

PROSPECTS OF GOLD SHORTAGE COME TO FRONT

Institute Hears Both Sides of Question.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 21.—The question of whether or not the world is faced with an approaching shortage of gold and, if so, what steps should be taken to meet the problem, continues to agitate bankers and economists. During the last week a number of conflicting opinions on the subject have been made by experts here and abroad.

The American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, in convention here, heard papers on both sides of the question—by those who predicted an acute shortage by 1942 and by those who held that the improved use of credit and the shifting positions of the nations as gold producers made concern over the outlook unnecessary.

Prominent European bankers, meeting in Paris last week, discussed the problem and concluded that the present difficulties occasioned by the maldistribution of gold would disappear as soon as long term credits start flowing to those nations in need of such help.

The discussion of the gold problem has been crystallized lately by the publication of the first and second interim reports of the gold delegation of the financial committee of the league of nations. In these reports the delegation has admitted the likelihood of a gold shortage in the future and proposed means of maintaining an adequate rate of credit expansion in the face of inadequate gold supplies.

Most Striking Feature.

The most striking of these proposals was that the legal reserve requirements of the central banks of the world should be reduced so that credit may be free to expand without the restraint which the need for protecting gold reserves imposes.

This suggestion was sharply challenged by Benjamin M. Anderson Jr., economist of the Chase National bank, speaking before the graduate class of economics and business of the University of Chicago.

The practical consequence of any early adoption of proposals such as those made by the gold delegation, Dr. Anderson asserted, would be renewed excessive credit expansion and further diminution of the liquidity of general bank credit, leading to a real shortage of gold. The fundamental solution of the comparative shortage of gold, he said, is to be found in increasing the mobility and the liquidity of goods through the reduction of tariffs and other restrictions on international trade.

Dr. Anderson expressed particular objection to the statement made in the report of the gold delegation that "it is impossible to lay down any general rule" regarding the reserve ratio required by a central bank.

Offers General Rule.

"I offer a general rule," he said "It is that the volume of cash reserves needed is a function [A] of the general liquidity of bank assets, and [B] of the variability in the volume of bank liabilities."

The solution to the problem of a scarcity of gold, should it arise, was declared by George R. Roberts, vice president of the National City bank and a member of the league of nations gold delegation, to rest with the increasing utilization of credit.

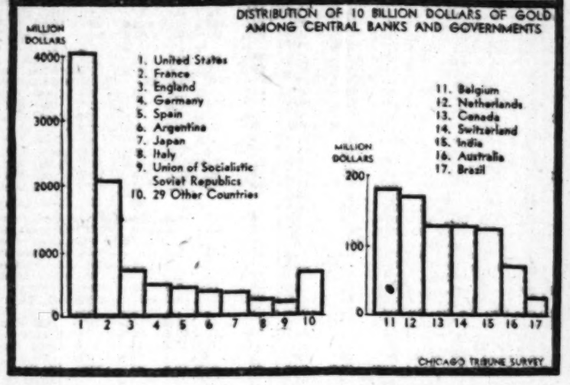
Mr. Roberts, speaking before the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, emphasized the declining use of gold as currency. He said that while total clearings in 191 clearing houses for 1929 amounted to $726,884,632,647, the highest average amount of gold in the gold settlement fund at Washington was only $800,000,000, approximately one-seventh of the country's stock of monetary gold.

While the discussion of the gold shortage problem continues active the majority of experts are now agreed that it is not likely to become an immediate pressing question. The fall of wholesale prices during the past year has brought them to levels where the supplies of new gold likely to become available for money will probably meet the demand for a much longer period than they would had the former price levels been maintained. This, at least, is the view of the gold delegation itself and one with which Dr. Anderson and other bankers are ready to agree.

N. Y. Produce Exchange to Trade in Bonded Wheat

Establishment of a new futures market for trading in Canadian bonded wheat has been approved by the board of managers of the New York Produce exchange and trading will be inaugurated early next month.

UNITED STATES HAS 40% OF THE WORLD'S GOLD SUPPLY



PRICE OF SILVER RISES A CENT IN SHARP UPTURN

Relief Plans Bolster Up Sentiment.

New York, Feb. 21.—(AP)—A few rays of sunshine in the form of activity on both sides of the Atlantic toward resuscitating silver pervaded the two most important markets for the precious metal today to precipitate the sharpest upturn of the year in its depressed price.

Silver sold for 27¼ cents an ounce in the New York market, an advance of 1 cent from yesterday, and was quoted in London at 12 7-16 pence, a rise of ¾ penny. This compares with an average price of 52.99 cents in 1929.

Sentiment toward the precious metal which only recently sold at 25⅝ cents an ounce, an all time low record, was bolstered by the accumulation of evidence indicating the world has been aroused to action, and may do something to help the plight of the metal, which represents the tangible wealth of a good portion of its population, and therefore has an important influence on buying power.

Passage by the United States senate of a resolution asking President Hoover to take the initiative in calling an international conference with respect to the uses and status of silver was coincidental with a similar proposal of the executive committee of the international Chamber of Commerce meeting in Paris.

Another heartening development was the report of the American bureau of metal statistics showing that production of the white metal in 1930 in the six countries supplying 87 per cent of the world output was the smallest in at least four years.

The drop in production tends to lessen the spread between the supply and demand and is regarded as important to any efforts made to stabilize the price of silver in the world market. The 1930 figures as compiled by the bureau, reveal a total production in the six countries of 211,428,000 ounces, against 227,880,000 ounces in 1929.

The United State remains the leading silver producing nation in the world, with a total output in 1930 of 50,234,000 ounces compared with 33,447,00 for Canada, 105,204,000 for Mexico. Others included in the total are Peru, 16,634,000; Australia, 8,854,000, and Burma, 7,055,000.

American Furniture Mart Earnings Hold Up Well

Earnings of the American Furniture Mart last year were only slightly less than in 1929. Net income for 1930, after all charges, was $343,881, equivalent after preferred dividends to 23 cents a share on $39,100 common shares. No dividends were paid on the common stock but $79,693 was added to surplus. Net income for 1929 was $361,045, equivalent to 21 cents a share on 400,000 common shares.

Standard of New York Cuts Tank Wagon Prices

New York, Feb. 21.—The Standard Oil Company of New York has reduced tank wagon prices of gasoline one cent throughout its New York and New England territory, but no change is being made in service station prices. This is a change from the upward tendency of wholesale gasoline prices on the Atlantic seaboard in recent weeks. The Gulf Refining company also has reduced the tank wagon price one cent a gallon.

CHICAGO BANK STOCK PRICES IMPROVE ON INCREASE IN DEMAND

Chicago bank stock, after selling off rather sharply early in the week, improved in later trading last week on a large demand. First National, after selling at 485, off 9 points, improved to closing transactions between 490 and 493. Foreman-State National, after sales at 390, was in demand at 400, with offerings at 405. Continental Illinois Bank and Trust improved from early sales at 375 to 388 bid, 391 asked.

Northern Trust sold off from early sales at 485 to low and closing transactions between 478 and 482. Terminal National Bank of Chicago was traded in between 45½ and 47. People's Trust and Savings was in supply at 355 without attracting buyers, off 5 points. Union Bank of Chicago sold down 5 points to 150, at which price additional stock was wanted with offerings at 155.

Harris Trust and Savings was 25 points easier at 525 to 540. Central Trust Company of Illinois—off 5 points—was quoted 252 bid, 255 asked. Numerous buyers were in evidence for National Bank of the Republic, which held steady at 73 bid, 75 asked.

In the miscellaneous group Chicago Title and Trust company, after early sales at 437, was in demand at 439 with offerings at 443, up 2 points. Chicago Daily News common was slightly higher at 19¾ to 20½, and the preferred was a point higher at 90¾ to 91½.

WEEK'S TOTAL OF FAILURES MOUNTS TO 722

New York, Feb. 21.—Commercial failures for the week totaled 722, for six business days, compared with 534 for five days last week and 585 for the six day period last year, R. G. Dun & Co. reports. Of this week's defaults, 455 had liabilities of more than $5,000 each.

Commercial failures during January showed an increase over the corresponding month of 1930, due in a very marked degree to insolvencies among small trading concerns. Defaults last month totaled 3,316, with liabilities of $94,608,212, compared with 2,759 defaults, with liabilities of $61,185,171, for January, 1930.

Weekly Debits Increase, Reserve Bank Reports

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago for the week ended Feb. 18 by 217 banks in 38 leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district aggregate $1,125,656,000, an increase of 6.6 per cent compared with a week ago ($1,055,761,000). Compared with the corresponding week of last year ($1,632,477,000), a decrease of 31.1 per cent was shown.

Foreign Trade Experts Will Gather Here

Plans for the foreign and domestic trade convention to be held in Chicago Feb. 27 have been completed by the Illinois Manufacturers' association and the United States bureau of foreign and domestic commerce.

Leading business men and trade authorities are scheduled to address the one day conference, which will be held in the Hotel La Salle.

Dr. Julius Klein, one of the country's foremost authorities on international trade, will discuss the world trade outlook at the evening meeting of the convention. Dr. Klein is assistant secretary of commerce. His talk will be concerned chiefly with the world trade prospects in relation to American business.

Latin American Trade.

Some of the other topics which will come under the range of discussion will be Latin American trade, credits, and financing, the Canadian outlook, export advertising, the Russian situation, and the foreign market for machinery.

The Canadian outlook will be treated by Lynn W. Meekins, American commercial attaché in Ottawa. George R. Meyercord, president of the Meyercord company, will discuss foreign credit and methods of preventing losses. Mr. Meyercord is president of the American Manufacturers' Foreign Credit Underwriters.

A motion picture exhibition of the $23,000,000 waterworks project in Athens and Piraeus will be shown at the noon meeting by G. E. Hines, vice president of Ulen & Co., New York engineering company. John E. Otterson, president of the Electrical Research Products, Inc., will exhibit the latest developments of sound motion pictures in industry and business at the evening meeting.

Export Trade.

Various phases of export trade will be discussed at the afternoon meetings by the following speakers: E. M. Fisher, export manager, Fairbanks, Morse & Co.; George W. Doonan, manager of the foreign department of the Central Trust Company of Illinois; George J. Eder, chief of the Latin American division of the United States bureau of foreign and domestic commerce; Frank B. Amos, director of the overseas division of George Harrison Phelps, Inc.; Walter H. Rastall, chief of the industrial machinery branch of the foreign and domestic commerce bureau.

Charles E. Herrick, president of the Brennan Packing company and chairman of the foreign trade committee of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, will preside at the morning session. The presiding officer at the afternoon meetings will be W. M. Curtis, vice president of the Automatic Electric company.

Sponsors of the convention believe that the gathering will aid in stimulating interest in foreign trade on the part of business men of the state. The foreign trade of Illinois now amounts to $250,000,000 yearly and offers one of the most fertile fields for increasing local business, it is stated. An increase in the foreign trade of the state, it is pointed out, will help the employment situation.

REPORTS RISE IN DEMAND FOR PACKER HIDES

After dullness during the early part of last week activity developed in domestic packer hides, but at lower levels, Dun's says in its weekly review of the hide market.

Chicago reported sales of around 150,000 hides, mostly steers, and buyers gained an advantage of about one-half a cent on the turnover. One tanning interest was credited with taking 50,000 hides, while a western tanning-shoe manufacturer, having been out of the market for some time, absorbed 25,000.

Apart from the enlarged dealings in packer material, business in hides this week lacked outstanding features. The leather trade, however, reflects some improvement, while advices from the footwear industry stressed the point that retailers are believed to be working very close to stocks.

HALSEY-STUART CO. REPLIES TO BLAINE ATTACK

New York, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Answering an attack by Senator Blaine in Washington today, representatives of Halsey-Stuart & Co. of Chicago, investment firm, made public a telegram to show it had offered to open its records to a senate committee.

The message, dated Jan. 19 and addressed to counsel for the committee, said: "We would be pleased to open our files and records at any convenient time during business hours to duly appoint representative of committee upon request."

Speaking before the senate in support of bills to regulate the sale of securities and foreclosure of mortgages in the District of Columbia, the Wisconsin Republican said that through the failure of Halsey-Stuart & Co. to show its books to a senate committee, the firm "stands convicted as one of the greatest vultures in the investment field." Blaine's attack was directed at the investment firm's connection with financial operations of the Wardman Properties, Inc., of Washington, D. C., which announced it could not meet interest on its bonds March 1.

Holiday year ago.

BY FRED HARVEY.

New York, Feb. 21.—Nothing succeeds like success, particularly with an up-and-going stock market. And the one now current at Wall and Broad streets certainly has been going up very successfully. It rose one to more than 11 points today on the crest of a recurring buying wave that embraced every group of the list in its sweep and carried any number of the more active issues up to new high prices levels for the year.

And the remarkable part of it was that the fresh display of bullish enthusiasm like its day-to-day predecessors of the last week and beyond had practically nothing in the way of news as a stimulant. True, Wall street was feeling good over the prospects that the country will get by without the long threatened ex- session of congress and the added prospect that the veteran bonus bill, admittedly destined to pass over the President's veto, will release more buying power in the form of borrowed funds and thus help to grease the wheels of reviving business, but the budget was just as bare as ever of items to evidence talk of returning prosperity.

There were reports of increasing activity among the automobile makers at Detroit, but no figures to back them, and a rumor gained currency for a while that copper had been advanced to 10½ cents, but this was later denied.

Auburn Rises 11¾ Points.

Another spectacular rise in Auburn Automobile featured the short but lively trading session. This brilliant merrymaker scored a net gain of 11¾ points to a new high for the movement and the tip was out that the stock had considerable distance yet to go before reporting the objective set by the interests who are guiding its destinies marketwise for the time being.

The new upturn was accompanied by reports that the company has perfected a new free-wheeling or similar device and that it was negotiating with a big motor company for the use of its apparatus on a royalty basis. Successful consummation of such negotiations, it was industriously pointed out, would add to the company's earnings power, Chrysler and one or two others followed the lead of Auburn for gains of a point or so, but realizing came into the group at times and the close found several issues showing small losses in the day.

American Can assumed the leadership of the pivotals group, advancing steadily throughout the session. The finish found it with a net gain of 3⅝ points. United States Steel, General Electric and others were active and ruled generally at better price levels, but had to wade through considerable profit taking at times. Electric was up a point at the close while Steel had eased back from its new high for the year to its Friday night closing level.

AUTO ACCESSORY SHARES IMPROVE IN TRADING HERE

Utilities Move Slower in Chicago Market.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Trading in the short session on the Chicago exchange yesterday continued to center in the motor accessory shares with several of the leading issues reaching new top quotations for the year. Utility stocks which customarily account for the bulk of the business in the Chicago market moved within a narrow price range on a reduced volume of transactions.

Except in the instance of Waukesha Motor which was whirled up eight points on light trade the grains recorded by the automotive stocks were small. In several cases, as in Cord, the improvement was sufficient to establish new high prices for the stocks. The gyrations in Waukesha follow recent reports of increased bookings and a bettered outlook for future business.

Leads in Volume.

Bendix led the group in volume of sales with a turnover of approximately 21,000 shares. The final price of 24¾ topped by a fraction the year's previous high quotation for the stock. Motine was another of the less active stock which rung up a good gain. The issue advanced 2½ points on sales involving 800 shares.

The radio stocks which held a prominent place in the trading during the 1929 bull market have enjoyed something of revival during the last few days. This activity continued yesterday with Unit corporation National Union, Raytheon and Ceco enjoying a demand that they have experienced infrequently during the last year. Gains of around a point each were made by the issues. Grigsby-Grunow, the old time leader of the radio stocks was a bit stronger at 4¼ on transactions of around 2,200 shares.

Among the miscellaneous stocks which advanced a point or so were U. S. Gypsum, Electric Household and Utilities Power and Light. Insull issues were fractionally higher as a rule on dull trade.

Stock Values Rise.

The continued improvement in the general market is reflected in the comparative market values of representative stocks. According to a tabulation by Otis & Co. the market value of fifty representative issues gained $97,219,076, or 3.9 per cent, during the last week. These stocks at the closing prices yesterday had a total value of $2,556,162,108 as compared with $2,488,943,032 at the end of the preceding week.

Compared with a year ago the same stocks shows a shrinkage in market value of $703,699,418 or 21.38 per cent. On Feb. 21, 1930, the stocks had a value of $3,289,861,256.

WILL SEEK PROMPT PASSAGE OF HOLDING COMPANY RESOLUTION

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Chairman Parker of the house commerce committee today followed introduction of a resolution for interstate commerce commission control of railroad holding companies with the announcement he would seek passage at this session.

Parker said he expected quick committee approval. His action raised the possibility that the closing days of congress might find it occupied with railroad legislation, but it was problematical whether the resolution could be put through both houses before March 4.

The senate interstate commerce committee considered another phase of the transportation problem in approving a resolution for a study of all forms of interstate transportation, with particular reference to competition with railroads.

The Parker resolution is expected to find little sympathy among powerful railroad groups, but they have complained frequently of late of increasing competition on the part of motor vehicles and barge lines.

Demands have been made for interstate commerce commission regulation of motor carriers, and protests against government aid to the federal barge lines have been expressed.

The resolution Parker introduced today carried out a suggestion he made yesterday in making public the result of his committee's study of railroad ownership.

The findings were summarized by the statement that 14 railroad groups control 210,000 miles of the 260,000 mileage of first class roads. Two of the largest of these groups, the Van Sweringens and the Pennsylvania system, have used holding companies in their expansion, the report said. The Alleghany corporation was described as the principal holding corporation of the Van Sweringens, while the Pennsylvania has used its affiliate, the Pennroad corporation, the report asserted, to increase its extensive holdings.

LOOKING AHEAD WITH BUSINESS

Aggregate returns of 537 large corporations which have reported 1930 earnings to date, show a level of income equal to 66 per cent of the high total reported for 1929, a compilation by Standard Statistics company shows. For 423 of these companies, the survey says, comparable figures are available for the last four years, and combining these units, 1930 returns amounted to 77 per cent of 1928 levels and 88 per cent of the total for 1927.

The American Brass company has advanced prices ¼ cent a pound on all products except copper tubes. The advance followed a rise of ¾ cent a pound in copper yesterday and brings the prices in line with the 10¼ cent level for copper in the domestic market.

An increase of 15 per cent in production schedules of the H. H. Franklin Manufacturing company, automobile makers, for February and March has been authorized by H. H. Franklin, president. Unfilled orders in dealers' hands are reported currently larger than at any time since last June.

Sales of a leading brand of cigarets by the American Tobacco company in January increased 246,249,000 over January, 1930. In the same month last year sales of the same brand increased 638,210,000 over January, 1929. In January this year production of cigarets for domestic consumption by the entire industry declined $40,023,523 cigarets from January, 1930.

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad will spend approximately $35,009,000 for improvements in 1931, according to F. X. Millholland, assistant to the senior vice president. This sum is approximately triple that set aside for improvements and additions in the previous year.

Inquiries for railroad equipment this week have been more frequent than recently. Among the queries were the following. The Baltimore and Ohio asking for bids for five baggage and mail, oil electric rail motor cars; the Kansas City Southern seeking prices on four baggage and mail cars, and E. H. Wilson and company of Philadelphia inquiring for twenty to thirty gondola cars.

Baldwin Locomotive works has received a $575,000 order for five locomotives from soviet Russia and an order for five mallet type freight locomotives from the Western Pacific railroad.

CATTLE HIDE IMPORTS.

New imports of cattle hides during 1930 were approximately 32 per cent less than the previous year, the current bulletin of the New York hide exchange shows.

FINANCIAL NOTES

A total of more than $9,000,000 in bonds has been turned in to the George M. Forman Realty Trust under the exchange plan of the bondholders' advisory committee. The bonds involved total $14,500,000, and those of the outstanding remainder are coming in daily, William G. Lodwick, president of the realty trust, stated.

Permission to issue and sell $8,000,000 in 4½ per cent bonds was sought from the interstate commerce commission yesterday by the Pere Marquette railroad. The securities will evidence expenditure made by the railroad since 1926 on improvements and betterments to its lines.

Brunswick-Balke-Collender company will retire 50,000 shares of common stock acquired in the open market last year, reducing common outstanding to 450,000 shares from 500,000, according to reports in La Salle street.

Some Things to Keep in Mind When Considering Fixed Trusts.

New fixed trusts are constantly being organized to add to the already large number on the market. This is a reflection of increasing demand for this type of security. It appears to have struck the public fancy.

Most fixed trusts are built around one central idea—giving the investor an opportunity to acquire in one purchase equity in stocks of a number of leading American companies. The organizer of the trust picks what he believes to be the best stocks, deposits them with a trustee, and then sells equity in the deposited unit in small pieces. In choosing stocks some trust organizers appear to lean heavily upon John Moody's stock ratings.

Although many fixed trusts exhibit a striking similarity there are important differences. Here are a few questions that the prospective buyer of fixed trust shares might well ask:

Who are the sponsors of the trust?

What have they got in the portfolio?

What is the market for the shares?

What is their loan value?

What provisions are made for the elimination of holdings that may prove unprofitable later on?

What is the spread between the actual book value of the shares and the price at which they are offered? The difference represents commissions, odd lot charges, fees, expenses and profit for the seller.

The elimination provisions are important. Some fixed trusts are more rigid than others. If the trust terminates many years hence it is well if the trust agreement makes possible the sale in time of a stock included in the portfolio should that stock deteriorate. It is hardly wise to assume that merely because a stock can be rated "A" today that it will still be an "A" stock in ten, twenty or thirty years.

In addition to the investment opportunities they offer the better grade fixed trusts are performing an indirect service of benefit to the small investor. By frequent publication of their portfolios they are telling the public what men who should know something about securities regard as the more conservative listed stocks.

To many an amateur who has been basing his stock purchases on hopes, hunches and hearsay this has been something of a revelation.

LONDON UNEASY OVER OUTLOOK ON POLITICS

Uncertainty Dominates Stock Market.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 21.—Political uncertainty dominated all departments of the London stock exchange this week. Chancellor of the Exchequer Snowden's renewed warning of the gravity of Great Britain's financial position increased the nervousness of investors generally. Budget fears and taxation caused a noticable flood in selling with British government securities bearing the brunt of the attack.

The gilt edged market was evidently convinced that a considerable additional taxation on unearned incomes is to be imposed, a view which was chiefly responsible for this week's wave of liquidation in British funds, combined with fears of waning British credit.

Some fairly large blocks of stocks were pressed for sale, both from home and foreign sources, bringing disinclination on the part of the dealers to take the stocks on their books. Quite a wide range of prices were quoted, not usual in stocks of the first rank; for instance, the funding loan at one time was quoted on the basis of a point margin between the buying and selling price and transactions were negotiated with some difficulty.

Seek Foreign Investments.

Declines at the end of the week amounted to as much as 3 points, some instances being on conversion loans and consols 4s were notable.

Exchanges into foreign investments have been appreciable indicating fright on the part of many investors. The 5 per cent war loan has shown the best resistance against prevailing conditions, but even this security, which is considered among the safest of the stocks on the market, showed an appreciable fall for the week.

Authoritative city circles are leaning to the viewpoint that political and budget fears, as invariably is the case on the London Stock exchange, are being overdone, but that the market's nervousness is increasing and in the present jumpy state, the market's slightest development which can be construed as at all adverse, brings an immediate spasm of liquidation and lessening confidence.

The money market is worried too with the recent sharp depreciation in sterling in terms of dollars and francs. Persistent city gossip concerns further threatened depreciation of sterling but it is argued that maintenance of money rates in London at higher levels should afford sufficient support and resumption of gold exports is not expected, at any rate in the near future.

Exhibit Better Tone.

Chief overseas centers, being less influenced by political, domestic and national financial problems, are evincing better tendency to recover, some of the few bright spots of the week being provided by securities in which Wall street, Paris and Amsterdam are largely interested.

The commodity market showed signs of improvement, tin especially sharply recovering on governmental approval of the principle of restriction and the statement that the quota scheme will be enforced from March 1. In this the Federated Malay states and the Nigerian government have agreed to coöperate with the Dutch East Indies and the Bolivian government.

The mining markets were the brightest section of the market, with gold shares the most prominent.

PARIS BOURSE QUIET

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 21.—The market was characterized this week by extreme calmness, but with a noticeable slackening of enthusiasm by both the public and the professionals. However, the bourse continues to show strong proof of its resistance to various depressing elements.

Unfavorable results in French foreign trade, the dismal predictions of Chancellor of the Exchequer Philip Snowden on the actual financial and economical conditions of Great Britain, and the threat of a revolution in Spain were factors which prevented the bourse from continuing to advance. Most traders were holding aloof and consolidating their gains of the last few weeks.

SAY CANADIAN AUTO DISCOUNT WILL HELP TRADE

WINDSOR, Ont., Feb. 21.—Gratification at the action of Canada in setting the discount rate at 20 per cent on motor cars entering Canada from the United States is expressed by leaders in the industry.

"This is the best news the border cities have received in many years," declared Malcolm G. Campbell, president of the Essex West Conservative association. "It will stimulate the motor industry and greatly accelerate auto sales throughout Canada. It means more employment to many border people."

John D. Mansfield, president of the Chrysler Motor Corporation of Canada, Ltd., said:

"It puts a totally different face on the auto situation. It will have a big beneficial effect on employment. Because it applies to high priced cars and to all makes it is particularly pleasing."

D. R. Grossman, president of Studebaker Corporation of Canada Limited, said:

"This will help the community and to us means Studebaker stays in Canada."

H. H. Henchel, president of General Motors Trucks and Parts, Limited, asserted:

"This will certainly help the whole industry. We will announce price reductions on our trucks just as soon as we learn the details."

PLINTH TO PINNACLE: A PICTORIAL SPAN OF A CENTURY AND A HALF

(From a painting by F. C. Yohn; copyright by and reproduced by permission of the America Fore group of fire insurance companies.)

1933—When Washington assumed the presidency of the infant nation, 142 years ago, the site of Chicago was a waste roamed by the red aborigine. The transformation that has come over the scene since then will be not the least of the wonders of "A Century of Progress." Prepared by staff artists of the exposition, a visualization of the completed fair appears here. In scope, plan, and architecture, it will be such an exposition as the world has never seen before. Its keynote is the dramatization of the scientific revolution; its external expression, its architecture, a bold breaking away from unreasoned tradition—and for the builders of the future, perhaps (as was that of 1893), a prophetic exemplar.

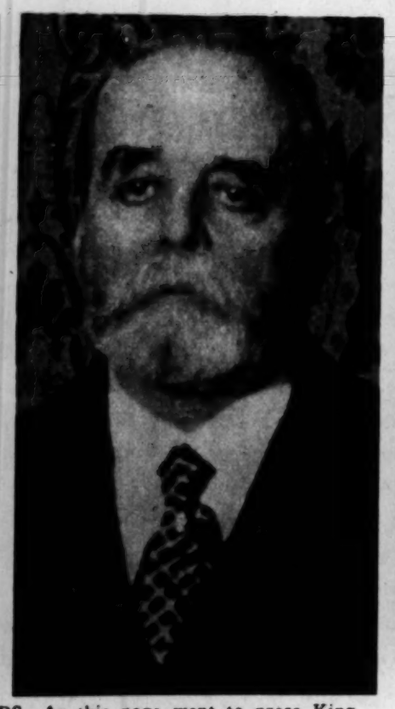
AN AMAZING INTERLUDE IN THE COUNCIL CHAMBER

ALDERMEN SEE A WILD WEST PERFORMANCE—Vaudeville staged on the clerk's desk which fronts the mayor's dais in Chicago's council room. Horses, also a part of the act, were removed from the foreground to permit a clear view. With cowboy hat and drooping cigar, Thompson is the central figure. Among others facing the camera are Jesse Barnett, personal aid of Thompson; James F. Kelly, secretary to Thompson; Bernard R. Hennes, secretary to John Kantor, Thompson aid (Kantor stands at right); Capt. B. B. Lipsner, of Thompson's staff; Dr. Spooner, and Frank Sampson, of Thompson's campaign finance committee. (Tribune photo.)



ANOTHER THRONE TOTTERS—As this page went to press King Alfonso of Spain (left) had yielded to pressure and called Jose Sanchez Guerra (right), his most powerful enemy, to form a government and convoke a constitutional assembly in which Spain will decide the future of the crown. (Acme-P. & A. photos.)

A FIRE THAT HAS RAGED FOR 46 YEARS—A blaze that has eaten through a coal field six miles square near New Straitsville, O., has spread to a new mine opened near by. The entrance to the new shaft now presents this sight. (Acme-P. & A. photo.)

In the Hollow of Your Hand—Mother

That boy of yours—you hold him in the hollow of your hand. How he grows from year to year—how he gains in energy, manhood—all depend on how you feed him.

The very principle of growth and energy is butter-fat—its most digestible form is milk. Your boy will drink milk eagerly if you add two teaspoonfuls of Thompson's Chocolate "Double-Malted." It contains twice the malt enzymes of ordinary malted milks. Taken with meals it helps digest other foods.

FREE LIFE LINE CHART—6 feet high, keeps track of the weight and height of the entire growing family. Send a postal for it to Thompson's Malted Milk Co., Inc., Waukesha, Wisc.

the latest cosmetic style note

SEVENTY-FIVE smartly tailored squares of sterilized cotton all begging to be used for any sort of cosmetic duty. Beauty editors have been telling you for years to apply and remove liquids, powders and creams with cotton, to apply your skin tonic with cotton, to smooth the rouge line with cotton, to use cotton for the hot oil in a shampoo—and for dozens of other things. So we cut Couettes in just the proper shape and size suited to all these uses and packed them in a charming blue and silver box.

To introduce these very useful Couettes to you we are offering—at a very special price—this 50¢ box of Couettes with one box of Modess.

Modess Compact has the same amount of softly comfortable, protective filler as Modess Regular, and comes in packages of 12, too.

Both Modess and Couettes are made by Johnson & Johnson, the world's leading manufacturer of surgical dressings, Red Cross absorbent cotton, etc.

To the Millions who miss BEER

all its finest delights are still with you

There is today a brew in most ways better than the best of old. Just as pure and sparkling, just as flavory and aromatic. Just as quieting, healthful and invigorating as any malt-and-hop brew of the past.

Less alcohol—that's true. But that was a minor factor. Malt and hops gave the flavor. Carbonic gas gave foam and sparkle. The esters and aldehydes were the main invigorating factors. All those joys remain.

Were you told that this brew was an old reserve, you could not discover the difference. Any seeming lack is largely in the mind.

The New-Day Brew

Atlas, in the old days, was a leading brew. It's better brew today. For ten years we have spent effort and money—lavishly—to legally satisfy your craving for this ideal drink.

We have never made a "near-beer." Atlas Special Brew is the brew of old, perfected. It is fermented and aged like the old. Then we evaporate sufficient alcohol to come within the law.

Both Rich and Pure

Atlas Special Brew is extra-heavy. It is rich in esters and aldehydes—the invigorating factors. It is rich in tonic effects, the quieting properties of barley malt and the finest domestic and Bohemian hops.

It has the old sparkle and foam, the old flavor and aroma. It has the age, because we store it in glass-lined tanks for months. It has the utter purity. It is boiled for hours to sterilize. It is filtered again and again. Distilled water is used in washing the bottles. Then the filled bottles are pasteurized.

On every bottle of Atlas Special Brew, a famous laboratory certifies to the purity and quality. You never saw that on the old brews.

Bring Old Days Back

If you loved a malt-and-hop brew, pure and aged, here you have it at its best. If you drank a bottle with your meals to aid digestion, do it now. If a bottle at bedtime brought you sleep, it will do so still.

If you need its tonic effects, or love its delights, have them ever with you. Forget the alcohol. That was never the reason for beer.

Don't try to meet the craving for a healthful malt-and-hop brew with something wretched and impure.

Let us prove how much this Atlas Special Brew will mean to you and yours. It costs only 15c a bottle, much less by the case of 24 bottles. It is supplied by over 30,000 grocers, delicatessen stores and drug stores in Chicago and surrounding states. Look for the green Atlas Special label on each bottle. Atlas Brewing Company, 2107 Blue Island Ave., Chicago, Ill. SCREEN AND STAGE

PICTURE OF WORK IN THE MOVIE COLONY—Are Jack Holt and Fay Wray merely loitering on the beach, mesdames et messieurs? But no; they are toiling, toiling to earn their pay checks in the making of a new film.

THE DREYFUS CASE STIRS FRANCE AGAIN—Reviving a historic military sensation, "The Dismissal of Dreyfus," a new French film, caused such a furor in Paris that police were placed about the theater where it was shown. The public degradation of the major is portrayed in this scene. Conspired against and convicted of selling military secrets, Dreyfus was sent to Devil's island and subjected to great cruelty. Later proved innocent, he was decorated with the cross of the Legion of Honor on the scene of his degradation. He lives in Paris today. (Associated Press photo.)

BACK TO THE STAGE come celebrities of the screen, such as Vilma Banky and Rod La Rocque. They have been appearing at the Erlanger theater in a handsomely produced comedy of Hungarian love called "Cherries Are Ripe." Here are Vilma and Rod, registering romantic excitement, flanked (left) by Katherine Vleet as a Magyar maid and (right) by Richie Ling as a jealous husband. The Flashlight Group

By W. E. Hill

[Copyright: 1931: By The Chicago Tribune.]

This lovely lady is going to be a disappointed girlie. Just as soon as she finds out they took the flashlight photo while she was out freshening up her makeup a bit. Yes, sir, it's a Valentine party, and she's dressed to represent some sugar boy's Valentine.

The comedians. The three boys standing in the rear are being too funny for words. The rogue on the right is shouting, "Shoot if you must this old gray head, but spare my porous knit, she said!"

Retired actress, at the banquet of the Better Theater Leaguers, looking natural for the flashlight photographer.

Already at the speaker's table. Reading from the left, at this uplifting dinner given by "The Better Theater League," we have a dramatic editor, a society lady, a zealous clubwoman, and a business man from the money mart. As soon as this flashlight has been taken, one and all will relax and get down to the real business, which is the uplift of the intellectual side of the drama. The dramatic editor will speak on "Straws Without Bricks," the substance of which is to show that without playwrights the theater cannot exist, and vice versa. (This is a very tense moment—every one being posed for the flashlight.)

And these are the highly nervous people who are fearful lest they shut their eyes when the flash goes off. Which is just what the clown, drat him, has gone and done.

The front page tangle. Just one of those gay parties that group themselves on the floor in the immediate foreground.

For the next seven days and nights they will buy every edition of every paper, hoping to see themselves in the picture section.

When they see the picture one will say to the other, "O, dear, why did they take it before we were ready!"

Complexions rare as any gem

LEARN FROM THE ENGLISH WOMAN THE SECRET OF HER RADIANT SKIN

Photograph by Eric Gray, London

NEVER more beautiful than at evening, when the hard brilliance of artificial light demands the utmost of a fine complexion, the English woman sets a standard of beauty that the entire world has envied. Her skin is flawless, her coloring perfect, her grooming exquisite to the least detail. There is no magic to account for this . . . unless one simple rite of daily care be magic. But the English woman is fastidious in the extreme about the preparations she uses. One soap: Yardley's; one cream: Yardley's; one powder: Yardley's . . . all with that lovable fragrance of English Lavender. And all available to you.

Eight generations of well-groomed women confirm your choice of Yardley's English Lavender Soap. For a hundred and fifty years its gentle, refreshing care has guarded complexions famous for their beauty. And now that we need a cream to supplement our soap and water cleansing, comes English Complexion Cream, three creams in one. A cleansing cream, to sink to the very depths of our clogged-up pores. A nourishing cream to repair, while we sleep, the ravages of day. A powder foundation to be put on and then washed off in water. All these in one. Then, for the finish, English Lavender Face Powder, subtly shaded and delicately fine, in six well-blended tints.

But for the complete story of English beauty, write for our booklet, "Complexions with an English Accent." It is free. Yardley & Co., Ltd., 452 Fifth Avenue, New York City; in London, at 33 Old Bond Street; also Toronto and Paris.

YARDLEY'S ENGLISH COMPLEXION CREAM, to cleanse, nourish and protect your skin. It is also used as a powder foundation, and can be washed away with water. $1.50. Yardley's English Lavender Face Powder in six skilfully blended shades, $1. Yardley's English Lavender Soap for complexion and bath. Bland, cooling, refreshing. Box of 3 cakes, $1, or 35c a cake. Bath size, 50c. Guest, box of 6, $1.

YARDLEY'S ENGLISH LAVENDER... THE LOVABLE FRAGRANCE THAT DISTINGUISHES ALL THESE EXQUISITE PREPARATIONS

ABOUT English Lavender there is a sweet, cool fragrance that no other perfume has ever caught . . . a delicacy and gentle wistfulness. An enduring winsomeness, if you will. For many perfumes have come and gone in fashion's capricious train, but only this one has remained in permanent favor. Only this English Lavender of Yardley brings with it the tradition of a century and a half of increasing popularity. . . . The English gentlewoman is born to the use of Lavender. Eight generations of radiant women have taught her its subtle charm. Now, she shares its beauty with America. For all these preparations are available here. The Lavender, itself, is $15 to $1, in various-sized bottles.

of the taste-thrilling flavor of Hills Bros Coffee. It is roasted evenly . . . continuously . . .

a little at a Time

A LITTLE AT A TIME MAKES ALL THE DIFFERENCE IN THE WORLD, IN FLAVOR! IN AROMA! AND THAT'S THE SECRET OF HILLS BROS' PATENTED, CONTINUOUS PROCESS . . . CONTROLLED ROASTING

If there is any basic secret in the preparation of food, it is to cook small quantities at a time rather than huge lots. Then you can control every step and turn out a dish that's perfect. Hills Bros. apply this cooking rule to the roasting of their famous coffee blend with amazing success. For, by roasting only a few pounds at a time, they are able to exercise perfect control in the flavor development of every berry. Such control is not possible when coffee is roasted in bulk. Hills Bros. Coffee is always fresh whenever and wherever you buy it. The secret is in the fact that Hills Bros. Coffee is packed in vacuum. This process removes air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, from the can and keeps it out. Ordinary cans, even if air-tight, do not keep coffee fresh.

Don't put off trying Hills Bros. Coffee. The first cup will delight and every one thereafter is complete in satisfying goodness. Grocers everywhere sell Hills Bros. Coffee. Ask for it by name and look for the Arab—the trade-mark—on the can.

A POPULAR YOUNG RADIO ANNOUNCER—"My ideal girl is first of all a good sport, although she retains her femininity. She is intelligent, but not a mental prodigy. She is well- but not over-dressed. She always looks fresh, dainty and natural. And, while not necessarily beautiful, she is attractive—her hair and complexion being all-important. In short—if you will pardon the slang—she is a girl who cannot be thought of as a 'whoopee artist,' but rather as the one word 'regular'."

"What I'll look for in the Girl I Marry"

50 young bachelors describe their "ideal girl" and 48 out of the 50 agree on one important quality!

What qualities do men like most in women? Well, I've just talked on this very subject to a popular young radio announcer. And to a rising young architect. To a young banker. A lawyer. In fact, I've had conversations with fifty eligible young bachelors about their "ideal girl."

And here is a very clear fact—a girl's fresh natural charm is most important. Forty-eight out of these fifty young men definitely said they admired a girl "who looked natural!"

So—if you value men's opinion—and don't we all?—look to your complexion. Don't do things to it that will age it—things that will give it that hot-house look. Keep it fresh. Keep it fine-textured. Keep it natural.

73 Eminent Physicians Approve Camay

I'm glad I can give you a suggestion for keeping your skin naturally healthy and lovely. Use Camay, the fragrant, gentle toilet soap that women everywhere are praising. Camay is approved by the only real authorities on skin care. These authorities are dermatologists, physicians specializing in the care and treatment of the skin.

73 of America's most eminent dermatologists unanimously recommend soap and water as a necessary part of skin care—and give Camay their highest approval as a proper soap for even the most delicate complexions!

To this important approval, I need only add that Camay is the loveliest and most delicately fragrant soap that ever bubbled into a lather of velvet.

Try Camay cleansing twice a day for a week. You'll discover how gentle Camay is. And see whether your skin isn't fresher. See if you don't notice a clearer, more vital look—that "natural look" which men admire.

Maxwell House Coffee is today's expression of the good living of the Old South

The aroma of fine coffee

from an old Southern kitchen made the nation turn to Maxwell House

THERE is so much of solace and good cheer in a perfect cup of coffee and so little economy in a poor one that it is no wonder Maxwell House enjoys the leadership it does.

Its inimitably fine flavor has made us a nation of coffee connoisseurs. It has cultivated our taste to demand the best for so many years, that today nothing less will satisfy our critical palates.

Originally the private blend of a cultured gentleman of the Old South, the fame of its quality has spread throughout the land until it is the outstanding leader of the high grade coffees of the world. In spite of its slightly higher price, it is sold in more grocery stores than any other brand.

In millions of homes in every town and hamlet in this land, the rare fragrance of Maxwell House is a harbinger of breakfast and a pleasant invitation to dinner.

Neither advertising nor salesmanship has made it leader. That is due to the same quality that made a famous ex-president exclaim enthusiastically over his first cup of Maxwell House, "Bless me, what coffee! It's good to the last drop!"

SWEDISH MASSAGE

Taught at a Recognized Institution That Has Been in Existence over 20 Years.

Every thoroughly equipped hospital and most every sanitarium has its Physio-Therapy department. Doctors, clubs and institutions throughout the country are seeking those proficient in genuine Swedish methods of Massage and Hydro-Therapy as taught at the National College. But coupled with this demand is the further fact that we have assisted many of our graduates to establish themselves in business, serving their own clientele.

In addition to this free Employment Service, our students can participate in the earnings of our large clinic. The Chicago General Health Service, giving treatments to hundreds of patients. This profit sharing feature enables you to earn part or all of your tuition.

Spend a whole day or evening in our classroom WITHOUT CHARGE OR OBLIGATION and learn how you, too, can become an expert in this fascinating field through our low cost six weeks' course.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Only once in a decade do you see a business of this character sweep the country like wildfire—yet, our business discloses permanent and perpetual income for those who start with the business while it is yet in its infancy.

Our business had grown to where we were using four suites of offices, plus a service station. This method of operation has been extremely inconvenient—we have just made our first real move for expansion, consolidating our executive offices, sales, engineering, production, shipping and service departments in one building. At the present rate of progress it will not be long until we must again expand.

Last week, H. E. O. came to our office and stayed a week, negotiating for eastern territory as a distributor. During the week he was offered a position with a salary of $12,000 a year with a national organization. He refused that attractive offer and accepted a contract with us.

F. H. C., who was in our office yesterday, is closing a deal for us next week on which we will pay him $3,000.

We can give you dozens of cases of this character. We are selling a device of economic value, which costs the buyer nothing—for it pays for itself within a few days.

Our salesmen in Chicago are selling the biggest corporations and the most prominent individuals in the city. We can use Distributors in various parts of the United States and salesmen in Chicago and vicinity. Write, wire or call for details.

Bird-Sykes
Established 1903.
28 years on Michigan-av.
Selling High Grade Cars.
2211 S. MICHIGAN-AV.

WHEN "BIRD-SYKES" SAY REBUILT

they do not mean merely "shined up," "tightened up," and "tuned up." Rebuilt in the Bird-Sykes Shop means thoroughly checking the entire car for wear, replacing worn parts with new, rebuilding, adjusting, tuning up, repairing body, renovating upholstery. That is why a Bird-Sykes Rebuilt Car satisfies the eye as a new car, and its performance is the same as new.

GRAHAM-PAIGE SIX, 614, 5 Pass. Sedan. This 1929 model has the 4-speed transmission, looks "new" in every detail, and should give its next owner the best of satisfaction. It has been rebuilt by us, carries our guarantee. Has 5 excellent tires and much equipment. See this car at once. $585.

GRAHAM-PAIGE SIX, 612, Sedan, 1929. This late car has hardly been used and is like new every way. Not a garage anywhere or a suggestion of use by the previous owner. Has 6 wire wheels, 6 tires, etc. Rebuilt by us and guaranteed. $625.

GRAHAM-PAIGE SIX, 615, Cabriolet 1929. This cabriolet has practically the same lines as the cabriolet selling new today. It has not had a great deal of service, yet we have given it the usual Bird-Sykes rebuilding so that its performance is the same as when new. Has 4 speed transmission, chromeplated, and many other features. This is a car of real beauty, available in some time and we advise your early inspection. Guaranteed. $695.

HUPMOBILE BIG 8 1929 Sedan 4 door. The famous Century 8 model and a car very much in demand. It will pay you to see and ride in this one. Shows no signs of usage in any particular. Tires perfect. This car has been rebuilt by us and is guaranteed. $795.

DODGE Victory 6 1929 4 dr. Sedan. Comes to us in almost new condition mechanically. Special paint job of attractive gray with harmonizing blue fenders. It's really different looking. Everything on it, from tires to absorbers. You'll want it if you see it. Rebuilt, of course, and guaranteed. $465.

TAILORING TEMPERS ROMANTIC MODES

First, a formal evening ensemble from Meinbocher has a wide frock of black and brown changeable ottoman worn over huge, flaring trousers of salmon pink taffeta. The corsage flower is salmon pink to match. The short, draped cape coat is black velvet trimmed with sable.

The second sketch shows Martial et Armand's new dotted muslin suit. Skirt and jacket are brown Swiss with beige dots, while the fitted tunic blouse is beige Swiss with brown dots. It's trimmed with ruffles of beige Valenciennes lace edging.

Third, Meinbocher makes a dinner dance ensemble of black romain and trims it with a necklace of silken poppies. The black romain bolero is little more than a pair of attached dolman sleeves. The skirt is worn over black chiffon pantalettes edged with bright red lace.

Last, Molyneux's latest sports ensemble has a frock of salmon pink tussor, printed in black and white, and a plain salmon top coat of soft monk's cloth. The skull cap is made of material to match the coat, with a tonsure crown of salmon pink velvet.

Coverlet Guild Unique Among Women's Clubs

Samplers, Old and New, Discussed at Meeting.

THERE are in Chicago dozens of women's organizations dedicated to interests outside the path of the conventional woman's club. One of the most intriguing of these is the Colonial Coverlet guild of America. Notices of the guild's monthly meetings invariably pique curiosity of the club department.

For instance, the announcement of a meeting held last Wednesday stated that "Samplers" would be the topic for discussion and bore the line, "Members please bring samplers, old and new." The talk for the opening meeting last October was entitled "Through Colonial Doorways," and the members were advised to bring coverlets.

The March and April meetings will be devoted successively to "Early English Silhouettes" and "High Lights on Textile Design," with displays by members to illustrate each topic.

Guild Activities.

Not long ago the president of the guild mailed a copy of the year book to the club editor and, for those interested in early colonial history, we herewith submit a brief sketch of the organization's activities.

The guild was organized in 1924, "with the hope of creating an interest in the preservation of the coverlets woven by our forbears during the first century of our nation." These coverlets have been appropriately called "American tapestries." They have been disappearing rapidly, and without the efforts of the guild, a great American art would die with them.

The guild collects photographs of hand woven coverlets belonging to its members, records all facts obtainable in duplicate record books for its members and for the Chicago Historical society, and stimulates interest by giving exhibits. Probably the most pertinent commentary on the industry of the guild is the fact that after seven years of its existence, the membership boasts of owning a far greater number of hand woven coverlets than any museum in the world.

Maintains Loan Library.

The guild is, of course, affiliated with the Chicago Historical society, and its official address is 632 North Dearborn street. It maintains there a loan memorial library which is at present a collectors' library. Later it will add history and biography.

Like all other organizations in Chicago, the guild is preparing for the Century of Progress exhibition in 1933. Plans are under way for a cook book and quilt book to be sold at that time. Also a chairman has been appointed to sponsor an exhibition at the fair and to record all examples of weaving and needlecraft as well as all articles of historic interest belonging to members and available for such an exhibit.

The officers of the guild are Mrs. Carl Medinus, president; Mrs. Frederick T. Avery, and Mrs. Frank L. Richardson, vice president; Mrs. George M. Groves, recording secretary; Mrs. G. Edwin Soll, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. B. F. Ramsdell, treasurer.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans.

MRS. KELLOGG, who had functioned as program chairman for over two years, was going abroad and a new chairman had been appointed in her place.

"If your new chairman doesn't make a great success of her work it won't be because she's afraid to ask questions," remarked the former chairman to the secretary as the two met at the lunch table. "I've been with her for the last hour, trying to answer some of them. As fast as I disposed of one, she had another ready."

"It's a good sign," voiced the secretary. "Many of our chairmen just blunder along without asking for help or information."

"I was like that," admitted the former chairman, "too dumb to ask questions or, perhaps, afraid I'd expose my ignorance. Anyway, this new chairman isn't leaving anything to chance. She wanted to know just when she was expected to go on the platform; where she should sit; how she should introduce the speakers—"

"It's a good deal more important to know how to stop them when they run over their time," broke in the secretary.

"She wanted to know that, too, and how she should conduct discussion and whether she should thank the speakers or let the president do it, and any number of other things."

"If she didn't ask questions you'd think she wasn't interested in her work, or was entirely satisfied with the information she already had about it," claimed the secretary.

"And she was so appreciative—just as though I were doing her a big favor," added the former chairman, "and I was tickled to death to do it. Really, I never realized before what a nice woman she was."

"She probably never asked you for so much information before. I guess we're all inclined to feel kindly toward those who show respect for our knowledge," stated the secretary. "It's one of the greatest compliments you can pay a person."

Question.

"Can you tell me what the magazine of the federation is called and where it is published?"—M. K. L.

Reply.

If you mean the General Federation of Woman's Clubs, their publication is the Club Woman, published in Washington, D. C.

Question.

"Is there any question a chairman

Illinois Has Many Sects and Few Church Members, Survey Shows

By the Rev. John Evans.

[Further church news will be found in the Metropolitan Section.]

ILLINOIS has a wider variety of denominations than any other state in the union and at the same time 3 per cent fewer church members than any other state. This fact was revealed by the Rev. Dr. Robert E. Pugh, executive secretary of the Illinois Council of Churches.

DR. ROBERT E. PUGH.

Dr. Pugh told of the recent meeting of the Illinois convocation of ministers at Springfield, when ways and means to bring about closer cooperation between the denominations of the state were adopted. He stated that Illinois has 144 denominations at work at the present time, while in the entire country there are but 212 Christian communions.

Too Many Churches.

"In one county of Illinois," said Dr. Pugh, "the total population is less than 20,000, and there are now 62 churches. Twenty-eight of those churches are affiliated with three varieties of Baptists. The thing the Illinois council will seek to do is to find ways to overcome the over-churched districts, such as this county indicates, and at the same time make provisions for the under-churched districts near the larger cities."

The basis of incorporation of the council, Dr. Pugh said, rests on the following principles:

"To create a better understanding among Christian forces.

"To secure a more adequate grasp of the religious needs of the state as a whole.

"To assign, so far as possible, the particular religious tasks of the state to the most fitted to perform them.

"To focus the entire constituency of the council upon these problems of the kingdom which can be wrought only by a united effort."

A Clearing House.

Dr. H. T. Morrison of Springfield, Ill., president of the council, declared the council will become a clearing house for intelligence related to all forms of interdenominational cooperative activity.

The council, he said, will conduct surveys, foster united effort in behalf of an effective evangelistic and missionary effort, and endeavor to unite all Protestant forces of the state behind great moral and reform movements.

"The Deterioration of Patriotism Since Washington's Day" will be the subject of an address by Dr. Bernard Iddings Bell tonight at the services of the Sunday Evening club, Orchestra hall. Dr. Bell is professor of religion at Columbia university, New York, and the warden of St. Stephen's college, Annadale-on-the-Hudson. The club choir of 125 voices will offer special patriotic music. James P. Haynes, vice president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, will assist in the service.

The Rev. T. F. Conlon, O. P., who was recently appointed national director of the Holy Name society and editor of the Holy Name Journal, will be one of the preachers of the mission conducted by the Dominican Fathers at the Holy Name cathedral, beginning today. The other preachers will be the Rev. G. B. Neltzsy and the Rev. F. L. Vander Heyden.

The mission will open at the solemn mass at 11 o'clock this morning, and the services the first week will be for women, with a mission for school

CHIN CHIN

by Kathleen McLaughlin

NEW ORLEANS, La.—[Special.]—Yassuh, ah taken it on de lam. "Way, way down below the Mason Dixon line" seemed a safe point of vantage from which to await hoots or hollers inspired by last week's new col'm caption. So, here we've been for the last few days drowning our sorrow amid Mardi Gras gayeties when the mail verdict waxes unfavorable, and adding a couple of yeps for each letter applauding the correspondence ballot. To date, thanks, we've managed to be gratifyingly noisy.

It wasn't, naturally, entirely a faint heart that induced us to take French leave—otherwise we shouldn't have done such a good job of laying two time-worn superstitions en route. For it was Friday the thirteenth when we stepped aboard an air liner at the municipal airport, without even a rabbit's foot for luck ballast, and said to the pilot: "Kansas City, James." It was with the memory, also, of the ace of spades having been flipped into our lap (wrong side up) at a bridge session the previous evening, and either of the two should have been fatal.

Somebody's certain to quote the one about the bad penny. Anyway, it was a heavenly trip, figuratively as well as literally. There are folks who find flying wildly exciting. Not this devotee. Exhilarating would be a better word, but we must confess to a few moments of rapt ecstasy every time we get into a plane and feel it give that slight lurch that means it has severed connections with mother earth; that a manmade machine has spread its wings and taken to a higher element.

As he closed the door of the plane at 9:15 o'clock, while the motors roared and snorted, the trim young attendant in the trim blue uniform poked his head in to say: "I hope you have a pleasant trip." Maybe that helped. It was murky and dark above Chicago and the air bumpy. But speeding southwest above Iowa the sun came out, and far below banks of clouds scudded before the wind. Just at 1 o'clock we circled the municipal airport at Kansas City and dropped down into a chill, bright day, five minutes ahead of schedule.

Mardi Gras pilgrims crowded the train out of Kansas City. It rained and it rained. One wondered about this sunny southland. At Memphis the downpour interfered with sightseeing to the extent that a taxi chauffeur, imbued with civic enthusiasm, had to do the honors in the radius of a few downtown blocks. He pointed with pride to the Sterick building, Memphis' one skyscraper, an eye-filling office structure to twenty-nine stories, and bowled us over to Front street to point out Confederate park and the muddy Mississippi rolling down to the sea beyond, almost obscured by fog.

Well down into the Yazoo valley in Mississippi, where "Pop" (Edward F.) Younger finds inspiration for his quaint poems in the Negro dialect, the rain stopped and the sun shone down on rows of weather stained cabins fronting the railroad. Their occupants, dusky, leisurely, carefree, haunted the station platforms in little town after little town, hands sunk in pockets.

Jackson, Miss., loomed up as the most impressive and progressive burg between Chicago and New Orleans on the I. C. route, with an imposing skyline and a metropolitan air to its broad streets and substantial appearing buildings.

Twilight closing in found us debarking in the balmy air and the electric atmosphere of New Orleans, and a gay revel dedicated to Protheus. Canal street was aglitter with incandescents and a-swarm with pedestrians and motor traffic. Flags and bunting billowed

Beautiful Women of 1931 Are Sophisticated, Clever

By Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—There are contradictory elements in large groups of women as well as in the individual. Just take this so called depression era, about which we are advised by cheer experts that there "ain't no sech thing," but which in spite of 'em, some folk claim, leaves them with less money to spend than they used to have. Now, I have noticed one thing around New York, anyway, and it is that women seem to have perked themselves up with more pictorial grace, in spite of the leaner purse, or maybe because of it, than I had noticed before. Perhaps it is bravado. Perhaps it is spirit's-cheer. Perhaps women have more time to prepare themselves for the occasions of public appearance. I don't know.

At any rate, if you make up your mind at the eleventh hour that you need a good show to cheer you up and you simply swab your face with the puff, slick back your hair and do not change your frock you are not as comfortable in the audience picture, this year, as you may have been last or the year before. Audiences just are dressier. Of course, it may be that the people who have money to spend for shows are the always-moneyed. But I have a feeling that it is something else at work on women.

Dress Styles Influence Women.

I think that they are first on their mettle to look bright and contribute their share toward the needed cheer work and, again, that the particular dress styles of the moment affect the very care of woman as well as her physical person. They affect her to better her art as a woman. It isn't physically possible for one to clothe herself in one of the long skirted creations, with belted lines or without, but femininely lined above everything else, and escape a feminine desire to attempt physical loveliness to match the frock.

During the easier dress period, the chemise type of frock, that is, one could be informal of person and feel comfortable in one's dress. Not now. There's a certain grave formality of coiff and makeup and the properly scented bath that goes with the fashions of late '30 and early '31. For these reasons, then, in a theater audience of the moment where a successful and therefore fairly high priced or exorbitantly high priced show is in progress, you are apt to see some shining versions of woman at her most artful and clever.

The fact was re-impressed upon me, the other evening, at a sophisticated comedy which drew forth, as one would expect, a sophisticated group of people in sophisticated furs and evening gowns, showing most sophisticated vertebrae. Extreme types these—stunning, striking and maybe startling, if you'd been down in Guatemala on a several years' absence. Not all the audience, nor a major part of it, for that matter, conformed to the pattern of sophistication. But so many examples there were that an interested onlooker must recognize sophistication as one standard by which our women are judged today.

These women, for the most part, are women, I should judge, from 30 on. Just as the styles adopted by young girls set them apart in a jeune fille class, so the formal dress of older sisters seem to enter them into the group of clever sophisticates. Of course, there is no sharp age line for jeune filles and sophisticates. And there are all manner of types that go into the making of any fair sized audience. But I am speaking of the outstanding persons in a smart gathering.

Coiffure Is Important.

While dress plays a vital part in the role presentations referred to, I think it is the coiffure that proclaims these smart women. Never have I seen such sophisticated coiffures as are being worn at this moment. One in particular has a number of followers for so daring an arrangement. It

Spring Clothes Are Pretty, but Not Quaint.

Paris Snapshots

Worth reports that their new two dress ensembles have been selected by some of their smartest clients. They have a light coat that may be worn with a light frock to match or with a dark contrasting one that sometimes matches dark fur trimming on the coat.

Two-color evening coats are being worn by some chic Parisiennes. They offer a variety of sartorial effects, being wearable with a frock to match either shade or with pure white or all black gowns.

Orchid pink is being forecast for spring and summer by couture color prophets. Orchid pink gloves and buttonhole flowers will lend fresh accessory touches to navy blue and black costumes.

The French Colonial exhibition to be opened this spring has already begun to influence Paris fashions. Wide Moorish stripes and African colors led the beach mode as it appeared on the Côte d'Azur this season. Sports jewelry in wood and metal, designed after Cambodian, Siamese, and African patterns, is smart with the new pebbly wool and silk costumes that are coming to the fore in spring styles.

Isakoff is showing new pouch shaped evening sacs, much like the old fashioned "opera bags" of the early 1900s, that dangle from the left wrist, leaving both hands free to cope with long skirts, trailing sleeves, and automobile doors.

PARIS.—Ultra romantic fashions have had their day—for a while, any way. The modern girl quickly discovered that racing cars and airplanes were not compatible with playing at "keepsakes," and the "interesting pallor" that the neo-1930 styles seemed to call for simply couldn't be did on an outdoor régime. So, of course, the too feminine stuff had to go.

Maybe it was once true that a girl would sacrifice everything for vanity [though I've never had any visual proof of that], but it isn't true today. We've learned a thing or two about the art of reconciling chic with comfort, and if the couturiers didn't give us what we wanted we'd just go on a sartorial strike until they did.

But it's hard to catch the Paris couturiers napping. They keep their eye on the fashion ball all the time and they know just where it's going to drop. Even before the girls themselves had made up their minds about the period pose, they had done a little prophetic mind reading and begun to make more "tailored clothes for spring."

Often the old style pendulum swings too sharply from one extreme to another, and so there was some danger of garçonne revival; but Paris creators have been wise enough to stop just in time and the result is that the first spring and summer clothes I've seen are just about perfect, because they're perfectly adapted to the psychology of the girls who are going to wear them.

Charming Materials.

Spring clothes will continue being pretty, and though often tailored they'll never make girls look anything like boys. A lot of their charm comes from their materials. There are flower printed tussor frocks in the new dragée shades, combined with plain wool coats for sports that are good enough to eat—a simile that just naturally occurs to me, because dragées are those small pale pink, blue, green and white candies that are showered upon children at French baptism celebrations.

Cottons, like dotted muslin, embroidered Swiss, dimity, batiste, and those real silky India muslins that were considered so chic in the '70s are used for everything from tailored suits to evening dresses, and if hard times are the reason for these charming economies, that's one silver lining to the old stock market cloud, at least.

For afternoons, georgettes strike the keynote. The new triple and quadruple georgettes are so thick that they'd look like crêpe de chine if it weren't for their peculiarly lackluster surface. These thick georgettes in plain colors are being used for suits. Printed in indefinite patterns that look as though they'd been laid on with a fine brush, they're good for afternoon ensembles of frock and two-thirds coat.

Thick ribbed silks are being forecast for tailored frocks, suits, afternoon and evening ensembles. The two colored changeable weaves are enchantingly chic for dressy wear.

Deeper Shades Good.

Apart from the above mentioned dragée colors that are in the lead for hats, accessories and sports, some deeper shades show signs of fashionable advancement. All the salmon tones from palest shell to deepest terra cotta will be seen, alone or doing their bit toward the success of a brown, gray or black costume. Bright reds in their Roman, guardsman and American beauty tints brightened up the southern sartorial landscape and probably they'll do a lot toward making our northern summer gay.

Beiges and grays are coming back strong after a lapse from fashionable favor, and this is good news, indeed, for they're being revived in their warmer tones that are almost universally becoming. And how practical they are!

Among the ubiquitous bicolor combinations, black and brown are frightfully smart, and if well done make you look too exclusive and distinguished for anything. The drawing on our page today will do more than any amount of writing to show you what the couturiers are doing about reconciling chic, girlish allure and freedom.

For instance, there's one of Molyneux's new sports ensembles. The Cold Storage Process Provides Balanced Meals at Stabilized Year Round Prices for the Housewife.

TODAY let us consider the subject of cold storage. I know there are a good many people who oppose this method of food preservation. They doubt the safety of foods held at a low temperature over a long period of time. I used to be one of that number. But after going through several plants and checking up on conditions I became a believer in this method of caring for food. Cold storage is an indispensable factor in the modern scheme of food distribution. It is just as essential a part of the machinery of getting food from the producer to the consumer as are trucks, express, and freight trains, and refrigerator cars.

More than 60 per cent of our population is now living in cities and not one is a producer. Less than 40 per cent of the people who live on farms at great distances from the city produce our foods. Vegetables, fruits, meats, food of all kinds are produced in highly specialized areas. At certain seasons of the year these foods may be had in abundance but there are other times when there is none.

If man did not preserve or store food during the flush season he would enjoy one great feast and then suffer a famine. To avoid a scarcity of food during scant seasons, cold storage plants have been built in the large cities especially in cities that dissemble foods. Chicago is one of these cities and has the largest cold storage plants in the world.

Service to Producer.

While the storing of perishable foods during the flush seasons serves the purpose of providing food for the scarce season, it also serves the producer. If the surplus were thrown on the market during the abundant season the price would go so low that no person could afford to continue production. But storing the surplus results in higher prices to the producer during the flush season and in lower prices to the consumer during the nonproducing time. These results are for the good of both consumer and producer.

Besides conserving the surplus cold storage serves another purpose. It preserves in certain foods qualities which the consumer demands. Poultry, for example, has its flush season for broilers and fryers in June, July, and August. But these young birds are not always available as fresh dressed. That is, they do not retain their quality in the fresh state. Broilers and roasters eventually become roosters. And not many consumers want roosters. Poultry is like a melon or a berry, it must be picked when it is ripe. And cold storage is the solution of preserving the quality that the public demands.

Cold storage serves still another purpose. Sometimes there is railroad congestion, strikes, and other cases of an emergency character and foods are placed in cold storage houses for temporary purposes. After the emergency has ceased the foods are brought out and again move into consumption.

Cold Storage Process.

So much for the reasons why cold storage is important in food distribution. Other questions must be answered, however, before we are satisfied with cold storage products. What about the quality of the foods that go into storage? What is the influence of low temperatures on quality? How long do foods remain? To answer all of these questions it will be well, I believe, to describe in detail the journey of one food—eggs—through the cold storage plant.

From March until June, when hens lay more eggs than can be consumed with profit to the farmer and when they are of the finest quality, these eggs go to the storage plants. While the velvety bloom is on the shell and the inside of the egg has its finest flavor, they are hustled to the country store or to the egg buyer who immediately ships them in refrigerator cars to the wholesaler. The wholesaler places them at once in cold storage.

Here they remain until autumn and winter when the hens do not lay enough to supply the demand. The eggs are put into new clean cases and are stacked with space for air around each case. The sweet fresh air, the scrupulously clean room and the maintenance of a temperature between 29 and 31 degrees F. preserves the original fine qualities of the egg. If the retail merchant maintains the same care and keeps his eggs in a refrigerator the consumer is sure to obtain a fine product.

Highest Quality of Food.

While conditions of temperature vary for different foods, each food must be of the highest quality when it goes into storage and each must be given careful supervision. Our best food authorities and connoisseurs agree that products which are stored under the ideal conditions of the modern storage plant are wholesome. No one claims that storage improves the product but those who have made most careful comparison of storage products with fresh conclude that the cold storage food is without deterioration. Several months ago I made a test of fresh broilers with broilers that had been frozen as hard as a brick. I served these chickens to some guests who were critical and most discriminating about flavors, but when the same pieces of chicken from each bird were put on their plates they could tell no difference.

Foods that are to be consumed raw, such as apples, celery, and potatoes, cannot be stored at a freezing temperature. Foods that are to be cooked may be stored in sharp freezing temperatures as low as 20 degrees below zero. It has been found that a sudden sharp freezing to a low temperature produce small ice crystals in the food, and though the food remains frozen for months the texture is not broken down. This applies to poultry, as well as to frozen fruits. Much scientific research has been done to work out the ideal storage conditions for each particular food. Conditions as they exist today are under perfect control, the humidity can be kept constant, as well as the temperature. It has been found that a humidity around 85 is ideal for all foods.

Time Limits.

The time limits of storage vary greatly. Some foods stay in several months, others only a few days, but no food is kept in storage from season to season. Federal, state, and city cold storage laws control the time limit. Cold storage is as free from abuses as most of our economic situations, and the abuse of these laws would be to no advantage. There are too many people who are interested in the cold storage industry. The owners of the cold storage plants rarely own any of the stock being stored. The cost of storing foods is too much to induce those who own the foods to abuse the law.

Then, the longer the product is stored the stronger the competition would be with fresh products, and the longer products stay in cold storage the more difficult it is to sell them. Every food entering cold storage is stamped with the date of entry.

Yesterday I obtained from the Central cold storage plant of Chicago, the world's largest storage plant, some data which will give a definite idea of the length of time and the temperatures at which some of the important food products are held.

Eggs and Cold Storage.

Eggs [in cases] are stored during March, April, and May. These are the months of greatest and best production. Most of the eggs are withdrawn by the first of the following January, although a small proportion of them might remain in storage until Feb. 1.

Canned eggs [frozen] are stored during March, April, and May. They are stored in temperatures of from 15 degrees to 20 degrees below zero F. The large bakeries begin using these eggs shortly after they are canned; the supply usually lasts until the following February.

Butter is stored during the months of flush production [May, June, July, and part of August]. It is carried in temperatures of from 15 to 20 degrees below zero F. The bulk of this butter is usually withdrawn from storage during the months of November, December, and January.

Broilers are stored during July and August; fryers during September, and roasters and fowl are stored during October, November, December, and part of January. The broilers and fryers are used during the autumn and early winter months; roasters and fowl are taken out of storage during the winter and spring months.

Berries and Other Fruits.

Strawberries are stored during May and June [frozen solid]. These are mostly used during the summer months. It seems that the pie bakers, and they are the people who use most of the strawberries, have found that strawberry pie sells better during the summer months than at any other time of the year.

Raspberries, blackberries, currants, gooseberries, and cherries are not stored in such large quantities, but they are put away during summer months and are gradually withdrawn during the early winter months. Occasionally some are left in storage up to the time of the following season of production. A large quantity of berries and cherries are being put up in barrels, cans, and paper cartons, frozen, and shipped under refrigeration to cold storage warehouses in large cities, to be distributed during the winter and spring.

Apples in large quantities are stored in October and November. There are numerous varieties. Some keep for only a short time. Naturally these are used first. The bulk of the storage apples is usually withdrawn by the first of April. However, some varieties do remain in storage until July.

Pears are harvested and stored during September and October, and are withdrawn beginning with the latter part of October. They are usually cleaned up by the first of March, with occasionally a few remaining in storage as late as May or June.

Vegetables.

Vegetables of all kinds are stored for a short period of time during various months of the year, depending upon harvesting seasons and abundance of the crops.

We may summarize the service that cold storage renders as follows:

1. Cold storage equalizes supply and demand as well as prices.
2. It reduces waste by reducing the glut on the market.
3. It encourages production.
4. It places perishables in the speculative class.
5. It makes luxuries common everyday articles in the diet.
6. It has made of the American people the best fed people in the world.

reminds you of nothing so much as the headdress of your old-time washerwoman whose business it was to get her own work done at home before she left for her appointment with your wash tub. The hair is sleeked back tight over the brow, pulled down more tightly, if possible, back of the ears and ends in a precise little knot right in the hollow at the back of the neck.

The distinguishing point between this and the washerwoman's delight is in the small measure of the knot at back on current exhibitors and also in the almost perfect ears revealed (none other daring it) to which are appended long, ornamental earrings. It's a trying style, but stunning if you have the right measure of feature perfection to bring to the test.

Hair otherwise runs to many styles. In fact, you are privileged to invent one of your very own if you choose. If it agrees with your face you will be accepted. There is only one rule still dominating the coiffure universe and it is that its contour conform to effect an ensemble with the dress. That is, the line of symmetry is considered as beginning at the top of the head and not from the neck to the soles of the feet.

You can wear your hair in a gay riot of curls, beginning over the ears and running cross back head country out on the other ear. These curls may even run up the back of the head half way, in which event, the sides are flattened down to create a smarter line. Or, indeed, the ears may be completely exposed and a garden cluster of curls run up and down and across in the back to behind the other ear. Or, sub-deb style, you may gather what has grown down to meet the lower half of the neck in the back with a neat little barette and let the curling ends dangle coquettishly.

You can part your hair on the left, on the right, or in the middle. You can let it lie flat as a three-wide wave indention on one side will permit and run a hand through the other side to rough it up a bit, just to be different. You can, if an ingénue, look faintly reminiscent of the boyish bob with the hair coming out on the lower part of the cheek in a sort of widow's peak and have the hair between ear tip and crown waved just enough to take the male curse off the coiffure. The general effect is straightish, but not entirely so, and is very becoming to one of the ingénue performers now playing on Broadway.

Luster Is Needed.

BUT the whole point of my introducing hair and coiffes today was to make observation on the quality of hair seen; and on the lack of quality, the latter being a particularly great pity in view of the top position coiffes have assumed. Also, because there is no reason why a head of hair could not have that vital beauty to it that it has only when a fine gloss is exhibited.

Some girls take this gloss point so seriously, their heads look as if they had been dipped in a pot of oil before coming out. But even that is better than the dry, uninteresting looking head that holds no luster at all. This latter condition is something that ought to be taken in hand immediately. The scalp should be oiled every night and the hair brushed until the youth of the hair is returned. It's oldish and that is chiefly what we have against dryish looking hair. Not the smartest coiffure originated will save it if the hair does not have a warm gloss.

Pillow Cases from Sheets.

It is an economical plan to use sheets when worn through the center, for pillow cases. Three can be made from one sheet if it is of the usual size. The hems may be utilized on two of the cases. S. W.

Rugs at No Expense.

A friend of mine solved the rug problem for a bedroom, by taking a large well worn rug and making smaller ones from the less worn spots. In the end she had a round one, an oval, and a rectangular one. They were bound with a contrasting color which, in this case, matched the color scheme of the room. There was not only the satisfaction of having saved money, but also the possession of attractive rugs. T. S.

Supplied with Birthday Cards.

Since my little girl was 5 years old she has gone to many children's birthday parties. Rather than buy a birthday card to accompany each gift, I purchase a 10 cent box of children's stationery. In it there are twenty-four sheets of writing paper with a pretty colored picture on each, and twenty-four envelopes. She writes her birthday wish and name on a sheet of this stationery, thus eliminating buying cards. H. M. D.

Saves on Gas.

I have an oven dinner once a week, and always bake a few extra dishes, such as roast beef, baked potatoes, squash, apples, macaroni, cheese, or a small pie. In this way I save gas.

DREAMS COME TRUE?

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you care to see it in print address "Dreams," Chicago Tribune.

Foretold Husband's Return.

Six months ago a dear friend of mine was made most unhappy by her husband leaving her. Without any reason, or saying anything, he left suddenly. I told her not to worry, that if any harm had befallen him she would know of it, and if not, that he would return.

One evening I dreamed that my friend's husband had returned to her and that I, calling on her, met him in the lobby of her apartment building.

Thinking the dream rather strange, I called on her the next day. As I entered the building to ring the bell, who was standing there preparing to ring the bell but my friend's husband, who had just returned after being gone for six months.

Imagine my surprise and delight in seeing him as I had seen him in my dream. S. L.

Saw It in a Dream.

All of my life I have had prophetic dreams, distinguished from others by being repeated night after night. Recently I dreamed repeatedly of a rope being tied across our front porch and signs of pneumonia and diphtheria. A week later I was seriously ill with pneumonia. A woman came to call and in opening the front door the shade flew up, making a noise which frightened me so that the doctor ordered all porches roped so that no one could come to the doors. L. M. B.

Restored Lost Ring.

I had lost a beautiful aquamarine ring and as a month had passed with finding it, I had given up the search as fruitless and had dismissed it from my mind.

One night I dreamed that the ring had slipped down behind the radiator in the front hall. The next morning I dug around with a stick and there, snugly tucked into one of the radiator claws, was the ring I had dreamed the night before of finding. G. M.

Lucky Dream Meant More Pay.

A well known firm was about to give an estimate on a large stock of goods, and had called in a group of extra people to assist the bookkeepers. One night just before the estimate was sent in I dreamed that an error had been made in the above estimate of a total of $2,000. I did not think anything of it at the time, but the next day while going over the books I found an error similar to the one I had dreamed about. I reported it to the manager, and was told to report to the president's office that afternoon. I did, and received a steady position, more pay, and many congratulations, thanks to my dream.

Saved Her Ticket Home.

I am visiting in the city. One night recently I dreamed that I must take my pass out of my purse and leave it at my daughter's while going down to the city or it might be lost.

This afternoon my purse, containing all my money, was stolen in an elevator in a loop building, but my transportation was saved by my lucky dream. L. A. W. in the breeze. There was a blare of bugles in the near distance, and there, like a mammoth colorful serpent, the parade of Protheus wound its vivid length down the avenue that deserves to rank with the Champs Elysées, Unter den Linden, and Michigan avenue as one of the world's most fascinating thoroughfares.

Float after float passed, the mummers richly garbed as prince and as chevalier, as Japanese silk merchants or colonial gentlemen, against the gilt and crimson and lavender of their conveyances.

Hundreds of Negroes, clad in scarlet or orange smocks, adorned with mock ermine, carried double flambeau torches that cast weird flickering lights across the vehicles they marched beside, white teeth gleaming, black eyes sparkling. Bands in scarlet and gold uniforms made the welkin ring with martial airs.

All this was but an introduction to the festivities of last Tuesday, the real Mardi Gras, which means literally "Fat Tuesday," and closes the season of carnival on the day before Ash Wednesday.

Balls, parades and public and private functions climax the revel of Mardi Gras and the reign of Rex. The old city puts away its inhibitions, throws restraint to the wind, and enters into the festival with the spirit of children completely carefree. Formality goes into the discard, social precedence is only a phrase, and every one is happy.

Costumed and masked, debutantes and stenographers gambol for a few hours on terms of equality along the democratic distances of Canal street. There is horse play, but little roughhousing. Monks and sailors, clowns and devils, Spanish señoritas and little Miss Muffets, Columbines and Harlequins, Pierettes and Pierrots weave in and out among the brilliant floats of Rex and his retinue, laughing, singing, pushing, dancing.

Garnered gab. Kansas City is gaga, just now, about Cleo, who bears no resemblance to that queen of Egypt whose namesake she is. Cleo is a hippopotamus, a recent arrival at Swope park zoo, and so far has her fame spread that last Sunday afternoon her admirers formed a line three deep and half a block long outside the animal house just to get a peek at her. Cleo, it might be remarked in passing, was unutterably bored by her callers and demonstrated it by snoozing while they passed on.

We heard, too, about a Kansas City youngster with an uncle in a bond house, who has heard a great deal about markets without ever seeing one.

The other night he was driving with his father when they passed a vegetable market.

"What's that, daddy?" he asked.

"That's a market," he was told.

"Is it up or down?" he wanted to know.

At Leavenworth we were told for truth that old Mr. Samuels, retired clothing merchant, was a patient in St. John's hospital from Thanksgiving until a couple of weeks ago, having sawed off the limb on which he was sitting while trimming trees.

Kept from Theater Fire.

When living near New Haven, Conn., my husband and I had a narrow escape. We lived in Short Beach, a town seven miles out of New Haven and famous because it was the home of Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

One rainy evening our neighbors across the way phoned, inviting us to go to New Haven to a movie and when we refused because we did not attend on Sunday, they came over and begged us to go. We still refused and they decided to go alone. Such a large crowd was lined up to get in that our neighbors drove back to our house.

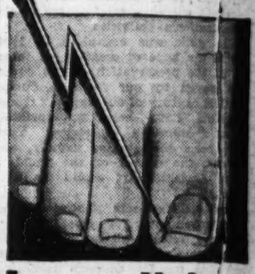
About 9 o'clock the phone rang and my neighbor's mother called up to say that the theater was on fire. She had been sitting on the balcony and went out before the show started, got her money back and went home.

Most of those who sat in the balcony were killed for the building was old and the balcony caved in. The fire started from incense and special lights in a spectacular arrangement shown before the movie. P. F. C.

Singer Was Her Cousin.

One day my girl friend and I went to a loop theater. The master of ceremonies had one of the boys in the orchestra sing. I remarked to my friend that he had a marvelous voice.

The next day I went to visit an aunt who had just arrived from California two days ago. Imagine my surprise when I was introduced to her son, my cousin, and found that he was the singer in the theater. E. J. L.



Ingrown Nail Turns Right Out!

Pain Stops Instantly

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

End Oily, Sallow Skin

A little Calonite powder sprinkled on a wet cloth and rubbed gently over the face each night ends shiny, oily complexions, gives new life into sallow skin, and cleans the pores of all dust, dirt, and grease, blackheads. It makes the skin fine, refreshed and bright, so you will enjoy a good night's rest.

A SCIENTIFIC TALK ON COLDS, PNEUMONIA AND flu.

HEALTH REPORTS show that flu, like colds and pneumonia, is now more prevalent. And authorities are urging everyone to take all possible precautions.

Just what causes flu has not yet been definitely established by science. But a weakened, run-down condition may make us easier prey to flu—just as it makes us easier prey to colds and other winter ailments. So authorities stress the importance of building up vitality and resistance. Eat nourishing food. Get plenty of rest, fresh air and exercise. Avoid exposure. And start taking a good, fortifying tonic at once.

Doctors advise Scott's Emulsion

Scott's Emulsion is recommended by doctors because it brings the remarkable health-building and disease-resisting vitamins of cod-liver oil—in the pleasantest, quickest way. As a result, Scott's Emulsion benefits you almost immediately. It promptly strengthens and revitalizes weakened systems. It improves your weight and appetite. It increases your resistance against the dread attacks of pesky colds and other winter diseases.

Try Scott's Emulsion for pale, thin children, too. Made of purest, tested Norwegian cod-liver oil, Scott's Emulsion is rich in vitamin A, the growth-promoting vitamin that helps guard against disease. It is rich in vitamin D, the sunshine vitamin that prevents rickets. It also contains vital mineral elements that aid in forming sound bones and teeth. Space in Small Quarters

Tricks of Decoration, Like a Magic Wand, Can Make the Tiniest Room Appear Ample and Airy.

OUR parents were seldom confronted with a problem that, nowadays, faces almost all young couples starting to furnish their first homes. It is simply this: How can small rooms be made to appear larger? When you consider that a huge and increasingly large number of people in this country live in flats and five room houses and apartments you will realize that this is an exceedingly pertinent question.

In the days of the 19th century, when our grandmothers were rearing their children in spacious old New England houses of from ten to twenty rooms, the kitchens alone being large enough to include two ordinary rooms today, no vexatious conundrum of cubic feet [or the lack of them] presented itself. Enough furniture to equip an entire modern apartment was found in the front and back parlors, alone, not to mention the upstairs sitting room, the study, the library, the music room, the sewing room and all the other rooms we grandchildren have learned to do without.

Jason, seeking the golden fleece, has nothing on the young marrieds of 1931 who, after days of fruitless hunting, wonder wistfully if there is such a thing as an apartment of reasonable rental that boasts a bedroom large enough to accomodate four or five pieces of furniture without becoming so crowded that one must, perforce, walk sideways to avoid barked shins. Again the query crops up: How can a tiny room be made to appear not so tiny?

The answer is: By using colorings that exaggerate rather than diminish the size of the walls; by careful selection of pictures, rugs, and window hangings, and by using furniture of the small scale type. First, let's take the walls. Dark colors tend to make a room look smaller. Paint two adjoining rooms of exactly the same proportions in two shades of green: the one room a dark, deep blue-green, the other a light pea green or apple green. What is the result? You feel as if you are in a small airtight box in the first room. In the second you have a feeling of airiness, light and space. Plain plastered walls painted light green, a light, pinky-gray, a soft apricot, cream, pearl lavender or a delicate tan, or covered with a silver paper will invariably make a small room seem larger.

In selecting pictures and hanging them, a group of small, narrow framed prints, etchings, or what have you, will exaggerate the size of a small wall space, while one huge oil painting, for instance, will at once make it appear even smaller. The illusion is true of the windows. Windows with many small panes will make a room appear larger than will ones with large panes.

Small rooms should avoid fussiness if they are to have a feeling of space. Window draperies should stick to solid colors, or to a small repeat pattern. Never indulging in large, splashy floral designs or French provincial plaids or Toiles de Jouy with their large, pictorial pictures. Fine, smooth fabrics, hanging in long, straight folds, will help to make the room seem larger. Coarse, heavy materials will have the opposite effect.

There is nothing like a plain, solid color rug as a background to a room's furnishings and as an aid to achieving generous proportions. Fill the place with small, large patterned rugs and the result is anything but harmonious. Better, far, to leave the floor absolutely bare.

A small scale dining room group in colorful maple.

Plain walls, simple furniture for the small room.

In arranging the furniture one of the tried and true rules of interior decoration holds good. Place the large pieces against the large wall spaces and arrange the rest in logical groups. Avoid placing anything in the center of the room, as this is certain to give a small room a cluttered, awkward appearance. Never place a desk or table diagonally across a corner, if the room is small [or ever, most decorators say], as the effect destroys the lines of the room.

Remember that space must be allowed for lanes of traffic. No matter how tiny the room, allow for approaches to the entrances and exits. A chair or the end of a table in the way will prove a constant source of annoyance.

In choosing furniture for the small apartment the wise person will avoid heavy, ponderous styles and buy pieces that, while just as comfortable and luxurious, are built on a smaller scale. If you will once place two tables of the same height and top surface, the first being Jacobean or early English in type, and the second being Sheraton, or Duncan Phyfe, your eye will tell you at once that the latter is the ideal choice for the small room. Instead of a huge, heavy couch or davenport, which takes up much space and tends to dwarf the size of the room, why not choose a love seat or small couch large enough for two, extremely comfortable and not so bulky and massive as to be at all cumbersome?

Early American furniture of the smaller scale type is most appropriate for young people just starting to furnish their home, for it is simple, unpretentious and charming. Maple, the popular wood of most modern reproductions, brings color and graciousness with it. Today's illustrations show a dining room group, extremely reasonable in price, exhibited for the first time at the recent show at the American Furniture Mart, and on sale at several Chicago stores. Due to its plain surfaces and simple lines it is ideal for a small room.

The table has extension ends. Either the corner cupboard or the Welsh dresser or both may be used, and the ladder back chairs may fill in at the bridge table, if necessary. Also, the side table, if not needed for a server, may be used elsewhere as a desk, or even as a dressing table, if a maple framed mirror is available to hang above it.

There are so many possibilities in this attractive group that it should prove a real joy to the person who, in these days of depression and despond, is hunting inexpensive furnishings for a home.

simple but definitely pretty frock is made of pale salmon pink tussor printed with a quaintly formal pattern of black and white flowers. It has a white organdy collar with a drawn-work hem and the armholes are edged with hemstitched organdy bands. The belt is salmon pink suede.

The comfortable topcoat with patch pockets is of plain salmon pink monk's cloth in a soft quality. Molyneux makes the skull cap of matching material with a salmon velvet top piece.

A Dancing Ensemble.

Next comes a dinner and dancing ensemble from Meinbocher, whose new house is attracting a great deal of attention in couture circles in Paris now. It's of a semi-transparent black crêpe romain. On the large figure at the right you see the back of the frock with its basque peplum in back and the adorable little shoulder blade bolero, which is really a pair of united dolman sleeves cut with a square décolleté. The wreath of silk poppies that finishes the front décolleté of the frock [see small figure in the background] ties like a necklace at the back of the neck.

The small lady is holding up her skirt to show you that it's made over full black chiffon pantalettes edged with bright red lace, for Meinbocher firmly believes in trousers for women, though he believes, too, in veiling them with filmy layers of mystery. The short length of this frock is interesting and significant of fashion's trend.

Another drawing shows a more formal evening ensemble, also from Meinbocher, that features a different type of trouser. The outer frock is of changeable black and brown, wide ribbed ottoman. It's worn with a short cape coat of black velvet trimmed with sable that may be asymmetrically draped as on the large figure, or falling evenly down, as on the small one. The sleeveless frock has a square décolleté and a pointed peplum that mounts to make the lower bodice. The voluminous wrapover skirt opens over hugely wide salmon pink taffeta trousers, further widened by inverted plait godets set in from above the knees. A salmon pink corsage flower repeats the vivid color note.

Muslin Is Tailored.

Last comes Martial et Armand's adorable dotted muslin tailleur. The skirt and jacket, shown on the large figure, are of brown Swiss with beige dots. The jacket is fitted and flared by an irregular circular basque. It buttons right down the front with muslin covered buttons. The wide crush belt is brown suede. It has no collar and its two-thirds sleeves are cuffless, the beige lace collar and cuffs being part of the fitted tunic blouse worn beneath the jacket.

This tunic is of beige muslin with brown dots. It's softened at the waist in front by five horizontal inverted tucks. Its sleeves puff below four ruffles of beige lace edging. Lace ruffles also make the collar and are sewed on in scallops to finish the hem.

Cyclone Comes to Farmer's Aid.

A farmer in the windy state of Kansas had harvested his corn crop and had stored it in his corn crib, which being constructed of lumber was blessed, or afflicted, with a large number of knotholes.

One day a terrific cyclone, commonly known as a twister, struck the vicinity. The whirling motion of the wind started the ears of corn to revolving rapidly within the crib. The cobs were drawn through the knotholes much as if extracted by a suction pump, leaving a crib of shelled corn. D. L. B.

Reply.

Yes, objection to the consideration of a question.

Question.

"Is it all right for us to have our secretary cast a ballot for our club? W. P."

Reply.

If you have a rule requiring the vote to be by ballot it is out of order to have your secretary cast the vote. The essential feature of the ballot vote is secrecy and no one can vote on a motion directing the secretary to cast the ballot without exposing her vote.

Question.

"If a person is elected to office for two years can her term be shortened? "OFFICER."

Reply.

By amending the by-laws the term of office may be shortened or the office done away with.

Question.

"Can an honorary president hold a real office?—P. M."

Reply.

An honorary office in no way conflicts with a member's holding a real office. If an honorary president retains her active membership by paying dues she is eligible to office the same as any other member.

Question.

"Is it necessary to vote by ballot when there is only one candidate for an office?—A. G. M."

Reply.

Yes, if your by-laws require it.

Washington's Birthday

By Eleanor Jewett.

On Washington's birthday
I sometimes pretend
That I am George Washington
And I can send

My good dog, Blink Binkers,
To treat with the foe
And tell Lord Cornwallis
It's time he should go.

But crossing the Delaware
Wrapped in my coat,
I never, no, never
Stand up in the boat!

I think that George Washington
Knew about that,
And in spite of his pictures—
I bet he just sat.

Woman Surgeon's Work Takes Her to Many Nations

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(AP)—The only American woman to receive the Victoria cross, Dr. Adelaide Woodward, divides her time among many countries. Dr. Woodward has performed thousands of operations.

After a two year course in Vienna she went to a London hospital and then to a memorial hospital in India where, with a six room dispensary and seven tents she treated thousands of patients and finally achieved a 150 bed hospital.

She served with the British army in Egypt, was given the rank of captain-doctor and decorated with the Serbian crown.

BRIGHT SAYINGS

Please address all bright sayings of children to Aunty Bee, The Tribune.

Little Betty heard her mother say she was 27 years old when Betty was born, but she also heard her mother say she was just 22 now to some of her friends. Betty began to cry. Her mother asked her why she was crying.

"Well, I don't know how old I am."

"You are 6 years old, dear," said her mother.

"Then when I am a real old lady will you be just 23 years old," asked Betty? G. Mc. D.

Lois Betty, age 5 years, overheard us talking about Constantinople.

Presently she asked, "Where is Constantinople?"

I told her, "In Turkey."

Then she thought a minute and answered: "Well, where was the Constantinople in the Turkey we had for Thanksgiving? I didn't see it."

The other day while Betty's mother was writing a letter her foot went to sleep. Betty came running with her alarm clock and, putting it next to her other's foot, said:

"Wake up, old foot, and don't you go to sleep until mother does."

Visiting friends the other night, we talked about the passing of a favorite radio artist. When his death was mentioned, Sonny, a 4 year old neighbor, said, "Yes, he's dead on our set, too." B. D.

Appliqued Hems in Contrasting Colors Attractively Finish These Guest Towels.

BEAUTIFUL linen toweling may be bought by the yard in the right width for guest towels, and there is no end to the ways these may be decorated. Many are kept all white, using an appropriate design in the laid embroidery, or else a single initial or monogram. Others are embroidered in colors, using the satin stitch or the cross stitch.

Still others have an extension hem set on of some color. These are easy to make and pretty when finished. They are made of linen in delicate shades of any of the colors, and when finished should measure one and one-half inches.

A new way to decorate these towels is shown in the accompanying picture. A faced hem is set on each end of a towel, using linen—a handkerchief linen weight—in any preferred color. As you can see, the upper edge of each hem is cut in some odd shape and hemmed down by hand—using such tiny stitches that they will be invisible after laundering.

Then odd shaped pieces are cut out, the edges turned in, and hemmed down to the towel. Rather sizable dots, done in the laid satin stitch, are put in where they will look well.

Only the narrowest kind of a turning should be made in these appliqued pieces, and you may cut them any shape you wish.

One of the towels shown is trimmed in pink and the other in yellow.

Heavy Diet of Movies and Fiction Is Bad for Child; Apt to Give Him False Set of Values

By Gladys Huntington Bevans

Reading references on the adolescent will be sent by Mrs. Bevans on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

IN a guilty moment when I should have been working, I picked up for a few minutes a novel I have been wanting to read. I had read only a few pages when I came upon this—the thoughts of Jane, the young maid of all work, as she cleaned stairs on her birthday.

Jane was fond of the movies, or the pictures, if you call them that. To Jane: "Life seemed so different from the pictures. There were no stair rods in the pictures, or stopped up sinks, and if there was anything of that sort it was made funny, which it very seldom was at the Ravens.' Jane's father played the cello at a cinema, so that what she and her sister did not know about the pictures was not worth knowing. And she believed that the exciting life of the pictures was real life and this business of stair rods and washing up was a mistake.

"Either it was a mistake [which she sometimes feared would last for a lifetime], or else it was only the first reel of a drama from which, if one managed properly, one would emerge to happiness and wealth and a long kiss in public." From "The Water Gipsies," by A. P. Herbert, published by Doubleday-Doran.

Do you ever—you mothers and fathers of growing up sons and daughters—stop to realize how bad too many movies and too many novels are for them?

Movies and novels, and girl story books and boy story books often throw a false glamour about life that is a distinctly bad thing. These fictions, so often untrue to life, unfit boys and girls to meet reality. They make reality seem dull. They give boys and girls an actual conviction that life falls short of something because it does not measure up to the picture that stories and movies present.

The Romantic Age.

Too much going to movies, too much reading of novels and stories, especially the cheaper sort, can unfit boys and girls to adjust themselves to their homes, their companions, their schools, their work—that is, to life.

This does not mean that girls and boys don't pass through the romantic age. There is a time when they dream dreams and see visions. We parents may or may not know when this comes, but we may sense it, because we know we have all had that experience in a greater or less degree. We can believe in it because we can look back on it in our own lives if we'll only take the trouble to remember. This dreaming and detachment all has its place, but must not have too big a place.

The important thing is for children, as they grow older especially, to get a true picture of life and evolve a workable set of values. A strong diet of movies or fiction does not do that for them.

It really becomes our business to see that their lives have balance by not allowing their leisure to be absorbed by movies and fiction. We must be their stabilizers if they're inclined that way and see that they have plenty of first hand living. We must be the ones to keep their feet on the ground. We must keep them in touch with reality, so they may find the adventure and interest that real life holds.

One of the best ways for children to keep a grasp on actuality so that they may meet life with a true sense of values is by self-activity in playing games, in sports, in being with other boys and girls, in the exercise of a talent either for the arts, like painting, modeling, drawing, acting and organizing plays, or for the crafts like carpentry, cooking, sewing, and mechanical work of various kinds.

First Hand Experience.

The best way for a child to learn about life is through first hand experience—not second hand, by looking on and listening. He must learn to find beauty and satisfaction directly through his own eyes—not only through the eyes of a motion picture producer, radio performer, or fiction writer. He must learn to have real fun with real people and to see humor in situations that he meets himself rather than to have it all served to him on a mental and emotional platter.

It is first hand living that makes it possible to fit yourself to life—and it is when you are fitted to cope with life that you find it most interesting.

This is one thing we parents need to be on our guard about today. The world is just waiting to pour things into our children's waiting ears—to spread things before their waiting eyes—with radio, books, magazines, movies, and plays. We must not let them be swamped in unreality, lest they emerge to find the real world and real people dull, stale, and unprofitable.

Don't you remember when you were a girl or a boy reading and reading and reading about beautiful, clever women, ultra brave men, exquisitely kindly parents, bonnie apple cheeked grandmothers who presided over cookie jars and who welcomed their grandchildren on wonderful farms as they leaped from sleighs in winter?

Don't you recall reading about alluring women, eventful family life, fascinating girls, loverlike, handsome young men, charming surroundings, thrilling happenings, legacies at logical moments—don't you remember doing too much of this kind of reading and then how horribly dull your own immediate life seemed when you laid the book down?

Books and plays are full of glamour. And glamour is perfectly all right. But we want our children to be able to find that glamour in life itself, and they can do so if we see to it that they live in reality and meet life as it is, with all its imperfections and limitations as well as its beauty.

First hand living instead of living through the playwright and scenario writer and fiction writer and radio performer is what helps boys and girls in childhood and later in their work, their love, their marriage, and their social life.

Patterns and How to Use Them

By Clotilde

New Spring Cottons and Silks Add Distinction to These Flattering Designs.

YOU will, of course, notice at once the smart, abruptly flaring hem of the dress shown in pattern No. 2669—and this is accomplished by inserted circular godets at both front and back. The dress is really a one piece design, and the beautifully molded line through the waist is given by groups of inverted pin tucks. The cowl neckline is flattering and is most effective when a contrasting color is used.

The sleeves are full length and close fitting. You should have no difficulty in making this dress if you take time at the beginning. Compare the principal length and width measures with a dress that is right, and if alterations are necessary, mark plainly on the pattern pieces—allowing for them when laying the pattern pieces on the material.

Next, transfer every mark to your material while the pattern is pinned to the material—using basting thread on fabrics that won't stand tracing or marking with chalk.

Always have materials smooth before cutting out, and press seams and parts as you proceed with your work—never leaving it all to do at one time when the garment is done. Put the pin tucks in, either by hand or on the machine. Then press well. The pattern chart shows clearly how to set in the yoke. If you do the skirt part first, it will be wise to run a gathering thread around the front neck of the dress, so it won't stretch.

Godets are set in the side seams, and perforations on the pattern show where the skirt is cut up to allow them to be set in. Always pin these in from the top down, being sure to start right. Baste and stitch in the same way, starting at the top on both seams. A narrow bias binding will make a good finish at the bottom. This will take time to do well, for the narrow seam must be an even width, and the hemming down is put in by hand.

A blue Canton faille crêpe, with an eggshell shade for the contrast made the original Paris model. Any of the silk crêpes, wool jersey, or wool crêpes are suitable materials.

Pattern No. 2835 makes a little one piece dress with bloomers just showing beneath the hem. The front of the dress is shirred at the neck, as well as below the slashed opening. After the shirring is put in, and the small pocket made and stitched in place, there are just the seams to put together, and the round collar to make and put on. The sleeves may be long or short. Naturally, the long ones will be used if the dress is made for warmth.

These bloomers are finished with hems at the bottom. Elastic is inserted in the hem at the top. Be sure the elastic is not uncomfortably tight, for small children—too young to tell their troubles—might be made nervous and irritable by it.

Light blue cotton broadcloth with a white pique collar edged with organdy, Nile green linen, rose pink sprigged dimity, orchid and white gingham check, and daffodil yellow pique with brown dots make up most attractively. Pale blue wool jersey with navy blue pique trim, with the shirring worked in a darker blue thread, makes a winsome dress.

An entirely new apron design having a triple tiered skirt is shown in pattern No. 3328 and one clever detail is that it is cut entirely in one piece. It is easily made and would make a charming gift for some friend who does her own work. Perforated lines show where the material is cut through, gathering the bottom edges of each cut piece and joining to the upper cut edges. The extended edges of the ruffles are left free, giving a tiered effect.

Straps are sewed to the shoulder seams, crossing in the back and buttoning to the tab extensions at the waist line. A sash of the apron material is attached to the tabs, tying in a bow at the center back. Binding all the edges with a contrasting color will make an unusually pretty apron.

Cotton broadcloth, gingham, percale, and sateen are among the suitable materials.

3328—Woman's and misses' apron. Sizes small, medium, and large. The medium size requires 1½ yards of 36 inch material with 12 yards of binding.

2835—Child's dress. Sizes 1, 2, 4, and 6 years. Size 4 requires 2¼ yards of 39 inch material with ⅝ yard of 32 inch contrasting and 1⅛ yards of edging.

Clam Chowder.

10 cents salt pork, 1 can tomatoes, 1 quart milk, 1 pound flour, 1 onion, 3 or 4 potatoes, 1 can clams, Pinch of soda, 6 cups hot water, Seasoning.

Dice pork—Brown with the sliced onion. Put in a large kettle and add tomatoes, diced potatoes, salt and pepper to taste, and cook slowly for two hours. Add more water, if too thick.

Pick over and prepare clams (may be diced if desired) and add, with the juice to the stock. Cook just a few minutes to heat through. Heat one quart of milk and thicken slightly with a tablespoon of flour. Add a pinch of soda to clam stock and add hot milk. Serve piping hot with hot crackers.

This makes a whole meal in itself. The quantity may seem large but my family of four can finish it.

Reducing Lassies Found Too Rough for Scottish Gym

LOCHGELLY, Scotland.—(AP)—When Lochgelly's bonnie girls set out to grow slim they punched holes in the gym floor. They are getting slimmer, to be sure, but the owner of the building decided his hall was, too, when he found the floor coming to pieces, and ordered them out.

Now 30 lassies who only wanted to be more graceful are looking for another gymnasium—without much success.

WEEK-END WIVES

by FAITH BALDWIN

The Story in Resume:

Lola Davis is a $25 a week stenographer for an insurance company. Kenneth Hayes is a salesman for a public utilities corporation. They become engaged. Lola insists, against Kenneth's wish, that she will keep on working for a while after they are married. They call on their friends, Agnes and Jim Read, to tell them of the engagement, and then Kenneth goes home with Lola to break the news to her family.

INSTALLMENT II.

For Better or Worse.

THE Davis family received the news of Lola's engagement with varying emotions. Mrs. Davis cried a little and smiled a lot—she liked Kenneth Hayes—and then became eminently practical. When would they marry? Wouldn't it be better at home? How about clothes? Where would they live? And, taking Kenneth aside on that late Friday evening, felicitated him and bound him over to keep the matrimonial peace in the lovely, sentimental, somehow pathetic manner known only to the mothers of girl children. "She's a fine girl." "You'll be good to her, Ken, won't you?" "Her father and I have been very happy." "Marriage isn't easy, never think it, but if you really love each other——"

Mr. Davis grunted. Lola was pretty young to be getting married. "But," said Lola's mother, "I was just past eighteen!" "That's different," said her husband with masculine lack of logic. But he was satisfied enough. He shook Ken's hand and went through all the awkward, touching male emotions. He spoke of Ken's job. "About fifty a week," Ken told him, red to the ears. "Well," said his prospective father-in-law, "her mother and I had fourteen a week to start and we got along all right."

Howard was, of course, facetious. Howard would be. Howard, perhaps, conceded in his heart that it was better to marry than to burn, although why people were compelled to burn as an alternative he did not as yet understand. Howard wisecracked. And was a little rude to Ken. But his eyes were startled and inquiring as he turned them on his sister.

"Hope I can snatch me a free lunch now and then down to your mansion," said Howard. But his boy's heart was dark with a nameless melancholy. There were, of course, no words for it. Not in his vocabulary. Howard's thoughts may have been long, but they were also vague, dim, a struggle for mental expression altered and colored by the swift shifting moods which were beyond his own—and a great many other people's—comprehension. He only knew somehow that this was the beginning of the end; the end of this closely knit little family—mother and father and the three children who, having grown up together, quarreled, demanded, fought fiercely, took sides, were nearer to one another than they knew. This was the first break in the pattern of their unity. Lola married. Half a stranger. "Uncle Howard," said Howard to himself, with what he termed a horse laugh. But it wasn't so funny after all. Lola with other interests, Lola with a family of her own. It would be Millie next! Gosh, that crazy kid! And then, some day, himself. O, not getting married, that was a lot of baloney. But growing up. He knew vaguely that he was growing up. He termed himself an adult. "Hey, what's all the shooting for? I'm not a kid. Why can't I have a latchkey. O, for Pete's sake, you make me sick treating me as if I were a baby!" I'm a man, Howard told himself. But he knew that he wasn't. He very incoherently sensed that this pollywog stage of dreams and disasters, fevers and furors, boredom and enthusiasms, and, above all, the vast, rigid conservatism of his years, denoted the growing up stage. But with Lola marrying and the pattern shifting, the ultimate goal of youth, which is maturity, seemed to be too imminent. "Why in thunder," he asked of the kitchen cat, "do girls have to get married and all that sort of blah?"

The kitchen cat, given to complacent stove and veranda sleeping by day and to wild, untrammeled musical wanderings by night, looked at him from secretive amber eyes, yawned, and said nothing. Born female, born feline, she was wise in any generation.

Howard deserted the family conference and drifted out on the porch. Most every one on the street had gone to bed, he reflected gloomily. But there was a light up in Bill Downes' hall. Howard felt the need of companionship. Male companionship, young companionship. He was shut out from the living room with its mission furniture and Morris chairs. He ambled across the street and whistled for Bill. They had never been very close friends, but they had gone to school together and had, in common, their boyhood. But Bill wasn't there.

Howard turned homeward; Bill, coming up the block, was vaguely discernible in the dusky light, pierced by the curiously effective rays of the street lamps. White flannels. Cake eater! sneered Howard and resolved to strike a blow for white flannels in the morning. Bill, he supposed, mildly scornful, had been hanging over the gate with Mary Norris, around the corner.

"Hey."

"Straw," Bill replied brilliantly. There was a swagger in his walk. He'd kissed Mary. She wasn't, he told himself, easy to kiss, either. A nice girl.

They walked along together.

"What's new?" Bill wanted to know.

"Nothing. O, yes," remembered Howard elaborately casual, "Lola's gone and got herself a meal ticket."

"Who's the lucky guy?"

"Name's Kenneth Hayes. He's not so bad," Howard told the other boy, suddenly boastful. "Pulls down a lot of jack. Betcha they get a car."

Bill said something suitable. Probably "What kind?" Ensued a deep, grave discussion of the relative merits of automobiles. "I wouldn't have a foreign car if you gave it to me," announced Howard magnificently. "Overrated. That's what they are, overrated. An American twelve cylinder car, now! That's my speed. Say, have you seen the new flivvers?"

"Help Me"

When he came home the family conference was still in progress. He whistled loudly, carelessly, and went on up the stairs. "Aren't you coming in to say good-night?" his mother wanted to know. "Good-night," responded Howard, hanging over the bannisters for a moment. Then he went on his way. "That boy," sighed Mrs. Davis.

Lola, had Howard looked at her—but somehow he hadn't wanted to look at her; by tomorrow it might seem right and natural, but not tonight—Lola was flushed. Ken was scarlet. Mr. Davis drew on his old pipe, making the liquid sounds which so disturbed his wife at normal times. Tonight she didn't notice. Mr. Davis had been saying, pacifically:

"But if Lola thinks that she should keep on working——"

"I don't believe in it," Mrs. Davis said flatly. "When a girl marries she works, of course. For her home. For her husband. What kind of a home can a girl make for herself and her man if she's running to an office daytimes and skipping out to the delicatessen at night? I've seen 'em," she went on scornfully, "bringing home dinner in a paper bag. A bit of salad, a cut of cold meat, sliced so thin you can read through it. A couple of pickles and a bakery cake."

"Marriage," Lola commented, "isn't all eating."

Mrs. Davis snorted. She sat very erect in her chair. Her husband, thin, spare, furrowed across the high forehead from which the gray hair was retreating, looked at her with blue eyes in which a twinkle predominated.

"You'd be surprised," Mrs. Davis said, unconscious of her slang, "how much just eating marriage is! Good food. Hot. Nourishing. The kind of food that builds a man up and sends him off to work healthy, and well fed, and happy. Look at your father!"

Lola didn't. She looked at Kenneth instead. Her eyes were dark with appeal. Help me, she asked him silently, I belong to you now. The two of us against the rest of the world. Against even these dear people who love me. Help me.

Kenneth said soothingly, forgetting his own disquiet, remembering only the appeal in Lola's eyes, "Lola feels that it costs a lot to live nowadays. She wants to be a partner. It will be only for a little while," promised Ken, smiling, "and then she can quit and live like a lady of leisure. I won't always be in this job. I'll be working for myself some day. There's nothing in working for another man all your life."

He stopped, embarrassed, conscious that he had stepped heavily on Mr. Davis' shabbily slippered toes. Frank Davis had worked for "another man" for thirty years. Davis smiled, waved his pipe, setting the younger man at ease.

"O, I don't know," Lola's father argued mildly, "your own business is all very well, of course, but it's a risk. Feast today, famine tomorrow. There's something comfortable about wages that come in every week, about a boss that looks after you when you're sick, and pays you a pension when you're too old to work any more."

"Except when you get laid off," Ken suggested.

"Well, that happens, of course. But there is risk in everything." Davis' mild blue eyes had clouded. The fear of the wage earner. Constant. Getting up with you in the morning, lying down on your pillow at night.

Mrs. Davis rose. She hadn't said her last word. Not by a lot of words. But it was 1 o'clock in the morning.

"Lola, you have to go to work tomorrow," she reminded her daughter.

"No, I don't," said Lola. "You forget."

"That's so." The insurance employés had full Saturdays from June until the first of September. "But Ken does."

Twenty minutes later Lola and Kenneth stood on the veranda. Inside the house Mr. Davis put out the cat, spanking her gently. "Get out, you, and don't be howling on the back fence the rest of the night," and wound the clock. Comic strip gestures. Real gestures. Human. Routine. He tiptoed about the living room and kitchen, making an elaborate rite of turning out the lights. Mrs. Davis was on the stairs. "Don't forget to lock up," called Mr. Davis to Lola as he followed his wife, certain that all the windows had the catches on and that the screens were hooked.

"All right, father."

Opening to Life

Now they were quite alone. A light flared up in the front bedroom. They did not see it. A rambler, full blown, clambered up one side of the porch and ran, on stealthy green feet, over the roof. Frank and Annie Davis had planted it when first they came to live in the brown house. Near it a clematis grew, thick and heavy, not yet in the feathered snow of its fragrant bloom.

Lola stood in the circle of Kenneth's arms. She asked:

"It wasn't so bad, was it?"

"No, I'll say it wasn't! They're corkers. Lola, I love you so much. You'll never regret it," he told her and kissed her.

"Of course I won't. Run along now, it's awfully late. What will the neighbors say?"

"You know as well as I do. I'll be around tomorrow. Early. We'll get Jake's car and go down to Lundy's for a shore dinner. How about it?"

The wind from the Narrows, faintly salt scented, stirred in the tangled branches of the rambler roses. There was a silence on the dark corner of the veranda. Overhead the stars looked down and did not marvel.

Lola went upstairs, locking the front door dreamily. She went up lightly, her hand on the bannister rail. "I'll get you a ring," he said. "No, you mustn't; it's too extravagant; we need all the money we can scrape together to furnish the apartment," she'd told him, regretful but practical. "I've something saved," he boasted. "We'll need that, too," she'd said. "Then there's my mother's. It's old fashioned, Lola, but a good stone. I'll have it reset. You'd wear that, wouldn't you. She'd like it," Ken said, low.

She'd wear that, of course. Some day when their ship came in she'd have lots of jewelry. A dinner ring. A really nice pin. Meantime she'd wear the ring that Kenneth's mother had worn and she'd love it to death.

Now that he had spoken she wondered why she had feared that he would. It was all so perfectly right, so natural. And as wonderful as she had known it would be. Or was it? Yes, just as wonderful, only a little different. You didn't know, really. You dreamed, you lay awake in the darkness with your arms behind your head and thought over every look, every gesture. You were wrapped, somehow, in a flame which warmed but which didn't burn. You slept thinking of tomorrow. Wondering will I see him, will he telephone? You woke first to a vague, unformed feeling that something marvelous had happened, something marvelous would happen. Consciousness returned fully; you know, you remembered, you sprang out of bed and went to your windows and pulled up the shades.

That was over now. Gone. Now, you knew, now everything was settled. Now you belonged.

Marriage, thought Lola, that was the next step. You didn't know, either. You knew with your mind, with the knowledge people had given you, your mother, evasive, embarrassed, first, then the girls at school, then married women and books you'd read. O, you knew! Yet, not really. Even when men kissed you and murmured things and their voices grew hoarse and their hands grew seeking, even then you didn't know. You were simply stirred, you were disturbed, you were warned. Girls, of course, cheated—before marriage. Lots of them. You knew them, listened to their light, brutal talk. You hadn't cheated. Partly because of your people, their decency, their self-respect. Partly because of your practical middle class wisdom which told you that you hadn't much to offer, no madness of beauty, no temptation of fortune, just yourself and your integrity. So you kept that. And then, too, you hadn't been tempted, very much. Not if you were Lola, keen on her job, happy at home, clever at eluding, and never really terribly stirred until—until Kenneth.

Now you were glad you hadn't cheated.

"Your Funeral"

Mrs. Davis was waiting outside Lola's bedroom door. They couldn't go into Lola's room and talk. Millie was sleeping there. Millie needed her sleep. They couldn't go in Mrs. Davis' room, where Mr. Davis, yawning widely, his heart inarticulately tender, inarticulately sorrowful, was taking off his clothes and thinking how early he'd have to get up in the morning. Thinking, damn it, it was morning.

So they stood, Lola and her mother, just inside the bathroom door together, the tiled bathroom with its polished nickel and bright bath mats and shower, of which Mrs. Davis was so proud.

"You're happy, baby?" asked her mother.

Lola kissed her. No words were needed.

The girl looks tired. Her cheeks are flushed and her eyes bright, but she looks tired, her mother thought. There were many things to say. Many things to ask. But that could wait.

"Run along to bed," said Mrs. Davis and she smiled and Lola realized how pretty Annie Davis had once been, how pretty she still was. "He's a fine fellow," said her mother.

That was what she had wanted to hear.

She went into her bedroom, walking carefully because of Millie. She did not switch on the light; stood for a moment by the window looking out into the darkness of the night, a darkness traveling so surely toward dawn. She turned from the window, smiling secretly, and started to undress.

"Lola," said Millie.

Millie sat up in bed and turned the button of the bed table lamp. Through the rosy shade the lamplight streamed on Millie and her almost unbelievable beauty. Her rounded, slim shoulders in the voile night gown. Her red-brown hair with the light on it. Her skin of flushed ivory. Her great eyes dark with excitement. Her mouth, curved to a smile, shaped to a question.

"For Pete's sake!" said Lola and ran to pull down the shades.

"There's nothing," Millie told her, lying back against the pillows, "that the neighbors haven't seen already. What I know about Mr. Thompson since he got that sun lamp last winter!"

Lola pulled her nightgown over her head. She has a lovely body, thought Millie, although she didn't phrase it that way. But Millie was complacent about bodies, she was so sure of her own.

Lola started for the door. "Wait a minute," Millie told her. She patted the side of her bed. She had a pretty hand.

Lola sat down. Millie stared at her. She demanded.

"Well, why don't you tell me? I listened over the bannisters."

"O, Millie! Then I don't have to tell you, do I?"

"No." Millie was silent. Then she asked—they all asked that, didn't they? "I suppose you're awfully happy."

"Yes."

Millie said: "I like Ken. But you're too good for him. Too good for any man. Unless he has so much money that——"

"Money?" asked Lola. She lifted her chin. She said, proudly: "We'll have enough! But it isn't everything."

ILLUSTRATION BY W. H. WISNER.

"I like Ken. But you're too good for him."

Sometimes Millie worried her. Harping on money.

"You'll go on working," Millie stated rather than asked. Of all of them she seemed to take it most for granted.

"Of course."

"That's your funeral," Millie decided, "not mine. I wouldn't work for the best man on earth. When I work I'll work for myself. When I marry I'll quit working. And I won't be quitting the phone company either."

"Millie," said Lola with tired exasperation, "can't you ever get it through your head that little unknown girls from Brooklyn don't become movie stars?"

"Don't they? How about Anita Stewart? And Clara Bow? How about the girls, that started in business. Nancy Carroll was a stenographer, wasn't she? Ann Harding was working for an insurance company—like you."

"Go to sleep and forget it. Aren't you," asked Lola, suddenly wistful, "going to wish me—anything?"

The round arms shot up, pulled her down close. "You know," said Millie, with difficulty. Millie wasn't sentimental. Millie might dream, but she wasn't sentimental. Millie cared for her own, a lot. But she'd never let them know it. It made her feel queer and silly and babyish. So Millie was cynical instead. Millie cared for herself more. But that was natural, at her age and in her era. Millie knew all the parked car technique, but Millie was cautious. She knew more than Lola dreamed she knew; had experienced more. But was shrewd about it. Not from a dream with a man in it somewhere; not because of her family; but because she saw herself out of the brown house, out of the little street, out of the city itself. She saw herself with her youth intact and her beauty unimpaired. Millie was dedicated to very powerful gods, cry down the tinsel though you may. And as far as boys went—it wasn't passion that moved Millie to slip into difficult situations and with an incredible ease find her way out again and no harm done. It was a thirst for knowledge; for guarded emotion; for the spectacle of other people's emotions. For a sense of power. For a dramatic moment. Millie lived on dramatics.

Planning

Presently Lola slept. Not Millie. Millie lay there, thinking. "Some day you'll know," Lola had said. "I hope you'll be as happy as I am—some day."

Well, of course she would be! Differently. Flats—a walkup—a gas range—furniture on the installment plan, a man to cook for when he came home at night or when you both came home. Not for me! thought Millie. Babies and play pens and the odor of diapers drying, the tumbled hair and the flushed face and the marks of the can opener and hot water and suds on pretty hands. Never! vowed Millie.

Kenneth telephoned the next morning. On his way to work. "I can't believe it," he said, over the wire. "But I want to believe it. So tell me it's true!"

It was true, she told him. She hadn't believed it, either, waking to that half sleeping consciousness of something marvelous happening, something more marvelous about to happen. But it had happened. Last night.

She spent the morning with her mother. There were things to talk about. Clothes. "There's two hundred and fifty in the savings bank," Mrs. Davis said. "I saved it out of the housekeeping money. Ever since you were a baby. That's yours. To spend. Millie will have hers, too, when she's ready. We've put a little aside, for each of you, when you marry."

Lola took pencil and paper. They made lists. "I can give you some furniture," her mother told her. "There's a lot in the attic. Some you can use. And enough kitchen things to start. And your grandmother's dishes."

Fun, planning. Knitting your brows, trying to be practical and matter of fact. "Lucky," laughed Millie, at breakfast, "that you don't wear many clothes nowadays."

Howard groaned. What a remark! He edged from the table and was gone. Baseball. Not too old for baseball, down by the sea wall, with Bill Downes and some others. Later he'd go see the picture at the Dyker and laugh at the red nosed comedians and the skit on the stage, and applaud the acrobats.

After luncheon Connie came around. Lola had phoned her. Connie was happy for her, Lola knew that. But—"Must you work?" asked Connie.

Afterward, sitting on a bench along Shore road, they talked of the wedding. She'd wear, said Lola, something simple—blue, perhaps, because Ken liked it so much. An afternoon dress. "The hemlines are getting even again," Connie reminded her. And a floppy sort of hat. It would be, Lola deplored, between seasons, not summer nor winter. She'd buy her clothes to last over the winter, though. A street suit, a new coat, with a furry collar, an evening gown, "black, I think; black's always good," a tweed dress for the office. Shoes, she needed shoes, and lingerie.

With what she had saved and what her mother would give her there would be plenty for clothes and for linens, too, and she'd been up in the attic. There was a perfectly good bed there and some chairs and a couple of tables. Old fashioned, of course; they had belonged to her grandmother. "Every one," said Connie, "is crazy about antiques."

Presently they went for a walk, turned off Shore road and went up the hilly side streets. There was a house there which Lola loved. A fairy tale sort of house, stone, and built on several levels, with a roof that simulated thatch. It had unexpected windows, steeply gabled. There were shrubs about it and conifers. Back of it, a garden. On the upper level that garden—so situated that when you leaned from a bedroom window you looked into its radiant bee haunted heart.

She thought—I'll never have a house like that. A car was standing outside the door. A sleek car, long in the body. A chauffeur in uniform was talking to a pretty maid. Her uniform was silk, pale green. She wore a sublimated apron. She was laughing up at the tall Irish boy.

I'll never have a car like that, either, thought Lola. Or a maid in a silk uniform to flirt with a chauffeur in puttees. Never.

But she might. Kenneth was clever, Kenneth would work hard. For her. For the future. Their future. Lots of people with cars and chauffeurs and maids and houses, like something out of the old dog eared volume of Grimm, had started with walk-up flats.

Yet how many people, passing, said to themselves—I'll never have that. And never did.

Connie was talking about the wedding. "Just the family, and the girls from the office, and some of Ken's friends. And, of course, you and Agnes and Jim," Lola answered absently. She was thinking of a wedding she had seen, as an interested bystander. She had been shopping, one Saturday afternoon, in New York. Had passed under the striped awning, treading on the red carpet of a Fifth avenue church. Her arms had been full of bundles, Christmas tree trimmings, and little silly, funny gifts from the big Woolworths. She'd stopped, a little tired, cold. The December air was biting. People milled about the church, a woman with her bonnet on the back of her head, idle men, with overcoat collars turned up, and girls, giggling, mentioning society page names—"they say he's worth twenty millions." "Polo," said a girl near Lola, "and the second biggest yacht afloat." She was quoting paragraphs.

That Choked Feeling

The church doors were flung open. Here comes the bride. Down the red carpeted steps, a white gown, a white veil, orange blossoms, orchids, lace. The bridesmaids a background, pastel tinted, laughing. The groom, in correct morning clothes, a stocky man. The bride was smiling. God bless you, lady, said the woman with her bonnet awry and telltale breath.

Rose petals on the steps. Rice. Policemen pushing back the crowds. Hey, what do you think you're doing? Tall ushers, running. A woman in mauve and lavender in a sable wrap. The bride had a sable wrap, too. Pride feels no pain. She'd come down the steps in the whiteness of the wedding gown, smiling. Pearls at her throat. Not a very pretty girl, but a girl who made you believe she was beautiful because she thought so herself.

Cars waiting. Cops shouting. Music swelling.

Lola had walked away, with her Christmas bundles, a choked feeling in her throat. It was, she told herself, severely silly and wicked to spend money like that. She imagined the banked flowers in the church. There would be a reception somewhere. At the Plaza the informed girl next to her had told her gaping companion. Money, thrown away. Or was it? This was that girl's day.

Now, Lola was remembering.

O, it wasn't envy. Not envy as Millie knew it. It was a sort of sick, empty feeling. As if something had passed you by. And you wondered why. Why it had passed you by and other people had it? Not the money. Not that. Not even what the money could buy. But the power of lifting everything out of the commonplace.

Not envy. She smiled, looking back at the house. The chauffeur was in the car now, the maid had disappeared. The house dreamed in its garden. It would be cool inside, with the shades drawn, the summer curtains fluttering against the screen. Tea. There would be iced tea on the small terrace where, Lola had seen, there were lounge chairs, striped canvas, and things green and growing in pottery jars, and metal tables and a great gay umbrella.

No, not envy. But something hurting. A child outside a pastry shop window, the nickel in her hand, to buy bread—not cookies.

"Perhaps," Connie was saying, "beige would be more practical. You could dye it, later."

"I know. But, blue," said Lola firmly. "My mind's set on blue. I'm going to watch the sales. And Agnes will help. She has an employé's discount at the store. She'll get lots of the things for me."

Blue. Kenneth would love her in blue. Just as much as in ivory satin and that faintly yellowed intricate lace, just as much as in yards and yards of train and tulle, in orange blossoms, with orchids negligently in the crook of a satin arm.

That was all that mattered, really, wasn't it?

They went to Connie's house to talk to Connie's shapeless mother with the young face, the coal black hair, the magnificent eyes, the difficult English. Joe, who ran a cigar and pool room somewhere, was home. A short, broad shouldered young man with a quick, dark gaze, a sullen mouth, given to fits of anger and to bursts of laughter. His fingers were stained yellow. He dressed well. Connie was afraid of him. He had a car out at the door. They lived in a two family house in a neighborhood of back yards, peeling paint, screaming children, and blowing paper. Yet the car outside was of a good make, in the four thousand dollar class. It was painted maroon and the metal on it shone.

Nothing Good Enough

Connie's house smelled of cooking. Of garlic. It was vocal with the cries and quarreling of the younger children. Connie's father was upstairs sleeping heavily, fully dressed. He worked on a night shift. Joe took his feet off the round table and greeted Lola. He was pleasant to her. He approved of her—with reservations. Joe had been born in Brooklyn, but he had not yet become accustomed to girls who looked you straight in the eyes and who gave you as good as they got, who held out firm little hands for a man's casual clasp. The girls he understood best he understood racially. Slim girls, very young, with the lovely skins, the great eyes, the mouths that drooped at the corners. Girls who obeyed their fathers and brothers and who went often to church and looked like the stained glass windows come alive as they knelt, their beads slipping through their pale olive fingers. Girls who married men of their race and class and went to work with them in little fruit or grocery stores, who stayed at home, and went out only to haggle at the market or to gossip with the neighbors over the ramshackle fences. Girls who grew fat and—aging. Girls who had a baby every year. Girls hot with high temper, hot with ardor, girls who might use a knife on a man if he were faithless, but who loved their men; who had, in childbearing, the incredible deep, voiceless patience of the Latin woman. Such a girl would Joe marry. And, if he had anything to say about it, such a man as himself would Connie marry. His partner, perhaps, Louis. Louis was all right. Drank too much, perhaps, gambled. But would be a good husband.

Connie didn't like Louis. "That little Wop," she'd said and Joe had asked, his chin thrust forward, "Wop, eh? What are you? What am I? Wop!"

That was it. That was what came of giving a girl this American freedom. Wop—and Dago. Nothing quite good enough for them. The house not clean enough, the food too rich, too much olive oil. "Can't you get mother to cut out a little of the garlic?" Connie would ask him, pushing away her plate. "It makes me sick. I can't go to work in an office with it hanging around me—like—like——"

Nothing was good enough for them. Wanted the windows open when you had a cold. Wanted doctors. Wanted light, air, cleanliness. "The company nurse said so."

Who the hell was the company nurse? What did she know? Ma, thought Joe, had brought up plenty children. Twelve. Five had died, of course, but children always died. You expected that. Diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles——

"You might drive Lola home," Connie told her brother.

"Sure," his teeth were white in a dark face. "Sure, I drive her."

"No," Lola smiled back at him, no need to antagonize Connie's brother. "No, thanks a lot, Joe, but I'd rather walk."

"You staya to supper," asked Mrs. Varesi, in her sliding soft accents.

Lola shook her head. She was, she explained, going out.

Joe's face clouded. Lola was always going out. It wasn't good for Connie.

Mrs. Varesi rose and shuffled into her odorous kitchen. She came back with a bottle and some little glasses. "Good," she said, taking out the cork. "You have a little drink?"

It would hurt her if Lola didn't. "It's all right," Connie assured her. "Joe made it from our own grapes. It won't poison you or anything."

It was red and sour, a thin wine. Connie laughed as Lola raised it to her lips. Lola was, thought Connie, a good sport.

A Queer Creature

Later Lola walked home. Down the shabby street with its heat, and noise, and smells. Poor Connie! And she, Lola, had been standing in front of a stone house in a cool garden with something like rancor in her heart. Yet her own street was quiet, a breeze reached it, there were flowers and old frame houses each set in its little yard.

Here there were flowers, too. Riotous. Roses, untrimmed, and forlorn lilacs past their bloom, rhododendrons shaped to sturdy trees, dusty hedges, geraniums, petunias. Now and then a pretentious bird bath, stones piled about it, ivy struggling for a foothold. Now and then small garden-truck patches. Or a fruit tree undercouraged.

There were immemorial gestures; these cried a reaching out after beauty. Yet not so much after beauty as after color. And not so much after color as after a certain sense of communion with earth. Dark earth, from which these people, and all people, had sprung; to which these people, and all people, must return. These back yard gardens, shabby or tended, were symbols. Symbols of man's need for earth, for the feel of it on his hands, the taste of it on his lips. This was the urgent desire which sent home men at night to city houses, which sent them out in their shirt sleeves to dig, to cut a tiny handkerchief of grass, to tie back bushes, to use the pruning shears.

Lola was aware of this. She did not put it in words. Had she done so she would have said: "Funny how everybody from the Shore road people to the people on Connie's street all have to have gardens, something growing." She didn't put things in words, ever, save in the most commonplace coinage of her age and day. What she thought, secretly, was never verbally released. Sometimes she wondered at Agnes' incessant search for the right word, the right phrase; Agnes' gift—or was it curse?—of analyzing; Lola called it "picking things to pieces"—Agnes' compulsion to argument. Perhaps, thought Lola of Agnes, it was the way she was brought up.

She was right. Agnes had come from an environment which made more of the contacts of the intellect than of the flesh. So had her husband.

Lola looked at her little wrist watch. It was late. She quickened her steps. She must be home in time to take a shower and dress. If Ken got Jake's car again they'd have a grand time at Lundy's.

If not they could take a subway.

She thought about Jake. Jake was a queer creature, all red hair and freckles and square, never quite clean hands. Jake was always buying up second hand cars that had been smashed up and were in a desolate condition, and working on them nights in his shed garage back of his father's house, putting them together, taking them apart, taking a part from this one to fit into that, and then giving the finished product a coat of triumphant paint and selling it at considerable profit over what he had bought it for. She liked Jake. He hadn't had much education, but he was a real person. Only he ate, drank and slept cars, garages, gas stations. He was fond of trying to persuade Ken to come into business with him. Ken, he said, was a natural. A born mechanic. More than that, he knew figures—financial figures, Jake would add, flushing. He could run an office. White collar stuff. With Jake on the garage end—if they got a garage—and Ken in the office, they'd get into big money some day. But Ken would laugh and shake his head. Selling vacuums and toasters was all right by him, he'd say.

Jake was going to stand up with Ken. And Millie with Lola. Lola would have liked Agnes or Connie. But she couldn't have just one. She would have to have both, and "this is no Vanderbilt wedding," she'd told her mother, laughing.

She was late getting home and Ken had to wait. She could hear him downstairs teasing Millie about her motion picture ambitions. She could picture the exaggerated toss of Millie's head, the flaunting of her slim hips, the gesture of her eloquent hands. She could hear Howard saying something about a car—it must be a car, Howard was always talking cars, but it sounded like a cord. She could hear her mother.

Presently she ran downstairs. She had a moment alone with Ken, drawn into the empty living room, as Millie and Howard scattered, self-consciously, and Mrs. Davis went back to the kitchen.

"Love me?"

"Well, yes!"

"As much as last night?"

"More."

And then from Ken:

"Let's go."

Crazy About Babies

It was like that the rest of the summer. Ken in and out at night. Shore dinners. Trips to Coney, screaming as the boat shot into the water which boiled up around them, screaming as the roller coaster took the steep hills and raced down them. Hot dogs. Funny prizes you got by shooting for them and paying more in the long run than a gross of them were worth. Dolls on sticks. Dolls with sleazy, sophisticated clothes and a cigaret glued to the painted china lips. Motor rides along the Shore road. Once a week-end trip to Jersey with Jake and Ken and Jake's married sister. Lola had wanted Connie to come, too, but Connie couldn't. Suppers at Agnes', with Agnes and Jim arguing about everything and never getting anywhere, and dropping the argument to go out for a soda, or to fix something in the kitchen, or because they were just too tired to argue any more. Clothes buying at the sales, with Agnes. "This is prettier, but this will wear better." Talks with her mother. "But if you work there can't be babies." "I know, mother; we'll have to wait." That embarrassed you, somehow. Not meanly. It simply touched on something you didn't want to talk about, even to your mother. You were crazy about babies. You had never told Ken so. He didn't guess. Ma didn't. And talks with Ken about furniture. And flat hunting with Ken. And finding one, not far from the Davis house, between Third and Fourth avenues, a nice little place with a sunroom inclosed like a porch on the top floor of a four family house, red brick whitening with the weather. Furniture and furniture stores. And

BREAKAWAY

By Stephen Morehouse Avery

Peggy in Paris, Armed with a Divorce, Made Her Choice—After a Little Practice—Between Her Faithful Admirer and Her Jealous Ex-Husband.

ILLUSTRATIONS BY P. T. JENSEN.

The driver risked life, limb and property in a mad juggernaut passage through narrow, cobbled streets.

THE Geneva Express, as if spent by its dash to Paris, crawled into the Gare de Lyon. Porters in their loose blue denim lounged through the waiting throng. Bags, hat boxes, small rugs, golf sacks, the clutter of travel, began the usual hand to hand passage from compartment windows to form little cubistic islands of luggage on the platform.

For a moment of uncertainty Peggy Holt remained amid baggage in her compartment, her gray eyes a trifle wide with some vague alarm, like a child's eyes, although she was neither a child nor even exceedingly young unless twenty-five may be considered that. Eighteen when she had married, that was young—stepping too immediately perhaps from a father's to a husband's protection—if Robinson Holt's treatment of her could ever be given such a name.

Presently she dropped a light half veil over her eyes and, clutching her dressing case almost desperately, stepped down to the platform. She glanced quickly and anxiously about as if she feared to be seen and, of course, she was seen. Men glanced at her furtively. But Peggy was accustomed to that, assumed it went with being a young woman, and it was another sort of gaze she was afraid of now, a gaze implying that she was somehow different, marked, classified—as if they could see straight through the leather of that handbag she clutched.

The porter moved away with her luggage and Peggy followed, thankful that these moments of weakness and unreasonable shame would be occupied by the mere business of getting from train to taxicab and then across Paris to her apartment in Passy. Near the gate she felt a touch upon her arm, but a deep voice and an arm braced behind her shoulder reassured her at once. "Come on now, Peggy; no tears." Judge Harris was her lawyer, arty, ponderous, too gayly clad. "They all feel like that at first, all the decent ones, anyway, and I've done the job for dozens."

Peggy smiled up at him. "O, I'm done with weeping, judge. But I can't help feeling conspicuous—and sort of smirched."

"Don't," he said. "You're well out. Peggy. That type of fellow's too ruthless, too much drive behind him for any delicate feelings. Add booze to a Spanish jealousy and—well, his hands are too rough for sheer fabric like you, that's all."

Peggy smiled faintly. Judge Harris, her lawyer, had been a friend as well. "Blame us both," she said. "But a girl can hardly make herself unattractive just so that her husband won't be jealous, can she? It isn't human. It's not feminine, anyway."

"No," he agreed, grinning at her way of putting it, "it isn't. Now you paddle on out to your apartment and don't for heaven's sake go flinging your little self into the first pair of male arms that reach out for you—no matter how patient he's been. Wait, Peggy, wait."

"No fear," said Peggy. "But Philip has been such a dear. Maybe some day—but why talk about some day? Everything was very simple at Geneva except the waiting. I only had to say 'oui' once, 'non' twice, 'none of your business' three times, and they gave it to me."

"It would have been easier still," said her lawyer, "if Rob had come over as he promised. Anyway, you're all clear now, although you should have asked for real support. Now I've a tea date with another little lady who's in trouble."

Peggy gave the address of her apartment in the Square Alboni, Passy, and the taxicab door shut her in with herself once again. She was thinking of Rob's failing to come to Europe to help her. "Accident prevents sailing." he'd cabled and then, of course, a week later she got the already suspected truth of it in a gossipy paragraph from Janet Hazelton, her friend and informant of things in Springfield. "You may guess, my poor darling Peggy, that he was tight, as everybody knows, and drove his car blindly into the street car, and everybody in town is just plain glad you're doing as you are."

Like a Motion Picture

All the long series of episodes which had led up to her sudden departure for Paris came into Peggy's visual mind, like a moving picture with the taxi driver's broad back as a screen. There was Rob's fight at the New Haven hotel when that hilarious Princeton crowd tried to pull her into a snake dance. There was the wreck of the speakeasy in New York because a stranger drank a toast to her—jealousy. There was his putting the two aviators who had flown her down from Boston out of the house—jealousy, jealousy—and violence. There was the last night of all, with the whole of Springfield already talking, when he arrived from a business conference in Hartford at their place on Cedar street, long after dinner, and found a collection of friends there, unfortunately mostly men.

The picture jumped into vivid being against the taxi driver's back. Rob came thrashing the car up the driveway again while they were all radio-dancing and having imitation mint juleps on the screened porch. "Get rid of them," he said, without care whether or not they heard. "I've had a rotten day."

What he'd had was a few quick drinks. "I can't very well do that, Rob. They are Janet's friends from New York, and the Newberrys, Harriet Day—and Philip. You told Janet to bring them yourself."

"And who?" he asked.

Peggy repeated, "And Philip. Please don't be silly, Rob. Slip into your things and hurry down." Her gayety and banter with men was too innocent in her own heart to occur to her as wrong, or as just cause for Rob's doubt. If he didn't know she was his by then, how could she prove it?

The others had gone out on the front lawn before Rob came downstairs. One of Janet's friends had followed Peggy into the rose garden. She scarcely remembered his name now, but he had admired her rather openly and made little asides all evening and he saw a chance to discover if she could be kissed. Peggy could have handled it, as any girl could, without trouble or a scene, just with laughter probably. But Rob's shoulders loomed in the half gloom behind them and it was all over before she could think. The man struck out instinctively as he was whirled around, and then Rob hit back, and the man fell limp, and Peggy screamed.

It was more than an hour before they revived him and got him off, as quietly as possible for Peggy's sake, to the hospital to have his jaw set. None of them spoke to Rob and he attempted no apology, except to say to her: "You know very well who I thought that was, Peggy."

Well, at last there was no need to worry about those things any more. She had been nervously snapping and unsnapping the catch of her handbag, guarded so carefully in her lap, and presently she opened it and took out a folded official document, the engraved inscription on its face already translated and fixed in her mind, "Decree of Absolute Divorce," and typed below, "Marguerite Pendleton Holt vs Robinson Holt." So that had happened to her, one thing certainly which she had never anticipated. How sure she'd been both of herself and of Rob, his strength, the intensity of his love, the feeling that she was walking into arms which would hold her tenderly and safe from the world. And then to discover that his idea of love was only something furiously jealous and possessive.

How little, after all, any girl could actually know about the man she marries! Nothing at all, really. Nothing for sure.

She remembered now the viselike crush of Rob Holt's arm the first time he'd ever kissed her. "Do you mind?" he had asked. So she should have known. How different, more tentative, more sensitive, more infinitely gentle, was the touch of Philip Vane! So she could at least know that, too.

The taxicab whirled along the Cours d'Albert and the Seine and passed between the Trocadero and that long vista of the Campus Martius framed under the base arch of the Eiffel tower. In another minute they rattled across the Place de Passy and turned left immediately to view the river again and to enter the Square Alboni, where Peggy could see the windows of her apartment. In her few months' residence and during her brief absence in Geneva the place had become home. Now she must go back to America and make another home, the best kind of home she could, unless—a memory of letters, telegrams, flowers, all of Philip's encouragement completed that unless—unless she married Philip Vane.

Paddy and Penny

The concierge took her bags while Peggy went in by the garden gate. A piped scream greeted her appearance, followed by a slightly fainter scream, as Paddy and Penny, or Patricia and Penelope, her babes of four and five, flung down croquet mallets and made for her in a bee line or, rather, two bee lines, across flower beds, pell mell. "It's muth!" shrilled Paddy. "It's my muth!" echoed Penny with emphasis on the possessive.

Perhaps Penny got that trait from her father. For the rest, the two of them were as like as peas, provided one pea may be a tiny bit bigger than another to allow for Paddy's extra year, a pair of fat, fair haired, and gray eyed elves, little Peggies. Yes, they were hers now, and yet even as she squeezed their soft little middies an ugly phrase came out of her mind to recall things—"herewith granted custody of children."

As if any court, much less a court thousands of miles from Springfield, had a right to grant Rob Holt's children to anybody else. She could concede him that, the only thing, and her mind could see him now carrying them up to bed both under one arm as they protested, and remembered her own terror that Penny would be crushed or Paddy dropped, a fear which apparently never entered their tousled heads.

Peggy's femme de chambre, who, like the ridiculously stiff legged little chairs, the soft old mirrors, the faded rose brocades, had "come with the apartment," had tea waiting in the small salon. Miss Simms, the governess, was in Peggy's bedroom trying to protect her underthings, indecently fragile in Miss Simms' opinion, from the vigor of Paddy and Penny, who were searching their "muth's" bags with the destructive zeal of inexperienced customs officials. Peggy slipped out of her suit and into a favorite tea gown, wine color and old lace, and then she went to the table in the salon for the little green oblong slip which meant a telegram and which was the first thing her eyes had fastened upon when she entered the apartment. Philip was waiting in London and he had promised to wire.

A Divorcee

She finished her tea with the message in her hand, unopened. She knew what it would say, the hour of his arrival and some word or phrase which would mean his understanding of her feelings, perhaps even his own gentle desire. "Brave girl—flying over from London—anything but wings too slow—Philip." That would be it and she would have a sense of not being so desperately alone, now that she was alone. She recalled the many hours, even some of the hours in Springfield, when Philip Vane had saved her from feeling alone. He had given her advice and courage at the crises and then had followed her to Europe so that there would always be at least a friend, finally and almost timidly offering his own arm and his plea that men can be trusting as well as jealous.

Peggy started to tear open her telegram, but the door phone buzzed and she jumped to answer it, fearful of—there are American reporters even in Paris—fearful again of being public and conspicuous and marked as a divorcée. "Yes? Who? O, Philip!" Happy relief. So the wings had brought him almost as soon as his telegram. She put it, still unread, in the drawer of her writing desk. It would be fun to read that after, to see what he'd said. Some tumult in her breast made her heart race.

Philip Vane was not Rob, neither so tall nor so broad, a more sensitive type and finer. Yes, that was it, finer, his perceptions, his movements, his fingers, his whole fiber. Peggy felt it again very poignantly as soon as he stood in the doorway and met her gray eyes with that faint half smile in his blue ones. There was a certain sort of spiritual good looks about Philip which in a way she had never thought of before. Away went her heart again thumping merrily and ridiculously as he bent over her and held her fingers without saying anything. And once again when he said: "No one has a right to be as lovely as you are in that—whatever it is."

Peggy laughed. "Tea gown, silly. I assure you it's quite proper—if you know your man. I'm so glad you've come, Philip. I needed you so."

He drew a chair close to the chaise longue where she rested. "Yes," he said, "you're glad, now that the thing has actually been done, but also I imagine you're a little sad, too, Peggy."

Her gaze fell. Philip would be the man who would understand that. And yet she wondered if he understood, or if she did herself, quite all the complicated emotions beneath that trace of sadness. "Yes," she said, "you're right, Philip. Because there are better things than being a divorcée."

"And worse things, too," he added quickly. "When you've done a brave thing, Peggy, don't weaken it by regret. Decision takes no courage when it costs nothing. And as far as being a divorcée is concerned——"

Peggy stopped him with some hurried remark about London, for she was not ready to hear what Philip was about to say. Perhaps she hadn't quite found the answer. He felt that instantly and leaned back in his chair, away from her, subdued and casual again, asking if she'd heard from Springfield. "Janet hasn't written in months, has she?" Then the children came in and made him nervous.

Peggy never sympathized with Philip more than when Paddy and Penny, associating all men with their father's careless rough and tumble, made their onslaught upon him, tripping across his feet, perching upon his reluctant knees, unfastening his waistcoat to see where his tie ended, all the while he attempted gingerly to caress them, that hopeless awkwardness of a bachelor with a girl child. "He won't hang us by our heels, muth," complained Paddy. "Dad always does." And Penny echoed with the simple statement of fact, "My dad's got bigger hands, muth."

Peggy smiled at them with little pangs in her heart. Whatever else about Rob Holt, they were his children. A pang for that and a momentary conjecture as to how much a child's estimate of men was worth. The spectacle of Philip trying so hard to be natural with them for her sake—a pang there, too. Even an at once dismissed pang for herself because the picture of life was painted on both sides of the canvas and she could never be sure which view of it to believe. People did things and people meant to do things and you could never tell. Take Rob, even. A woman wanted strength, yes, but not sledge hammer strength, in a velvet scabbard rather, and the answer to that was Philip.

A swell of tenderness filled her to see him somewhat disheveled and bewildered now that Miss Simms had taken Paddy and Penny to their supper. "Apparently," he admitted, "I have no genius with children, Peggy."

"How do you know?" she said, and then to dull the pointedness of it, "Perhaps you could learn. Will you come here, Philip." She beckoned him. "No, not like that. Must you stand there like a sentry? Down near me, I mean. Take my hands, Philip. Now tell me, if only to repay you for all you've done for me, is there anything I can give you."

He knelt there flushed and silent, as men are who plan things too well when events come too swiftly. His hands trembled slightly as they held hers until finally he leaned towards her. "It isn't just a favor I want, Peggy, but you yourself. Everything you have to give." He had command of the order of his thoughts now. "I want you to marry me at once. I want to take care of you truly and not only casually. I want to teach you to believe in men again. I've waited until now, Peggy, and it has not been always easy to wait."

Peggy's gray, unabashed gaze waited for his to meet it, and the ghost of a smile tugged at the corners of her mouth. "Very well, Philip," she said. "I will marry you. As soon as you like. O, but how can you be so deliberate, Philip? Why don't you—kiss me? It isn't becoming for a girl, a woman, rather, to throw herself into a man's arms." It was only when he held her and she felt the tremor of his body that she was able to understand the degree of his sensitive hesitance. It was another endearment and her own natural joy as his arms became tighter and his lips more demanding was lessened by an elusive regret that his more delicate emotion had passed.

Blind Tenderness

During that hour Peggy's tenderness blinded her to the revelation of a psychologically new Philip Vane, his sudden mastery, his immediate assumption of command. She could have seen it in his very parading about the room and in his quiet announcement that they would dine in one of the dark red corners of the Maisonette des Comediens Russe, even in the assured pat which, when they were brought in to say good-night, he placed upon the heads of an immediately suspicious Paddy and Penny. "I'll dash to the hotel and dress now, darling," he said. "Came straight here from London, you know. I didn't bother to wire because I knew I'd beat the message by Imperial airways."

Peggy lingered an instant after Philip had gone, her finger uneasily upon a spot on her throat where his kiss had touched, and her mind becoming filled with an absurd fear because of that casual remark of his that he had not telegraphed from London. Finally she rose, her tea gown trailing against her in subtle grace, and went to the writing desk for that portentous green slip which she'd left there when Philip came. Its opening folds disclosed a radiogram from her husband. No, he was not her husband, a radiogram from Robinson Holt. "Arriving Paris fourteenth. Please wait. Hope you are happier. Rob."

The paper trembled in her fingers. The fourteenth! Tomorrow! Could she escape? Was there time? Hadn't Rob Holt made her unhappy enough without interfering with her now? What were divorces for if not release? Perhaps it was the children he wanted, for it would be like Rob to damn the courts and try to carry them off. After all Paddy and Penny hadn't divorced him, had they? And then a new resentment against him flamed in her because he still had power enough to disrupt the happy decision which she had made less than an hour ago and with which even now her nerves tingled, a resentment stronger than her wonder as to what Rob could want or say.

Rob had said nothing when she left Springfield, nothing except: "Whatever you want, Peggy." He'd offered her silly amounts of expense money, which she refused.

Peggy determined that at all events Rob's message should not spoil Philip's first evening since she was confessedly his, not until it was over, anyway. The little green slip remained folded in her vanity case throughout their perfect dinner in a dark red corner at the Maisonette. The excellence of their caneton, the ruby warmth of their Chambertin, the small group of cosmopolitan epicures about them, the quiet insinuation of the music and singing made her almost forget. They lingered over coffee and liqueurs until almost midnight while a turbaned gypsy woman sitting apparently half asleep at one of the tables began singing of a sudden with a wild, rough, savage abandon that tore things loose inside one, shocking and yet fascinating.

They were sweet hours and Peggy waited until Philip was driving her home in his own powerful American car before she brought the green slip from her vanity case. "What are we going to do about this, Philip? Do you want to advise me?"

Philip drew up under a street lamp and read the message. Its effect upon him amazed her, his sudden color and anger. His hand which had held hers so soothingly closed upon her fingers with nervous tension. "How long have you had this, Peggy? This afternoon? You mean you had it when——"

"But I hadn't read it," she said. "I found it just as you arrived and thought it was your wire from London I was saving it, Philip." For a moment she wondered if Philip were afraid of Rob, actually afraid physically. "Why do you think it makes so much difference?" she asked him.

"If it makes little to you, then it makes less to me," he said. O, so it was only for their happiness that he was afraid. "We are entitled to be happy, Peggy," he said, "and there's only one way to be sure now. We must be married tomorrow and then we'll run away, into Brittany, St. Briac, perhaps. I've been there. No, I don't think he's after the children. Miss Simms can bring them to join us in a few days."

Time for Reflection

Peggy was still struggling against the shock of his "married tomorrow." She couldn't marry Philip tomorrow. How could a woman make up her mind to love a man on Wednesday and actually marry him on Thursday? There must be time, at least a little time, for that essential reiteration to herself: "Yes, I love him. I need and want him. I want to be his. I want to be his wife," over and over until there was no denial.

But there was a fear, also, a fear that what she had, his trust of her, his utter lack of jealousy, his infinite tenderness might be lost to her if the dark shadow of Rob Holt stalked into their momentarily sunlit world. "Yes," she said finally. "You're right, Philip. We'll go to some little place where he can't find us. We won't even delay to be married. It's complicated in France. Wherever we go it will be just as easy and it makes no difference if we're together, does it, Philip?"

He drove some distance before answering. "Yes," he said eventually, "it does make a difference. Not that you can't trust me. But it's something conclusive. That's what I want. We can stop at Bagnoles de l'Ornes. That's about half way. There's a good hotel. We can be married there tomorrow afternoon."

Yes, it was like Philip to protect her against an impulse. Somehow that provided just the last reassurance. They would be married at Bagnoles and it would be very sweet. They made plans as they drove on towards the apartment, the grim line of Philip's jaw relaxing gradually. Sometimes she realized how long in his quiet way Philip must have loved her, how often his gentle gallantries gone and unrecognized, far back into those Springfield years when for her there hadn't been another man on earth but Robinson Holt. "Where is Bagnoles, Philip?" she asked. "What fun to be married in a place you never heard of. I'll have to pack tonight, late as it is."

The one side of the Square Alboni which is not blocked by apartment houses lay open upon a long slow turn of the Seine, glittering at the moment under a low moon. Its misty glow filled the whole square and made the street lamps and the single lighted window of Peggy's apartment seem a dull and dusky red. Philip slowed down under it. "I'll call for you tomorrow at nine-thirty, Peggy," he said. "I'll get the car ready tonight. What! For heaven's sake?"

For Peggy had seized his arm. "Go on," she whispered quickly. "Don't stop here. Go on around the square."

Philip accelerated and they passed by the apartment house and turned the corner. Then he drew to the curb. "O, didn't you see him, Philip?" She was gasping a little. "That man standing there staring up at my window. I think it was Rob."

The pale dismay in Philip's face served to calm her. Why should any man go through such worry and trouble when the world was full of free women. "Don't mind, Philip," she said. "He won't find us at St. Briac."

"You'd better go to the corner and make sure it's he," said Philip. He opened the door for her. "If it is he must have come on the Bremen and motored down from Cherbourg like the wind. I saw a car standing there. The boat train isn't due until morning."

From the corner Peggy saw the tall dark figure silhouetted against the white light from the river. He paced back and forth in front of the building, glancing occasionally at the lighted window above, and by that indefinite recognition of movements which a wife knows, or even an ex-wife, she knew well enough who it was. Even the dimmed headlights of the car which stood in front of the doorway had a familiar slant upon the street.

Philip joined her. "It's Rob?" he asked. "Of course. I felt sure of it. How are you going to get in? Shall we drive somewhere for a drink and wait until he goes?"

"No," said Peggy. "I'm too tired. There's a side door. You get to it through the garden."

There was something of the surreptitious about the actual accomplishment of this maneuver, however, which made her uneasy, although Philip found a special joy in it. He held her long and ardently at the garden door, as if she could prove something to him anew.

Patient Watcher

In her living room again, Peggy put off her evening wrap and rested on the lounge. Was it really today and not yesterday, or last week, that she'd arrived from Geneva? And then, as though she'd been planning to do so all along, she went to the window. Below, still pacing, was Rob Holt. A curious little drag in his step puzzled her. His face, as he turned to glance again at her window, seemed pale and drawn. But she had to dart back too quickly to be sure of what she saw.

Suddenly the absurdity of a woman hiding from her husband, or from any man who had crossed an ocean to see her, occurred to her. If Rob wanted to see her, why shouldn't he? She wasn't afraid of him. She turned abruptly and went into the corridor. The lift was not running and she had to walk down two flights. Unlatching the heavy front door she called to him. "Rob? Are you waiting to see me?"

He was beside her in two steps, towering over her again, frightening her a little. "Yes," he said. "This concierge, or whatever you call him, said you weren't in."

"I wasn't," said Peggy. "Come upstairs, Rob. We can talk. I received your radiogram only this afternoon."

He stood in silence in her living room while Peggy chattered banalities to fill the awkwardness of the moment. It gave her such a strange sensation to be alone with him again after months and to feel once more that force, both mental and physical, which emanated from Rob's person and to which during those other years she had become so accustomed that she ceased to be aware of it. Now she was aware of it to some central core of her being, more disturbed than she would let him see. But he was not angry. "Please sit down, Rob? What brings you to Paris? You don't look very well, and you seemed to be limping when I saw you from the window."

His eyes never left her face, kindly eyes she'd thought once, hazel with tiny points of light in them. His hand brushed a disarranged forelock of dark hair from his forehead with that deliberateness which gave the impression of his power more than any bulk. Rob

The porter moved away with her luggage.

Holt was not heavy except in the shoulders. "O, the foot? Yes, I got a stiff ankle out of that street car smash. It cost me two months in the hospital to boot. Otherwise I'd have been over, Peggy——"

"Two months!" Peggy was astonished. "I had no idea the accident was serious. O, but Rob, I told you it was going to happen if—if you kept on driving the way you do when you've been drinking."

"I hadn't been drinking, Peggy," he said, and then as if abandoning a pose which he saw that she didn't believe in, "not that it makes any difference. It's all ancient history now. I came over here to talk about something more important. Are you ready to come home yet, Peggy?"

She stared at him in amazement. Didn't Rob know. For a mild moment she was on the point of saying: "Yes, let's all go home," as if the whole year were a sort of bad dream. But immediately it all flooded over her again, the jealous tempers, his distrust, and then her slow development of confidence and love for another man, a man whose gentleness and trust she could count upon. So she said: "But I am home. This is as much my home as anywhere. I got the divorce in Geneva. You knew that, didn't you? In fact, I'm just back from there today."

Presently out of an emotional turmoil which he controlled too well to betray by any other sign than a faint-up unnatural voice he said: "Really? You actually got it, Peggy? I didn't believe——. So then you're not my wife any more? How about Paddy and Penny? No longer my kids?"

"You can see them whenever you like, Rob. At best divorces are not ideal arrangements, you know. They're asleep now, of course, but you can go look at them."

She waited on the lounge for his return, aching in every part of her body, it seemed. Rob came back, ironfaced, and sat in the very chair where Philip had been that afternoon. "But after all, Peggy," he said, "it's simple enough to be remarried. I've brought your car over to you. Did you see it outside? I thought we might——"

"It's Too Late"

She shook her head. "No, it's too late. You have to face it now, Rob. I no longer—love you. That's the point. You see, I couldn't do any more than I did those years to make you believe in me. I lost hope and with it, I guess, love."

He started to speak, but broke off at once with a shake of his head, remarking only after a long pause, "I'd say that I'd spend the rest of my life trying to win you back, Peggy, except that I know I shan't be given the chance."

"That's true," she said. "I couldn't wait. You taught me to care for another sort of man, a very different man, Rob, which is enough to explain your dislike of him—Philip Vane."

His want of surprise puzzled her. "Of course," he said. "He was the only one who worried me really, Peggy, one of those soft footed, cautious men who trade upon other fellows' mistakes, I always thought. Perhaps you, too, will think so, before it's too late."

"I'd have to think so in a very short time, then," said Peggy. It gave her pleasure to say it, to pay Rob back for his willingness to dull a happiness which he hadn't provided himself. "Because I'm going to marry Philip tomorrow."

She had expected an outburst of anger, but that familiar temper of Rob's seemed to have been subdued in some manner. "You're not wasting much time," he said very quietly, and what followed had more telling effect upon her than if he had stormed. "Of course I shall do whatever I can to dissuade you from marrying him tomorrow, Peggy, Vane especially, but any man the day after you are divorced. If you made a mistake the first time, all the more reason——"

"You can do nothing to dissuade me," she said. "I've had plenty of time and plenty of proof."

"I'll try," he said. He stood up, flushed. "I'll do anything up to kidnaping you, and maybe that."

"It would be like you," she said. "I think you'd better go, Rob."

He went out, taking his hat from the hall table and looking back only once. "I'm coming back here tomorrow before luncheon, Peggy. I want to talk to you again, and I wish Vane could be here, too. Don't trust too much in the essential difference of one man from other men, Peggy, unless you've seen him in other men's shoes."

Peggy remained where she was, disturbed by his last remark and almost unnerved. It had been hardly a fair day, a day of resolutions and then doubting them. She wandered in to look at the children. Penny's little fist tangled in Paddy's fair curls on the pillow. She caught herself wondering what she might have done if Rob had come a month ago. Ah, but there was one factor in the equation which Rob didn't figure—Philip himself. He was different. She was remembering his differences as she went into her own room and bent down to pull her large traveling bag from under the bed.

At noon the next day they were miles on the road to Bagnoles. The excitement of getting away—Philip had been almost feverish, although defiant, about it when she told him of Rob's threat—the instructions to Miss Simms about the children, and to the concierge about what to tell Mr. Holt when he came, the mail, a fat packet of Springfield gossip from Janet Hazelton which there was not time to read. They had taken the Versailles road and then on through Rambouillet and it was all behind her now. In a way, as the road spun out over green hills and through gray, age-softened villages, villages with singing names—Epernon, Maintenon, Saulnières—Peggy felt that everything, all the complexities and troubles of her life were being left behind her and her trailing veil was waving them a blithe farewell.

Backward Glances

Her glances, too, thrown backward into some dark green valley from which their road had mounted past a tree nested château tower, finally caught Philip's attention. He had been nervous and silent enough without that. "What is it, Peggy? What are you looking for? If you think Rob is following us why don't you say so? I could throw him off the track easily enough."

"Why, Philip! How silly. I wasn't even dreaming——" In fact, his very suggestion of the idea sent a shiver of apprehension through her, and yet it also planted a doubt. Maybe she had, unconsciously, been watching for glints of reflected sunlight back there where the road looped over the hilltop, where it straightened out across that green meadow. Her imagination now was stimulated until she fancied almost that she had actually seen what might be a following car. "I shouldn't think, Philip," she said, "that you'd choose today to be so cross."

"Well, I can't help it," he replied. "You've had seven years to think and worry about Rob Holt. You shouldn't have talked to him last night, Peggy. It wasn't quite fair. I think I am entitled to all your thoughts just now."

"Of course," said Peggy. She put her hand through his arm. "But it isn't so important where my thoughts are as where my heart is. Do you think?"

"I want both," he said. "I want everything, Peggy. I warned you of that, and I waited long enough. We'll be in Bagnoles in two hours and I've arranged by wire to have a civil marriage this afternoon." His arm pressed her hand against his side.

Presently Peggy said: "Why must we go so fast, Philip? You frighten me. Really. We'll get there soon enough."

"You see?" he said quickly. "You probably want him to catch us, if the truth were known."

Peggy's hand left his arm. Her fingers were clenched. "Surely, Philip," she said, "you're not going to be jealous, too, not of Rob."

"Jealous?" Philip was more nervous than anything else. "Of course I'm jealous. Don't be a child, Peggy. Jealousy is only the difference between having the woman you love and trying to get her. You're mine now, not Rob's."

His spirits improved as they neared Bagnoles, as if the waters of the place were an elixir which would dissolve all doubts and realize all hopes. Perhaps for Philip it would, but for Peggy each approaching kilometer only added to a mounting uncertainty which lay somewhere between Philip's, "You're mine now, not Rob's," and her own mental answer, "Yes, just as I used to be Rob's, not yours," as if life were the mere continuous performance of the same drama with only an occasional change of cast.

She began to wonder if that's what it meant to be divorced, if it meant anything. In reality one was never divorced, nor could be as long as she kept remembering.

For the remainder of their journey to Bagnoles, Peggy forced these eleventh hour doubts out of her mind and she was sufficiently gay to satisfy even Philip during their little gala luncheon at the most excellent Grand hotel, overlooking the gardens and the famous little lake. Their bags had been taken upstairs and, after a happy moment over their coffee on the terrace, Peggy went up, too, discovering a sweet, wide, sunlit room with welcome white on the beds, a white bath, and an escritoire and dressing table which might have been fetched from a chamber in some seventeenth century château. Philip had driven to the Mairie to make sure papers and all were in order, and he was calling back for her in an hour. In an hour she was going with Philip to be married.

The thought of it seemed to stun Peggy a little, as though she'd never actually considered it before. She sat on the edge of her bed, her eyes lost in some imaginary distance, while her fingers fumbled characteristically with the catch of her traveling bag. Perhaps it was just the sudden startling intimacy, Philip's heavy brown luggage in the corner. But there was also his thoughtfulness, his gentleness, for her reassurance. Or was there.

Janet's Letter

When the lid of Peggy's bag came open, Janet Hazelton's fat letter fell out upon the bed. Peggy tore it open and tried to distract her mind with the disconnected but plentiful items of Springfield gossip with which it began, developed, and ended. Eleanor Townsend was going to have another baby and almost certainly a boy. Harrison Vickery was heavily involved in a new romance with an unexplained young widow from New York who was pretty enough to get away with it. The Haliburtons were going to try to break the old gentleman's will.

And then a paragraph which meant more to Peggy personally, and still more as she read it over again: "As for you, dear Peggy, the loyalty of your friends has hardly been enough to stem the changing tide of Springfield opinion—whatever that's worth—against you and toward Rob, and I should wait a bit to come back if I were you. Of course, that smash-up—apparently he turned deliberately into the street car rather than hit the fool who jumped from the back platform, and everybody thinks it was heroic—and then his quitting the highball crowd and—well, you know how people are, Peggy. A man always gets the sympathy in the end, although our friend, Philip Vane, didn't. It's all cut now about his slipping out of Parrish-Vane while old man Parrish faced the music and went broke when the thing crashed. Apparently the men knew all about it months ago. Why don't they tell us?"

Janet's letter slipped from Peggy's fingers as she stood up. She put her hands through her hair against her head as if that could steady her mind. Why, it was Janet herself who'd written that Rob ran blindly and drunkenly straight into the street car. Something was wrong with Janet's head, or no, with her own head. Or no again, not with her head but with her body. Some important nerve cord deep in her breast was about to break. Something that she'd been wanting constantly, intensely, increasingly for months could no longer be dispensed with. It was an immense weariness, but it was more. It was an excruciating fatigue of heart for which she could find no repose and had found only a weak temporary stimulant in Philip Vane.

Peggy began murmuring little querulous, plaintive remarks, talking to herself or to some one who was there only in her imagination. She was asking Rob Holt a lot of questions about what to do and about what she herself felt—as if Rob Holt was the one to say what she felt. Yes, but he was—he was. Rob was the base from which she'd made every impulsive jump in the last eight years. He was the vine from which she'd butterflied so charmingly. He'd been the background for her daring, her gayety, her prettiness.

So she couldn't get along without Rob Holt's arm, even if it weren't gentle, because no other arm was firm and strong enough. And what if his arm weren't gentle when his heart was, enough anyway, to smash himself up against a street car rather than deliberately hurt somebody else.

In the midst of Peggy's running thought a tear slipped out of her gray eye and stood on her nose. She had just remembered Rob standing in her apartment living room last night asking her to go home while she, stirred and trembling with his very presence, had talked like a little fool about being in love with another man.

Something broke. Peggy felt it go. There was a sudden catch of her breath and then she flung herself across the bed and let the sobs come up slowly and the tears burn her cheeks without trying to stop them. She lay there a long time and somehow it seemed to help. Everything felt looser. Things began to fall into place, just as though some one had come into the room and told her what to do.

Peggy Decides

She knew exactly what to do now. The first thing was to go to the bathroom and bathe her eyes, and that was done in a minute. Then she locked her bag and telephoned for the porter to take it downstairs, to call a taxicab, to find out when there was a train from Bagnoles to Paris. There was a new firmness and definiteness in Peggy.

Then the last thing was the note to be left for Philip. She sat down at the escritoire, hatted, half veiled, ready to leave. What could she say to Philip, Philip who had been so kind to her no matter what people said of him now. It wasn't Philip's fault that there was only one man. She began writing to say how grateful she was and how fond of him she was and that she hoped some day he'd understand why she had been able to come away with him and now had to go back.

She felt the inadequacy of it all and was at the point of tearing the sheet up when a knock sounded at the door, the porter probably to say that her taxicab was waiting. But it wasn't the porter. It was Philip, a rather pale and distrait Philip who came into the room and sat down without even noticing her hat and half veil or the absence of her bag. "I had some bad luck just now, Peggy," he said. "A little trouble. On my way back from the Mairie. As I was coming over that little white stone bridge a fool of a boy jumped down from the railing, right in front of me, and I hit him. The worst of it was an ugly, threatening crowd gathered, claiming I could have avoided the boy by turning against the bridge wall. Ridiculous, of course, but even the gendarme agreed with them and—I was lucky the boy wasn't hurt, that's all."

Peggy hardly heard him in the end. Her mind was full of the irony of life, a picture of an avenue in Springfield where motors pick up speed, a swaying yellow street car, a sudden, grinding crash—for there is a subtle quality of gentleness in some men, or at least in strong men, strong of body or heart or nerve, that turns their motors into street cars and bridge railings and telegraph poles when the crucial moment comes. "Philip," she said, "I was just writing a note to you—to say that I'm going back to Paris at once. I'm glad you came in time because I can explain perhaps better than I could tell you in any note."

She watched his paleness give way to a slowly mounting flush. Anger? She hadn't expected anger in Philip. "What you mean, of course," he said, "is that you're going back to Rob Holt. Isn't that it, Peggy? And you've made a pretty fool of me for the last eight months, haven't you?"

It was amazing. She'd never seen a Philip like this before, a Philip of narrowed eyes and crimson face and with veins corded across his temples. "I don't know what you mean?" she said. "I have appreciated all you've done——"

"Forget that," he broke in angrily. "You've sense enough to know why I've been at your heels all this time, Peggy; you're not going to put it over. You've kept me dangling around for not only months but years, and now you say calmly that you're going back to Rob. But you're not. You're going to stay right here in this room, Peggy. I see your bag is gone. You can get it back or do without it."

"I'm going back to Paris, Philip," said Peggy, "and, yes, to Rob, if he still wants me, and I don't know why he should. And I'm going now. Do you want to tell me good-by?"

He stood up as she did. "There is to be no good-by," he said. "You're not going. I'm not going to let you. Don't you understand that? It's fairly plain English."

She saw him trembling and understood that he was beside himself; that all his sensitive diffidence, his quiet understanding, was lost in rage. He stepped in front of her when she moved toward the door and, when she slipped by him, pulled her hand roughly from the knob. "No use trying that, Peggy. I'm not Rob, but I'm a bit stronger than you are, you know."

He was that, all right. His grip bruised her wrist as she tugged and twisted. "Let me go, Philip," she demanded. "How dare you! You're hurting me, I tell you." His grim determination roused an answering fury in her and when her hand finally did slip free she struck at him, a scratching woman's blow which cut across his chin.

In a second the room spun about her and then her own stinging face, the shocked stare in his eyes as he drew away from her, made her know that she had received a blow in return. In the instant of confusion her hand touched the door knob and then, with some obscure contempt for a man who had said she couldn't and now couldn't prevent her, a man whom she'd thought to be so gentle but who was only weak, she found herself in the corridor, running like a child from a fantastic ghost towards the head of the stairway. A door slammed behind her, but she dashed on without even turning her head, down the stairs, reaching for the balustrade at the landings to keep her balance, headlong, wishing for wings; for indeed there were fantastic ghosts behind her, all the evil ghouls of the last year of trouble, and worry, and fear.

At the last landing of the stairway, gathering what composure she could without slackening the speed of her flight, Peggy crossed the hotel lobby to the concierge's desk. "My taxicab is here?" she demanded. "Where is my bag, then? Yes, at once, please." Her reckless distribution of pourboires helped out and, although still too terrified to glance back at the stairway lest the sight of a flushed, angry pursuer paralyze her further movement, she gained the doorway and the porte cochere where an alleged taxicab waited with open door. At the moment from behind her, frightening her until she could scarcely clamber into the cab, she heard her name called peremptorily. "Peggy! Wait! What are you doing, Peggy!"

It was not like Philip's voice, but she had no thought of voices. "Vite! Vite!" she called to the driver, rapping on the front window for emphasis, and it was soon evident by the wild lurching of that antiquated, topheavy cab as it whirled down the drive for the short run around the lake to the station that the man was impressed with the desperate nature of the moment. Even so he was not fast enough. Almost at once Peggy heard a motor roaring with open exhaust close behind them and the continued blast of an unmistakably American motor horn.

Flight

Frantically she rapped on the cab driver's window again, pointed backwards, while the fellow grinned and bobbed his head. He opened the window for her and simply nodded sagely when in her stumbling French she told him to turn aside through the village and strike down Paris highway. If she could only lose the sound of that blasting horn of Philip's she might taxi to the next town, or perhaps to Alençon and take the train from there.

Throughout the next ten minutes while the driver risked life, limb and property in a mad juggernaut passage through narrow, cobbled streets, scattering dogs, cats, and gesticulating pedestrians at corners, careening almost on two wheels up one forbidding lane and down another, Peggy rattled about in the dark interior of the cab, sometimes with her head bumping the roof or her knees banging the floor. Finally the journey settled down, although the speed, the amazing speed of that ancient wreck, never diminished.

Gradually the pace of their flight slackened into steady going. Once or twice the cab driver turned around to glance at his curious fare, as if he expected new instructions. Still, if the lady could afford to be taxied to Paris he could afford it, too.

Peggy had new fears. Rob Holt had probably taken the first boat train for Le Havre or Cherbourg and gone back to America without her. If he hadn't done that, he at least must have set out to drown his sorrows in Montmartre and there met a fascinating Russian who'd make him forget he ever had a wife and babies. And when she arrived in Paris and said: "Rob, let's give them back their old divorce and go home," all he could reply would be: "Sorry, Peggy old fellow, but I've got a Russian."

That klaxon blasted suddenly just behind her ear. The taxicab driver, startled as Peggy was, pulled aside just enough to permit a streak of gray to shoot by them on the narrow road. The echo of a shout remained in her ears and then she saw her driver dive for his emergency brake and the cab jolted to a final stop.

It was too much. Peggy remained as far in the corner as she could get and held her hands over her eyes. She couldn't stand any more trouble. She couldn't face it. She wouldn't look. Anybody could take her and do anything with her he wanted.

It was just as well to feel that way about it, considering whom she had to deal with. She heard the cab driver chattering. "Merci, monsieur. Merci mille fois, monsieur," selling his allegiance in a hurry for a definite hundred francs. Then the door beside her opened and she was lifted out bodily as if she'd been six. Just then she felt six, just as helpless and just as secure as six when nobody has to worry about anything. There was a familiar tobacco smell about that coat against which her face was pressed, and a certain firmness to the cradle of arms in which she lay that made Peggy know where she was. She didn't need to peek through her fingers, although she did peek through them, to be quite sure of that. "Where are you going to take me, Rob?" she asked.

"To Paris," he said, plumping her into the seat of his car, or rather, her car. "In a hurry, too. So sit tight. You might have known I'd follow you, Peggy. Did you think I'd let another man run away with my wife?"

"But I'm not your wife, Rob."

"O, you aren't? I'll show you whose wife you are."

"But I've got a divorce, I tell you."

"Don't worry about that," he said. "We'll have it framed and hung up over my bed."

Week-End Wives

By Faith Baldwin

Ken giving his Utility company for a reference so that he could get things on the installment plan.

This and more. The girls in the office whispering; envious, prying, or cordial. The ring, reset, the diamond very brave in its new platinum. That had cost a lot. Too much. "Not too much for my girl!" Ken had told her.

Holmes, the office boss, her eyes sharp behind glasses. "So you're getting married?" "Yes, Mrs. Holmes." "Quitting?" "Well, no." And Holmes had laughed a little.

There'd been no trouble about vacations. Jim had spoken a word for Ken in an official ear which happened to be lenient to Jim. "Fine fellow. Fine family, Yale Sheffield, working his way up. Our engineers are all of a very fine type," and Mrs. Holmes had somehow not spoiled Lola's plans. Her vacation was due her, of course. But if Holmes could have made her unhappy probably she would have done so out of something that Agnes said, sagely, when it was discussed, was probably Mrs. Holmes' own unhappiness. "Never thought of that did you, Lola?"

Agnes herself was all right again. The fear gone, the terror dissipated. Until next time, said Agnes bitterly.

October.

The maples red and the water deeply blue, and the sky an arch of living azure. Liners sailing up the Narrows. Autumn in the air and summer in the sunlight.

The little flat had been furnished. "When you come back," promised Mrs. Davis, "you can walk right in; we'll have everything ready."

So Much to Learn!

They were going to Atlantic City. For two weeks. On the last of Ken's savings, even if they could have autumn rates and live in a reasonable hotel, off the board walk. O, Ken, should we? You bet we should! And in her heart she had agreed. A little madness, a little extravagance. Didn't they owe it to themselves?

Once in a lifetime.

Wedding presents. Linen from Agnes and Jim. From Connie a suitcase and a case of home made wine from Joe. Astonishingly good silver spoons, six of them, from Jake. The money from her parents. And an overstuffed suite. And a nightgown from Millie; she'd saved her money for it. "O!" cried Lola gasping.

Chiffon, blush pink, straps of real lace. A lovely thing. Insanity! Millie had put every cent she had into it.

"Millie—you shouldn't—you mustn't——"

Mrs. Davis, feeling the material between her worn hands:

"It's indecent, that's what it is! But it's beautiful," she said grudgingly, "but for what you paid for that, Millie, you could have furnished Lola's kitchen with the things she needs."

Millie said merely:

"I wanted her to have this."

October.

She was married in blue, in the living room, the furniture cleared out, the rented palms in the corners. She had sheer stockings. Ken, beside her, very grave, a little pale, in the new serge suit. The minister's voice, deep, questioning:

"Do you take this woman——?"

Her own answer, clear, sounding very loud in her own ears. Ken's muffled, low.

"For richer or poorer——"

For richer, she thought, O, not in money. In living.

Agnes, standing a little back, put her handkerchief to her eyes. Lola, Lola, so much to learn!

Jim put his arm about her. "Steady, old thing," he murmured. But he couldn't meet her eyes. Nor she his. If they could only go home and find a moment, an untired, unirritated moment in which to talk things out. Everything. All the things that troubled them, distressed and puzzled them, separately and mutually. But they never found that moment.

Connie wept frankly. Joe, uneasy in his stiff collar, cleared his throat. Mrs. Davis was crying, too. Millie, in her bridesmaid frock, pale pink and very becoming, posed herself before the mirror. Her eyes were very bright. She wouldn't cry. She couldn't. But something in her, her sense of the theater, said dramatically, "My only sister!" She wept then, gracefully, tears rolling down her little face.

Then it was over. They had a buffet supper. Salad, cake, ice cream, coffee. Home made. All of it. They had decided against the caterer. To rent the palms and the chairs was enough.

It was early evening. Jake drove them to their train in one of the good cars he had borrowed from his boss. Lola, in her little suit, wearing the very simple, very pretty fur piece the girls in the office had clubbed together to give her, slipped her hand into Ken's. Her lashes were wet, stuck together in points. But she was smiling.

"Feel very grand?" she suggested, patting the upholstery with her free hand.

"Swell. Some day we'll have one of our own."

He tightened his clasp on her hand.

"Sorry?"

"No, Ken."

"Afraid?" he asked, feeling her tremble against him.

"No—that is—not much."

"You needn't be," he told her, reverently, with tenderness.

Married.

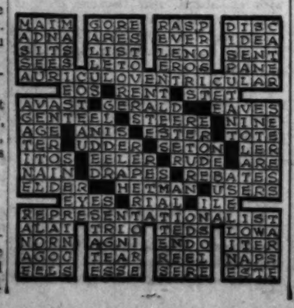
Cross Word Answer



Revive Old Hospitality

By Doris Blake

Young Men's Dollars Are Scarce, These Days, So Doris Suggests That the Girls Invite Their Boy Friends In for an Evening at Home.

In several recently printed studies of the young woman worker of moderate salary and the girl out of employment temporarily, the fact is disclosed that she manages to get along better than her male contemporaries in like circumstances. She is better at penny pinching, as one observer comments.

There are several reasons for her advantages. She can wash out her own clothes, she can throw in her lot with several other girls in a kitchenette apartment, she can cook her own meals, she can even go without an occasional meal and her feminine soul will be bolstered with the idea that her silhouette will be none the worse for her abstinence.

Anyway, it is pretty well agreed that she can get more out of life on little or nothing a week than can the young man of her age similarly placed. However, there is a flaw in the story of her efficient living. Not in its efficiency, no, but in the problem the young man and his meager or empty pocketbook creates! Let us be optimists and say that it is one that will not be with us long, since we are told that only by optimism may we put the world back on spending feet again. In the meantime, it is a test time for girls, from the boy-friend angle.

Vital Element Lacking.

In a printed report from a hotel operated for girls, one reads that while the young women who live there manage to eat and be housed well, dress attractively, because it is possible to buy inexpensive and attractive dresses in New York, still the important element in their young lives is wanting—meaning beaus, of course.

"How many dates they have depends on how much 'it' they have," one reads, "and the truth is that average girls haven't much 'it.' They go out with older men mostly because the older men have more money to spend and can take them to better places. Most of the girls are college graduates. They don't do much dancing, probably because these older men don't care much about it, and also because there are no dance orchestras in speakeasies. . . ."

The report errs, we think, on the "it" deduction. One never knows how much of that unknown quantity is possessed by any girl unless she has opportunity to get about among men. It is just as reasonable to believe that every woman has the Elinor Glyn ingredient for some man as it is to believe that every woman is beautiful to some man.

At the current moment, anyway, it is unfair to deduce an it-less personality from a lack of "dates." The young men have not the money to meet "dates." The wonder is that as many girls get about to dances and theaters and movies as they do.

Young Men Lonely, Too.

The tragedy of the void in young women's lives is no less keen than that in the lives of many young men of the moment. The older man with money whose idea of an evening is a speakeasy table is no answer to the prayer of a healthy minded, fun loving, normal girl. She goes out with them, we are prepared to say, because they are the only ones who ask her. That is, except for a small minority who are affected by the appearance of wealth in a male companion, it is not the normal way of girls to stay huddled over a speakeasy table or a night club table and look enjoyment. They want to dance. They want to indulge in the patter of their contemporaries. The other is only a filler-in.

We were going to suggest the home as a panacea until gayer times have arrived, but we recall in time that homes where young men felt free to drop in any time they felt lonely are not what they used to be. Still people do live in what they call their homes and they have radios and they have supper tables and they have kitchens where late snacks may be concocted.

And girls grouped together in apartments also may extend the privileges of hospitality to young men. In fact, we think a revival of old time hospitality, even though the quarters are comparatively cramped, might be the solution of many a lonely young man and woman's problem.

Demand Too Much.

But the rub here is that girls go on the principle that "if I entertain him he must take me to a show, or a dance, or some place." It's got about that the girl who is too open-handed in her entertainment is more likely than not to be the least appreciated of her group. In fact, much of the entertainment-exactingness of young women today is based upon experience or hearsay that young men do not appreciate you unless you are demanding. Regrettably, too, there is much truth in the charge.

The girl who does open her house for parties frequently gets the least attention of any one in the group. Her hospitality is partaken of and no sign of appreciation is extended. So the young men will have to show a better grace in the face of such hospitality if they would have its advantages returned.

Right now, we'll wager, many a boy with just enough to get his laundry out wishes he knew a girl who would tell him to come up to the house for dinner or for the evening. There could be dancing there and there could be the patter of a contemporary. There could be, indeed, a lot more fun than either side in this group of which we speak is having now.

Look Ahead.

After all, does it or need it matter so much where a nice young girl and a nice young boy spend the evening as that they spend it together? If the girls are one up on the young men in efficient living, it still need not blind them to the fact that a young man may be out of funds temporarily—but a year, two, five, or ten from now he may be quite a person.

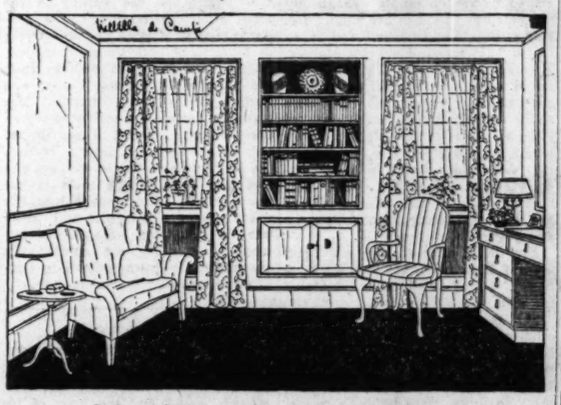
Taking a girl out anywhere, in a city anyway, does noticeably deflate the weekly spending allowance. No one should know this better than the girl who is washing out her own things and cleaning them and pressing them and watching hat, shoe, and dress ads closely for big bargains. She knows just how far a dollar will stretch. And while we are not for taking too much social responsibility away from young men, for reasons which only their own psychology explains, still we think at this particular time girls who have homes could be a little more generous in their invitations. They could forego for a time the modern policy of meeting the boy at the door with their hats on and the question: "Where do we go from here?"

Indeed, the opportunity involved for really getting acquainted is riper when spending money is not so free. Anyway, we just offer the suggestion as a temporary relief measure for the evening "unemployed."

Attractive Bookshelves

By WillElla de Campi

Why Not Add to the Decorative Quality of Your Room by Housing Your Favorite Tomes in Open Shelves?



Built-in shelves add charm to this living room.

With the rainy days of early spring close at hand, attention is focused upon the question of books and where to put them. In addition to the practical and interesting qualities of the books themselves, consideration must be given to the relation of books to decoration. Especially in the small house or apartment where there is no separate room for a library, space for bookcases, or shelves must be allowed for in the living room, or bedroom. With proper handling ranges of books may add greatly to that feeling of good balance which is always so desirable.

Open shelves are preferable to closed cases, from a decorative point of view. The backs of the books not locked behind glass doors or hidden by barriers of any sort impart a comfortable and homelike quality and a decorative aspect which cannot be equaled by any other medium. The interest of open shelves may further be enhanced by color painted into the space behind, above, and at the sides of the books. Bright colors or metallic paints are suitable for this purpose, since the books themselves cover most of this back space, giving only an occasional glimpse of color, or glint of gold or silver.

Today's illustration shows a charming arrangement for the housing of books. This living room is done in old English style. Walls are panneled and painted to simulate pine. Open shelves are built in between two windows and there is a cupboard beneath for storage purposes. The frame of the open shelves matches the paneling which divides the other wall spaces in the room. The books, with their many colored bindings, harmonize admirably with the rich color scheme of the room.

At the windows are long draperies of chintz with a restful floral pattern on a brown ground. Simple glass curtains are of light beige voile. In one corner of the room, near a window and convenient to the books which must be used occasionally for reference in writing, stands a walnut desk. The accompanying chair is upholstered in a striped material, which repeats the chintz colors.

Near the other window in the opposite corner is a comfortable reading chair, upholstered in copper colored wool rep. A small table beside it holds a crackled pottery lamp in ivory with a plain parchment shade bound in dull gold.

Illinois Mother Knew Best . . .

WISE mothers find the things that keep children contented, happy, well. Most of them have learned they can depend on one thing to restore a youngster's good nature when he's cross, fretful, upset.

The best proof that this method really works comes from the fact that mothers who try it once continue to use it for years, when its help is needed.

The experience of Mrs. P. H. Reser, 5642 Division St., Chicago, is typical. She says: "I have used California Fig Syrup with Betty Lou and Mardeau for more than four years. Whenever they're the least bit constipated or restless I give them a little. It has them comfortable, happy in a jiffy. Their splendid condition proves I know best when I decided to use this wonderful preparation with them."

For three generations, California Fig Syrup has been the choice of knowing mothers. Physicians endorse the use of this pure vegetable product whenever a child's bowels need help. It contains no harmful drugs; cannot form any habit. Weak stomach and bowels are strengthened by it; appetite is increased; the digestion and assimilation are assisted. So weak, undernourished children usually gain in strength, weight and energy; become happy, buoyant, rosy by its use.

Seven million bottles used a year speak volumes for its effectiveness and merit.

For this modern way of treating a cold acts directly at the seat of the trouble—the passages of nose and throat. It clears the air passages, soothes the angry membranes and rids you instantly of that stuffed-up feeling. "Pineoleum" bathes the inflamed membranes in a spreading, penetrating film of healing oil that protects the tissues and also inhibits the growth of germs.

HOMEWARD VOYAGE.

John Falconer came up the companionway with a feeling of triumph. He was going home—home this time in the broader rather than the more personal, intimate sense. The word meant to him at this moment merely roads between trim hedges; Hyde Park corner, with the traffic moving in a steady cavalcade; pale, lovely mists veiling the park and a sun red as an orange shining somewhere, but kindly, not with the golden, blinding blaze of these lands of the south. He did not realize that his mind clung to these pictures of home lest he should see instead a cold and silent house and hear the dreadful quiet crying of a child.

They were at sea. Already, beyond the miles of dazzling waters, a pale and wavering line alone remained of the world he had left; and now, with England only three weeks away, this other had become an alien world from which he was escaping with relief.

He had already enlisted the deck steward's aid and the man had found him a sheltered spot beyond the purser's cabin, far from the sports deck and hitherto roped off and filled with unused chairs. The steward had been guarding this desirable corner with a view to profit; at a nod from Falconer he seized his rug and chair and volunteered to put them in possession.

His self-satisfaction had a heady effect upon John, who had lived for years past with something so nearly the reverse. When, therefore, he reached his haven and found it occupied he was annoyed.

"Pardon me, but that is my place."

The girl—he supposed she was a girl, for how in heaven's name could you tell in these days?—settled her deck chair with the utmost composure, barely glancing at the angry young man. His own belongings had been pushed aside, and he seized them indignantly, saying to the invader:

"I am afraid you must move, please. This space has been cleared for me by the deck steward, and, besides, you will find it is the dull end of the ship. You should ask him to get you a sheltered spot."

"Thanks, he has, and the dull end of the ship happens to appeal to me."

There was a faint and not unfriendly smile in the girl's eyes, which were gray and set wide apart under level brows. She was a graceful creature, but John was in no mood to see these distinctions. Bitterly he was hating the whole tribe of women. They were all the same, lacking in any sense of equity and presuming on their sex.

"Sorry, but you don't seem to understand that I have engaged this part of the deck. Will you be good enough to have your things taken elsewhere?"

He swung his chair around in readiness and in so doing lost a never too hopeful cause, for the girl saw his name upon it, immediately gathered her rug about her and settled down for the afternoon.

"You are talking nonsense," she said coldly. "Nobody can 'engage' the deck, as you must know very well, or is this your first voyage?"

She opened her book.

Though he knew the weakness of his cause well enough, Falconer sought the deck steward indignantly.

"Look here, steward, you promised to reserve my place on the deck, and now I find a woman in possession. What is the meaning of it?"

"O, you won't find Miss Revel will disturb you, sir. The young lady has just lost her brother and wishes to be quiet."

"But, good God, can't she be quiet in some other part of the ship?"

"Captain's orders, sir," invented the steward, glibly. "She and the gentleman traveled out with us last year—a cripple he was. . . . Yes, madam, coming immediately."

This is only the first of John's skirmishes with the determined young lady. Be sure to read this brilliant new story in TOMORROW'S TRIBUNE.

The Suffering and Privation of Poverty-Stricken Families Can Be Alleviated if You Will Pass On Your Discarded Clothes, Blankets, and Other Useful Articles.

I want to be the medium through which the friends in need and the friends in deed may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

THIS thing called depression lingers on with a persistence difficult to fathom and the men and women and families who felt its sting many months back are now feeling its crushing effect. A constant state of suffering and privation begins, sooner or later, to tell on one not only physically but, which is much more serious, mentally.

The widow upon whom has fallen the burden of supporting a helpless brood; the father of a large family who has been out of work for months; the young men and women with aged parents or younger brothers and sisters to care for; the handicapped who have difficulty locating employment during times of industrial prosperity and who now find it practically impossible to get anything—all these are victims of "hard times."

Needless to say, the solution to their particular problems and the only effective remedy is employment. But since we can't supply that in every case, we do the next best thing and try to give them the relief that will make this period of waiting for things to improve less miserable for them. You who still have your jobs and an income are the ones in a position to give such assistance. Even the clothing you are discarding, blankets and bedding which are too worn for your use, heating stoves you no longer have need of, baby clothing and articles of furniture will give the material comfort the poor and needy cannot supply for themselves.

Surely you can donate something in this list of necessities to make the going less hazardous for some luckless family. Write and tell me what it is you have to give and I shall see that it is placed in the home where it is most needed.

Asks for Shoes.

"My husband has been ill and only recently returned to work. His earnings are small and we contracted debts during his illness which must be paid now, so we cannot buy the things we need. If you can get shoes for us I shall be grateful to you. Mr. S. wears size 9½, my 4 year old boy wears size 9, my daughter, 8, wears size 13, and I wear 6, wide last.

"MRS. W. S."

Shoes which your children have outgrown or which you may be discarding because of a scuffed toe would keep this family comfortably shod during the remainder of the winter. May they not have them?

Tropical Fish.

"I am a widow in poor health and am endeavoring to raise tropical fish for a living. So far I am getting along quite well with the mating, but the offspring are delicate. If any one has a thermostat and heater, also a textbook by Inis, or other reliable authors, or plants and fernery greens to use in the aquarium, I would be more than grateful for them.

"MRS. M. L."

Can you assist Mrs. L. in making her new enterprise a successful one? Books on the subject of tropical fish or the equipment she asks for would be an immense help to her.

Offers a Cocker Spaniel.

"I have a lively cocker spaniel, pedigreed, a male and about a year old, which I should like to give to some one who will take good care of it. It is a lovly pet, friendly and gentle, and likes to be around children. If you know of some one living in the country or suburbs who will give it a good home, I shall be glad to hear from you. MRS. G. L."

Here is a find, indeed, for the dog lover looking for a new pet. If there are children in your family and you live in the open spaces, you should be a likely applicant for it. Write me if you are interested; please do not telephone.

Request for Clothing.

"We are greatly in need of some kind of assistance, so I am coming to you. My husband has had no work and we haven't been able to buy clothing for some time, so that what we have is worn and in dreadful condition. Mr. R. wears size 46 and needs a suit badly. I would be grateful for a coat, size 38, and for things for my 3½ year old daughter.

"MRS. R."

Perhaps you can help to make this unfortunate family more comfortable by donating the clothing which you are planning to dispose of. Anything in their sizes will be most gratefully received.

A Pathetic Appeal.

"I am the father of four children, a carpenter by trade, and out of work for four months. Three of the children attend school and need clothing which I cannot buy them. They are boys, 3 and 7 years old, and a girl, 6. The baby is a boy, 2½. I am an ex-service man, but this has not helped me in securing work. H. A."

The business of looking for a job becomes a discouraging one after so many months, and when there is a family of children to support and care for it takes on an added misery. Can you offer relief in this case by giving the clothing needed?

Want Rolls for Player Piano?

"A generous person donated a player piano to our day nursery. The children get a great deal of pleasure out of it, but we have only a few rolls to play. I wonder if any of your readers would have some discarded ones we could have.

"MRS. M. M."

One does tire of these player rolls when they've been heard a number of times, and keeping them only clutters up space which could be better utilized. If you have any you no longer care for, won't you give them to this day nursery?

Postscript View of Pirandello's Lazarus Drama

Goodman Takes Step in Right Direction.

By Charles Collins.

WHETHER you liked it or not (I didn't), Pirandello's "Lazaro" was the play of the week. Its staging at the Goodman theater is the first American hearing of a work by a dramatist of international reputation; the premiere was an event of widespread interest. Its undertaking this bleak and bitter drama, which states a case against religious fanaticism with almost savage satirical intent, the Goodmans has done something to put the activities of the Chicago stage on the national map. It has manifested an awareness to march in the right direction.

To define that direction in the briefest possible manner I shall point to an inscription over the portal of one of the municipal or national theaters somewhere in Europe. I have forgotten the exact location of this edifice, but no matter. Its founders stated its purpose and its social function with classic conciseness. Into the marble they boldly carved this succinct phrase:

"Not for amusement only."

In other words, not only for the automatic convulsions of the diaphragm which accompany the act of laughter, but also for the undemonstrative exercise of the imagination and the intellect. Not only for comedy but also for tragedy; not only for prose but also for poetry; not only for releasing gayety but also for recreative meditation. And, so far as the Goodman is concerned, one might add: Not only for "Hay Fever" and Reunion," but also for "The Sea Gull," and "Lazaro."

Tiresome Antidote.

As Pirandello's peculiar play did not act upon me as an irritant. I found it, in spite of its slow pace and feigning speech making, a welcome antidote to the smart-aleckiness of "Reunion." I felt that its scornful denunciation of bigotry had an outmoded Voltairean tone, but I found it an acceptable change from the gin, jazz and japes of so-called "modernism."

In dramatic effectiveness "Lazzaro" ranks as a poor third to the two other specimens of Pirandello's work which have been acted here—"Six Characters in Search of an Author," at the Goodman last season, and "As You Desire Me," at the Harris recently. It sounds as if it might have been written by a young man who was trying to follow in Father Ibsen's footsteps rather than by a veteran philosopher who has brought a highly original touch to his career in theatrical authorship. It employs the Ibsen technique of unfolding an entire family history within a space of two hours and when a loose Latin hand attempts to practice the tight, laconic method of the grim Scandinavian dramatist the result is usually garrulous and dreary.

Lazarus in Letters.

Why is it, I wonder, that the story of Lazarus as told in the Gospel According to St. John causes literary men to become so Gothic and grotesque in their adaptations of the theme? Besides this play of Pirandello's, two other examples come to mind—Eugene O'Neill's "Lazarus Laughed," and Robert Browning's verses called "An Epistle of Karshish, the Arab Physician." If these treatments of the subject are to be taken seriously, the return of Lazarus to life after four days in the tomb should be called the unhappy resurrection. To the question: "How does a man feel after he has been raised from the dead?" literature seems bent upon answering: "Terrible."

And yet some of the greatest messages of consolation and hope in the New Testament, immortal words that chant gloriously of immortality, are to be found in that chapter in St. John. After glancing over the passage, supplementary to a hearing of Pirandello's modern variant I have come to the conclusion that I prefer my Lazarus story straight and according to the original source. There is no record that the hero of this miracle was dissatisfied with his unique experience.

Exit Laughingly.

Mrs. Fiske's prosperous sojourn at the Blackstone theater, beginning with "Ladies of the Jury" and ending with "Becky Sharp," has been one of the most gratifying events of the play-going season. She came here, one may suspect, somewhat disengaged, for her tour in the east had not been successful; but she departs with the happy assurance that her appeal is still flourishing. During those five weeks of steady enthusiasm on the part of her audiences a mellow glow came into the ripe autumn of the career of the First Comedienne. Her engagement marked a change in the management of the Blackstone and the beginning there of a new creative regime under Chicago auspices. In other words, that playhouse, now under the direction of its owner, Tyler C. Drake, has become a "producing center." Mrs. Fiske is taking "Ladies of the Jury" and "Becky Sharp" out of Chicago for a tour of the middle west, also under Blackstone leadership, and reports from the cities where she is booked—Omaha, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, etc.—indicate that capacity audiences are waiting for her.

Almost a generation has passed since Chicago, of its own initiative, created theatrical entertainment, and now we shipped only the La Salle musical comedies of Mort H. Singer's manufacture. Not within the memory of the oldest inhabitant has a dramatic star of the first magnitude, such as Mrs. Fiske, taken to "the road" flying the Chicago banner.

Cornell Makes Gotham Debut -in Besier Play

It's Her First Venture as Actress-Manager.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Katharine Cornell's father came down from Buffalo to see his daughter make her debut as an actress manager in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." That in itself was something of an event in the Cornell family. It was the first time father, for many years a theater manager upstate, had even seen his daughter in a New York premier.

But it was a big night in a lot of ways. It is something to have achieved stardom and self-management in little more than ten years without recourse to outside aid in the way of capital, managerial inducements, and the rest of it. The Cornell success has been builded exclusively on what the actress, herself, has had to bring to it and is, therefore, important.

Her choice of a first play also does her judgment credit. Rudolf Besier's dramatization of the sadly sweet love story of Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett Moulton is steeped in sympathy and shot with fine dramatic moments. And though it picks up the romance in 1845, when the poets met, in their middle years, by preserving the fine impulsiveness of Robert and the sympathetic fears of Elizabeth, lest her invalidism should prove too great a burden to her lover, the play maintains a steady grip on the finest sympathy.

Chance for Fine Acting.

In no play of recent production have love scenes been played so sanely or with such exquisite delicacy as they are following the meeting of these two. The meeting itself is little short of electrifying, emotionally. The ardor of young Browning contrasted with the almost pathetic plight of the gifted daughter of a detestable father, of which situation the audience has been made decidedly conscious, develops a strikingly dramatic moment. Miss Cornell is perfect in character as the surprised and slightly flustered Elizabeth, and a handsome young English actor, Brian Aherne, plays skillfully up to her, sweeping her almost off the couch with the earnestness of his sympathetic attack.

Their meeting is accomplished in the spring. Its effect on Elizabeth is to give her so completely a new interest in life that she is able to leave her couch. Still, despite the pleadings of her ardent young poet, six years her junior, she cannot bring herself to feel that the escape to the Italy they both love so deeply would be fair to him.

Her decision becomes fixed, in the play, when she is made aware of the causes of her widowed father's domineering and stubbornly misunderstanding attitude toward his family. He is, in the light of modern psychology, subconsciously ruled by complexes traceable to sex frustration that make him not alone detestable, but dangerous, as well.

It was this modern explanation of the impossible Edward Moulton-Barrett which raised a storm of protest when the play was produced in London. The Moulton-Barrett descendants arose in the cause of truth to invoke the aid of the censor of plays. But the evidence, again in the light of modern deductions, was against them.

Elizabeth escapes with Browning and her departure is the real end of the play. Mr. Besier insists that a concluding scene, showing the consternation and defeat of the father, be retained. It lengthened the play unduly, I thought.

Charles Waldron plays the paternal Barrett with a proper admixture of hateful qualities; an arrogant, cruel, hypocritical master of a household reduced to slavery under his inflexible rule.

Rocket Film Sets Gotham Pulses Beating

Trip to Moon in Projectile Convinces Audience.

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—There is a fantastic picture called "By Rocket to the Moon" playing at the Cameo theater on 42d street, and the reaction of the audience is almost as interesting as the film. The rocket film was made in Germany, where they are trying to run everything except the trolley cars by rockets, and was brought here originally for a semi-private showing before the Interplanetary society.

Its success, according to local space flying enthusiasts as well as space grabbing enthusiasts, was such that it soon won a place on Cinema row. At any rate, it is with us today, and merits consideration. There is no dialogue in "By Rocket to the Moon," and the musical score might better have remained equally silent. The acting consists of making faces and pointing at various objects, and the rocket itself is none too convincing. Nevertheless, the picture has its breath taking moments, and all because of the subject and the timing of its suspense shots.

If "By Rocket to the Moon" does nothing else it already has shown the picture makers that New York at least is space minded and that the town is full of prospective rocket travelers. There is little laughter in the picture and gasps of astonishment can be heard throughout the theater when the monster projectile, with its woman passenger and four men, rises in a great splash from the lake in which it had been resting.

Audience Is Convinced.

Many of the moon minded customers leave the theater convinced that regular interplanetary transportation will be available in a year or so. They have only withering scorn for skeptics who wonder about the result of friction on the shell of the rocket and the return to earth process, which appears to be the simplest matter of all in the picture.

It was a great day in the Fatherland, and for that matter throughout the world, when the space voyagers took off to the moon. Thousands of spectators were seated in a monster grand stand and radio announcers told the story of the hopoff to all the world while cameramen were busy recording it for history and the picture theaters.

There was a zip and a streak across the sky, and then, by some method not explained in the picture, the audience was permitted to make the trip with the sky travelers. But first

German Grand Opera Singers to Give Performances Here

By Edward Moore.

IF you are of the opinion that opera disappeared behind a cloud when the Civic Opera company went on its tour, not to emerge until Ravinia opens its season toward the end of June, please change your mind. For a gallant organization, the German Grand Opera company, is coming to the Civic Opera house for four performances, beginning Thursday night.

Three Wagner works and one by D'Albert are on the schedule. "Tristan and Isolde," "Die Walkuere," and "The Flying Dutchman" are the three; "Tiefland" is the one. Further word is sent that Johanna Gadski will appear as Isolde in the first performance, that Margarethe Baumer will be the Senta of "The Flying Dutchman," that Marie von Essen, contralto, will sing Brangaene in "Tristan and Isolde," and Fricka in "Die Walkuere," that Carl Braun will be the Wotan of the last named, and that the three Wagner works will be conducted by Max von Schillings. Some of the other artists in the company will be Isolde von Bernhardt, Johannes Sembach, Carl Hartmann, Max Adrian, Hans Hey, Allen Hinckley, Richard Gross, and Eric Wildhagen, and there is a full sized orchestra and chorus to complete the forces.

Director of Wagnerian Operas.

Dr. Schillings is making this tour with the company, having first directed the Wagner "Ring" operas at the Berlin Staatsoper just prior to his sailing. It was a familiar place for him, since he was general director of that famous theater in the seven years from 1919 to 1926, following the resignation of Richard Strauss. He began his career as long ago as 1892 when he became assistant conductor at Bayreuth. He received the title of professor of music—those names mean more in Germany than they do here—in 1903, was given an honorary doctorship at the University of Heidelberg—another matter taken less lightly abroad than here—became general musical director of the Stuttgart opera in 1908, and was knighted by the king of Wuerttemberg in 1912.

Since leaving the Berlin Staatsoper he has devoted most of his time to composition, appearing occasionally as guest conductor in the principal German opera houses. His first opera, "Ingewelde," was produced by Felix Motti in 1894 at Karlsruhe; he himself brought out "Mona Lisa" at Stuttgart in 1915, and this work was presented at the New York Metropolitan in 1923 with his wife, Barbara Kemp, in the leading part.

Shaw as a Music Critic.

A book remains to be written on the subject of Bernard Shaw as a music critic. There is a volume of his dramatic criticisms, supposedly a collection of what he thought were some of his best expressions in that genre, but of his musical criticisms only a few remarks here and there remain.

One is reminded of this in a recent issue of the Musical Courier, where he is quoted as saying that Elgar is the only great British composer who is not dwarfed by German giants. This is paralleled with some remarks by Prof. E. J. Dent of Cambridge university, who holds Elgar's music to be pompous in style, of too deliberate nobility of expression, academic, much too emotional, and not free from vulgarity.

Offhand one would say that Elgar is not vulgar enough. Having a natural taste for pieces like the "Pomp and Circumstance" march, he struggles against it from a fear of being vulgar. This might account for the "deliber-

GOOD Morning!

When I viewed this picture for today's review the intention of the exhibitors was to play it this week. For reasons all their own they have substituted another and postponed screening of "Don't Bet On Women," until a later day. Just the same—here's where you're being told about a mighty good film that's bound to tickle your photoplay palate.

The piece is based on an interesting story, delineated by a captivating cast.

Edmund Lowe, now!—what femme could resist him? Jeanette MacDonald—who could be sweeter? Una Merkel—WHO could be cuter? J. M. Kerrigan—who could be droller? Ronald Young—who better understands whimsies and how to portray their eccentric working and effects? There are your principals, and they ring the bell with every move, word and expression. Speaking of words, Una Merkel can certainly reel them off a million a minute! So to speak. Great cast! Great team work!

These delightful people have their match in Mr. Howard, the director, who has guided their activities with a light and skillful touch. Lines are witty, and sophisticated. Sets, scenery, costumes, sound? Well, I should say that the ensemble merits the approbation of the most critical. And as for suspense—my dears! You may THINK you know what's going to happen, but O, believe me, you're wrong!

Story of a Boy Who Made Good -for Other Boys

Grant Beebe, Lane Chief, a Technical Pioneer.

By Virginia Schmitz.

THIS is the story of the home town boy who made good, with added touches dealing with a youngster who didn't like academic work and finally became the head of a great technical school; of a boy who found himself in the delightful position—to a boy—of being in charge of his former teachers.

GRANT BEEBE.

It's the story of an educator. But not an ordinary educator. A man who has been draftsman, estimator, engineer, and manager of an engineering company in between his teaching rallies. But who finally because of his great sympathy for the boy who could not go to college, decided to devote the remainder of his life to helping that boy on the road to engineering work.

Grant Beebe, he is, principal of the Lane Technical High school, renowned throughout the world for its work with boys who want a technical education—the largest school of its kind in the world; and due to be the finest and best equipped with the completion of its new building.

The romance of the success story is inevitably woven into the life of Mr. Beebe. He went to the St. Louis Manual Training school as a student, only to return some years later as its assistant principal.

Romance of Success Story.

He came to Lane as a teacher when it first opened and left it to return as principal. Now, boss of a school of 7,036 boys, according to the last count [brought up to date Wednesday], he has a divided principality with its subjects scattered around in 61 portables and five branches in addition to the main building.

But these boys are for him—hook, line, and sinker. Didn't he face the same difficulties as they do? Hasn't he a background of practical as well as theoretical work?

Born in Galena, Ill., he was named Grant because of his father's great friendship for Gen. Grant. At an early age he moved to Geneva, northwest of Chicago, and attended elementary school there.

"I wasn't much interested," he said, "in the ordinary academic high school and when I read an article by Charles H. Ham in THE TRIBUNE about the St. Louis Manual Training school, I decided to go there."

The St. Louis school was the first to offer technical training for boys and Mr. Beebe was graduated there after going through much the same experiences his boys go through at Lane. He worked his way as 75 per cent of the Lane students do. He did some drafting, worked as an usher in a theater, in a pattern shop, and one summer tried his hand at pipe fitting.

Starts as Draftsman.

After graduation he completed a course in mechanical engineering at Washington university in St. Louis and took his first job with the Pond Engineering company, contractors for electric light and water works plants. Starting as draftsman and estimator he was sent to Omaha as branch manager and then was brought to Chicago in charge of the Chicago office.

His next work was as assistant engineer for the Society for the Prevention of Smoke organized during the World's Fair of 1893, followed by work in the car service department of the Burlington road. While in the last job Mr. Beebe met Albert G. Lane, then superintendent of schools.

Lane wanted to introduce shop work into the 6th, 7th and 8th grades and asked him to take charge of the first shop sponsored by the school system in the Garfield school, 1436 Newberry avenue. The shop was such a success that at the end of two years it was moved to the Medill High school and was doubled in size.

Sponsored by Cooley.

"Those boys were a great pleasure to me," Mr. Beebe said. "They all took the course voluntarily, not for credit, because they received none, but just because they liked it. They had to stay after school in order to work in it."

F. G. Cooley, superintendent of schools in La Grange, then asked him to come out and organize shop courses in the La Grange High school and he was out there just one year when Mr. Cooley became superintendent of the Chicago schools.

"Mr. Cooley," he said, "advised me to come back into the Chicago system and take up academic work in the high schools because it was much better paid. And that was the best advise I ever received—and took. I came back to the Medill school in charge of physics. Miss Dora Wells, principal of the Lucy Flower school, and Mr. Slocum of Schurz, were teaching there, too, then."

Back to Old School.

After four years he received an offer to go to St. Louis to be assistant principal of his old school, the St. Louis Manual Training school, in charge of the work of many of his former teachers and found it not quite as much fun as a boy might think.

After two years there he accepted a position as western agent of the Wheeler Condenser and Engineering company—back to the practical business of engineering work again. And while he was doing it he became impressed with the necessity of better training for the boys of high school age trying to start in engineering work—boys who couldn't go to college.

An encounter with William J. Bogan, now superintendent of schools,

VOICE of the NORTH SIDE

Niles Center Creates Jobs in Providing Village Playspot

It is with appreciation of what such a project means to the life and color of a community that directors of the Niles Center Chamber of Commerce have approved plans for a permanent location for Niles Center days' celebrations. It is with thoughtfulness toward unemployed in the locality that efforts will be made immediately to prepare the wooded tract which has been chosen. Some of the trees must be removed from land bought from the Cook county forest preserve. A community building, an outdoor amphitheater, and landscaping of the festival grounds are included in the plans.

Of course, the woodman's ax will spare a sufficiency of foliage and shade on the grounds that should provide Niles Center with a most desirable village green. Wooded picnic grounds appeal to something deeply imbedded in human nature. Trees furnish a background that lends much to the satisfaction of a summer outing.

It has been the custom of communities to hold festal occasions at which the neighbors gathered on a common basis to find relaxation. Perhaps there was never a period such as the present when relief from the tension of everyday living was more essential. Community pride and community spirit are nourished at a get-together at which all ages and those of all stations in life mingle for a holiday which is distinctively their own.

Early settlers recall picnic grounds that played a large part in the existence of bygone days. One by one they were encroached upon by the growing city. In planning its celebration spot Niles Center is taking advantage of an opportunity to provide permanently for the future. The result will be an asset in making for community consciousness and adding enjoyment to an existence ever in danger of drifting into routine.

STUDENTS AND THE BALLOT.

The question was recently raised and discussed in a class at the University of Chicago High school as to whether, providing the high school students were allowed to vote for mayor, they would vote more intelligently than the qualified voters of the city. The point was brought up that when the United States constitution was drawn, the average person of 21 did not have so good an education as the high school student of today, and that, therefore, he was probably no better qualified to vote.

Would the high school student be inclined to emphasize real issues rather than inconsequentials? Would the appeal of acquaintances with a personal ax to grind have more weight than arguments for bringing about benefits for the common good? Would there be insistence on excepting the duties of citizenship in going to the polls, or would the privilege of voting, once attained, be treated with indifference?

The high school student will not be required to chafe long under the present age requirements for voting. Time, swift in his movements, will attend to that. May the eagerness of today be equaled by good judgment on the morrow. In their concern over political matters, high school students may consider the definitions of a politician and a statesman as set forth by James Freeman Clarke. "A politician," said he, "thinks of the next election; a statesman, of the next generation."

BETTER PLUG THE KEYHOLE.

Among the neighborhood organizations on the north side is the North Shore Gloom Chasers club. If the club is able so to arrange its programs that Old Man Gloom is successfully excluded from meetings it should not lack for members. Mr. Gloom not only knows the password to enough places where people meet and mingle but too frequently, these days, he is permitted to dominate with his presence.

The north shore club probably eliminates the dark clouds that invade mental processes through the simple method of substitution. Mr. Gloom is thus refused any consideration. Relaxation and recreation have the power to banish the dyspeptic tyrant, while an evening given over to discussion of the somber fellow would allow him the attention on which he feeds.

Of philosophy on how to chase gloom there is no end, and most of it has to do with ignoring the monster. Southey said that though he did not cast his eyes away from troubles, he packed them into as small a compass as he could for himself and never let them annoy others. Balzac said we exaggerate misfortune and happiness alike, and that we are never either so wretched or so happy as we say we are. Hawthorne held that happiness comes incidentally. "Make it the object of pursuit," he said, "and it leads us a wild goose chase, and is never attained. Follow some other object, and very possibly we may find that we have caught happiness without dreaming of it; but likely enough it is gone the moment we say to ourselves: 'Here it is!'; like the chest of gold that treasure seekers find."

WINNER IN DOUBT IN 9 NORTH SIDE COUNCIL FIGHTS

Ross and Nelson Are Only Certain Victors.

The north side aldermanic campaign is nearing the end with prospects for several close contests at the polls on Tuesday. There is little doubt that Ald. Joseph C. Ross will be reelected in the Fortieth ward. His only opponent is Paula Milgrom, a woman with little, if any, organized support, while Ald. Ross has been backed by virtually all the political groups and civic organizations in his ward, and furthermore was indorsed by the Municipal Voters league. Ald. Oscar F. Nelson has no opposition in the Forty-sixth ward, but in each of the other nine wards there is some doubt as to whom the voters will select.

In the Forty-second ward, Ald Dorsey Crowe and Charles F. Henry, hotel owner, builder, and real estate man, have engaged in a strenuous campaign. Mr. Henry, campaigning on a platform of lower taxes and less unemployment, declared he pays $70,000 a year in taxes and wants to put a stop to the practice of city hall grafters who stand at the back door to carry off the taxes he pays in the front door.

Mr. Henry, who operates a chain of ten hotels throughout Chicago, has made his appeal chiefly to the property owners and taxpayers of the ward and has gained the support of many of them.

Crowe Points to His Record.

Ald. Crowe, whose election is preferred by the Municipal Voters league, has campaigned on his record of accomplishments, including the La Salle street improvement and similar projects.

James B. Waller, nonpartisan, holds a lead in the Forty-third ward campaign and his backers feel certain he will gain a majority on Tuesday and avoid a run-off campaign.

In the Forty-fourth ward the race has narrowed down to the struggle among Ald. Albert E. Loescher, George W. Kasper, and A. L. Riemenschneider. Kasper, backed by the Forty-fourth Ward Jeffersonian club, an independent Democratic group, was given the indorsement of the voters' league, although in every one of his previous campaigns Ald. Loescher was indorsed by the league. Riemenschneider, the Thompson candidate, has little support aside from the Forty-fourth ward Thompson faction.

Neither Ald. William H. Feigenbutz nor former Ald. Leo M. Brieske, rivals in the Forty-fifth ward campaign, was approved by the M. V. L.

Ald. John J. Hoellen of the Forty-seventh ward and Ald. John A. Massen in the Forty-eighth appear certain of reelection and Ald. George M. Williston leads the field in the Forty-ninth ward. Ald. Curtis F. Mellin, in the Fiftieth ward, faces strong prospects of defeat.

The recommendations of the M. V. L. on the candidates in the north side campaign follow:

Fortieth Ward.

[Vote for Ross.]

Joseph C. Ross, finishing first term with a generally good record. Voted against the effort of the mayor to overload the 1930 budget. Has shown evidence of ability and gives promise, with more experience, of developing into a useful alderman.

Paula Milgrom, housewife; formerly clothing worker, is also a candidate.

Forty-second Ward.

[Crowe preferred.]

Dorsey E. Crowe, finishing sixth term. A serious accident kept him out of the council most of the second half of 1929. Voted against effort of mayor to overload the 1930 budget but voted with the forces of the mayor in organizing council committees two years ago. Served on subcommittee of finance committee, which pared recommendations of bond issue to a minimum. Active for Wabash avenue bridge and various street widenings.

Charles F. Henry, builder and operator of several apartment hotels. A rather difficult personality has involved him in a number of legal controversies in various courts. Has been successful in his business, but up to the present campaign has not been particularly identified with civic affairs.

Forty third Ward.

[Vote for Waller.]

James B. Waller, a lawyer engaged in real estate management and journalism. High type of public-spirited citizen. His ability and keen interest in the welfare of the city and his ward should make him an outstanding alderman.

Charles G. Burmeister, undertaker; well recommended for his honesty and integrity, but his political affiliations leave much to be desired.

Mathias A. Wagner, a deputy county clerk, is well educated and enjoys a good reputation.

Forty-fourth Ward.

[Vote for Kasper.]

George W. Kasper, coffee merchant. Graduate of Notre Dame university; in ward twenty years. Good reputation for honesty, independence and ability.

Albert L. Riemenschneider, realtor; was formerly president of the Cook County Real Estate board.

Albert E. Loescher, finishing third term with mixed record. Lacks initiative and aggressiveness. Generally votes with better element in council and against effort of mayor to overload 1930 budget, but his vote for Oscar F. Nelson in the caucus for organizing the council two years ago was an important factor in throwing the control of the makeup of the council committees into the hands of the mayor's forces.

J. J. McCarthy, Edward B. Liston and Frank Lange are also candidates.

Forty-fifth Ward.

[No recommendation.]

Leo M. Brieske, undertaker; in ward all his life; alderman from 1921 to 1927. Had a good record in first term but thereafter his services rapidly declined in value.

William H. Feigenbutz, finishing second term with poor record. Voted to sustain the mayor in his effort to overload the 1930 budget. A willing "yes" man for the administration.

Forty-sixth Ward.

Oscar F. Nelson has no opposition.

Forty-seventh Ward.

[Vote for Schmidt.]

M. J. Schmidt, automobile dealer, director of Citizens State Bank of Chicago and of Boulevard State Savings bank; good business man with excellent reputation; active in local affairs.

Stirling S. Jones, engineer and sales manager; well educated, clean, honest and reliable.

John J. Hoellen, finishing third term; many bad votes in second term. Voted to sustain the effort of the mayor to overload the 1930 budget. Man of some ability, but until recently has gone along with the administration; an opportunist.

Forty-eighth Ward.

[Vote for Massen.]

John A. Massen, finishing second term with excellent record; stands out clearly as one of the valuable aldermen in the council.

Maurice [Mac] Leavitt, hotel and real estate operator. Several years ago was in investment business, selling securities. In 1923 sold to a number of small investors stock in an oil company of the "get-rich-quick" type. He was indicted in the United States court in Texas for using the mails to defraud and pleaded guilty. Considered distinctly unqualified.

Peter S. Sioborg is also a candidate.

Forty-ninth Ward.

[Vote for Williston.]

George M. Williston, elected alderman May 6, 1930, to fill vacancy. Has voted with the better element in the council. Active in matters relating to ward improvement, and with experience gives promise of development.

William McKinley, lawyer, former speaker of the state house of representatives. Excellent reputation.

Daniel J. O'Connell, secretary to Building Commissioner Chris Paschen. In 1927 he was convicted for illegally selling liquor.

Einar Graff, Charles Zuker, Jack McCormick Jr., John V. Hanney, and E. Funkhouser are also candidates.

Vote for Williston to beat O'Connell.

Fiftieth Ward.

[Vote for Quinn or Herren.]

James R. Quinn, lawyer; formerly professor of law at Loyola university. Ex-service man; industrious, active, and man of high character.

Eli B. Herren, lawyer; ex-service man; in ward twenty-three years. Highly recommended as man of unquestioned character.

Curtis F. Mellin, finishing first term in council with mixed record. Voted against the effort of the mayor to overload the 1930 budget, but cast his vote with the forces of the mayor in organizing the council committees two years ago. His record demonstrates he is not as well qualified as either Quinn or Herren.

Leland C. Scott and C. Herman Johnson are also candidates.

"AN ARCTIC RACCOON"

"An Arctic Raccoon," a picture taken at Argyle street and the lake, won the $5 first prize in The Tribune's amateur photograph contest. It shows Mrs. George W. Lawrence and was taken by Mr. Lawrence, 901 Argyle street.

MAY IN FEBRUARY—THERE'S A THEME FOR PRIZE PHOTOGRAPHS

Chicago, winter resort par excellence, and an excellent subject for a camera fan. Whether the scene be midwinter signs of spring or sport in the snow, it may make a picture that will win a prize in The Tribune's photo contest.

Snap a picture of that first robin or the kids playing marbles or the old horseshoe game in its preseason fling. Or maybe it'll snow tomorrow and you can get a good toboggan slide picture or a study of a few spins on the ice.

Whatever you chose for you subject, and you are limited only to views taken in and around Chicago, indoors or out, send your best photo to the Photo Contest, Metropolitan section, The Tribune. The editor of the Metropolitan section will award prizes of $5, $3 and $2 for the three best pictures submitted every week by amateur photographers on each side of city and its suburbs.

The name and address of the person submitting the picture should be printed clearly on the back of each entry with the full name and address of each person appearing in the picture.

The editor's awards will be final. Please do not request the pictures be returned.

In the photo "Watchigg the Enemy," which won the $2 third prize for Mrs. John F. Gallagher, 1821 Broadview avenue, Highland Park, are shown James and Pat Gallagher and their pal, King.

The second prize of $3 was won by Karl Honnetter, 840 Belden avenue, with the picture called "Listening In." Maybe they're listening to a bedtime story.

SPEED TRAFFIC ON BOULEVARDS CUT ACCIDENTS

Maintenance of 21 Mi. Costs Only $50,000.

While motor traffic was speeded up through the reduction of congestion on the thoroughfares of Lincoln park, the number of motor vehicle accidents in the district was reduced by 300 during the last year. This was revealed by George W. Dixon, chairman of the boulevard committee of the Lincoln park board, in his annual report submitted to Warren Wright, president of the board, recently.

Commissioner Dixon attributed the decrease to more efficient police supervision and to the installation of safety zones, traffic markers, and traffic lights. Another factor which helped to lower the accident total, Commissioner Dixon said, was the program of boulevard repair and maintenance carried out by the board.

Cites Low Maintenance Cost.

"The boulevards and drives of the Lincoln park district are better maintained and for less cost than any similar arteries of travel in the city," he declared.

"The twenty-one miles of boulevards and service drives were repaired and maintained at a cost of only $50,000," Commissioner Dixon added. "Most of the repairs on the park roads were performed by the park's own forces, which permitted a great saving. The outer drive, washed away in the winter storm in 1929, was repaired at a cost of $7,000, exclusive of the landscaping repairs on the park, while the lowest bid received from outside contractors for the same work was $40,000."

Diversey Traffic Speeded.

Among the boulevard improvements effected was the elimination of all intersection rises on Diversey parkway, permitting a great increase in efficiency in the movement of traffic. Important crossings likewise were equipped with safety islands, electric flashers, and stop and go lights.

Commissioner Dixon pointed out that the change of traffic lights at Byron street and Sheridan road has not only reduced accidents, but permits a steadier flow of traffic at that point by synchronizing the working of the lights with the passage of automobiles at the legal rate of speed.

EVANSTON DEATH TOTAL DECREASES DESPITE GROWTH

Infant Mortality Rate Also Drops.

Showing a decrease not only in the death rate but also in the actual number of deaths, the report of the Evanston health department, headed by Dr. John W. H. Pollard, was made public Monday. The record was achieved in spite of the fact that unemployment increased the health difficulties of a portion of the population.

A decrease in infant mortality and an increase in the special services and clinics was also shown by the report.

In 1928 735 deaths occurred, in 1929 714, and last year, in spite of the increasing population, only 708 were recorded. Infant mortality shows a decrease from the 1929 rate of 49.2 deaths per 1,000 births to the 1930 rate of 33.8, while the figure for the entire United States in 1929 was 61.8.

Evanston Aids Chicago.

The report is prefaced by a note from Dr. W. A. Evans, health editor of The Tribune, in which he points out how Evanston has assisted in general health difficulties in Chicago.

"I always," he adds, "study the annual reports of the Evanston health department, and particularly those of Dr. Pollard, with interest and sympathy, and the effort is always rewarded."

During the last few months of the year, according to the report, city nurses gave freely of their time in aiding the unemployed by delivering food and clothing in addition to their regular duties.

The Infant Welfare society, the Woman's Club of Evanston, the Catholic Woman's club, and the Chicago Tuberculosis institute were formally thanked for their aid, financial and otherwise.

Birth Figures Higher.

Birth figures run high, with 2,033 recorded during the year. However, 1,190 were of nonresident parentage, although the total for residents of Evanston was increased to 1,024 by births outside the city to residents. The rate in 1930 was 14.6 per 1,000 population, slightly under the 1929 rate of 14.7.

Birth certificates were presented for the first time this year to the parents of all children born in Evanston by Dr. Pollard, with the assistance of the Woman's club. The prenatal clinics cared for 284 mothers with such success that not one death occurred to a mother under the care of the clinics.

STUDY CRIME AND VOTE TO CURB IT, KIWANIANS TOLD

"The Manufacture and Distribution of Water, Gas, and Coal Gas" will be the subject of a talk to be given by P. C. MacDonald, secretary of general service for the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company, at the noon meeting of the Ravenswood Kiwanis club on Thursday at the Ravenswood Masonic temple.

At the club's recent ladies' day and Valentine meeting 26 women were present. The Rev. Eneas B. Goodwin spoke on the crime problem and urged every voter to study it and to vote according to the results of his study.

On Friday the club will bowl against the Evanston Kiwanis club at 2112 Lawrence avenue.

TRIBUNE LISTS PREFERENCES FOR ALDERMEN

The Tribune recommendations on aldermanic candidates in the north side wards differ substantially from those of the Municipal Voters' league. The following suggests the preferable candidate, in the opinion of The Tribune, in each of the north side wards:

Ward—Candidate.	Ward—Candidate.
40—*Dorsey E. Crowe.	47—*John J. Hoellen.
41—James B. Waller.	48—*John A. Massen.
42—*A. E. Loescher.	49—*Geo. M. Williston.
43—†Leon M. Brieske	50—James R. Quinn.

*Present alderman. †Former alderman.

The Forty-sixth ward is omitted from the list because Ald. Oscar F. Nelson has no opposition for reelection. There is no choice in such cases.

Agree on Two Candidates.

In the Forty-second and Forty-third wards the recommendations of The Tribune and the Municipal Voters' league are the same. In the Forty-fourth ward the league recommended George W. Kasper, a coffee merchant of good reputation. The Tribune recommends Ald. Albert E. Loescher, who has had six years' experience in the city council and has voted against Thompsonism on every major roll call. The league's chief criticism of him is his vote on the last organization of the council committees. The league seems to think he could have blocked Thompson control of the city council, which is not correct.

In the Forty-fifth ward the league expresses no preference between Ald. William H. Feigenbutz—described by the league as "a willing 'yes' man for the administration"—and former Ald. Leo M. Brieske, who has spent six years in the city council. The Tribune suggests a preference for Brieske.

Hoellen Is Preferred.

M. J. Schmidt, auto dealer and director of two banks, is recommended by the league in the Forty-seventh ward. Mr. Schmidt is credited with Democratic backing and some Thompson support. The Tribune prefers Ald. John J. Hoellen, who is making an aggressive campaign against Thompson, although prior to the last four months he voted for sundry measures of the mayor.

In the Fiftieth ward the league advises a vote for either James R. Quinn or Eli B. Herren, both lawyers. Because of his previous political connections, Mr. Herren does not stand out so sharply as Mr. Quinn, whom The Tribune recommends.

Both the league and this newspaper agree upon the most acceptable candidates in the other two wards. Both recommend Ald. John A. Massen in the Forty-eighth ward, in opposition to Maurice Leavitt, whose campaign appears to be partly managed by John Kantor, who is also prominent in Mayor Thompson's jackass exhibition. Each also recommends Ald. George M. Williston in the Forty-ninth ward. The Thompson candidate in this ward is Daniel J. O'Connell, backed by Building Commissioner Paschen.

WHO'S WHO ON NORTH SIDE

CARL J. JOHNSON.

Carl J. Johnson, recently elected president of the North Clark Street Business Men's association, has lived in the Fiftieth ward for 38 years, having been born in 1893 at 4909 Hermitage avenue. He was educated in the public schools and in business college. After leaving business college he went to work for his father, Axel Johnson, and for 22 years has helped to build up the hay, coal and grain business founded by his father.

He is a member of the Swedish Engineers' society, the Svithiod Singing club, the John Ericsson Republican League of America, the American lodge, No. 889, of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; the Fort Dearborn chapter, No. 245, of Royal Arch Masons; Illinois commandery, No. 72, of the Knights Templar; Elks lodge, No. 1316; the Automobile Club of Illinois, the Uptown Lions club, the Splashers, and the Northern Athletic club. He is also executive officer of the north shore council of the Boy Scouts of America.

CIVIC BODIES ACT TO ROUT BEGGARS AND BREAD LINES

Charity Agencies Are Called Adequate.

A fight to abolish outdoor breadlines, panhandlers, and professional beggars from the near north side has been started by the North Central association. This was announced by William C. Calvert, executive secretary, last week. The association is enlisting the aid of other civic and business bodies in the district, according to Mr. Calvert, and a determined effort will be made to rid Michigan avenue and adjoining streets of the men who annoy passers-by with their appeals for money.

"There is no real excuse for giving money on the street," Mr. Calvert declared. "The association and many other agencies have set up shelters where the men who are actually in need, but are not professional beggars, can go and be assured of being taken care of. People who are accosted on the street should direct the person begging to one of the relief shelters."

Facilities Under Drive Adequate.

Mr. Calvert said that the North Central temporary shelter under Wacker drive at Wabash avenue was "always able to make room for one more."

"If we are filled up to our capacity," he added, "we will see that the men get to some other shelter, and have something to eat. This unregulated giving of money to every bleary stranger who begs on the street is vicious in its effects on the individual and on the district. It encourages the men to stay out in the cold, begging, and many who had no idea of becoming professional beggars rapidly learn that they can fool the public, and so turn to the practice permanently."

Questions Charity of Breadline.

"These agencies could just as well let the men inside to wait their turns in the most comfortable warmth of the corridors of the buildings," Mr. Calvert criticized.

James Hart, president of the Streeterville Lions club, also voiced his criticism of the situation on the streets.

"It is getting so that a person can hardly walk a block without being approached for money," Mr. Hart reported. "I cannot help blaming a lot of the condition on mistaken ideas of charity which the general public seems to have. To give money on the streets is only to encourage begging. Relief agencies, properly organized, will prevent the duplication of donations, attend to the recipient's welfare, and attempt to help him get employment. Giving on the streets only results in affluence for some of the beggars, who are better whiners than the rest, while some really deserving person is left to suffer."

The North Central Kiwanis club is to give consideration to the situation at its meeting on Friday, according to Fred W. Allen, president. Just what action may be taken, he declined to say in advance of the club's decision.

NORTH SIDE PARK BOARD BATTLES NEARING CLIMAX

Bitter Struggles in Three Districts.

Three north side park board struggles will reach their height on Tuesday, when the River, Ridge avenue, and Ravenswood Manor Park boards elect two commissioners each, to serve six year terms. The elections are decided on a plurality basis, and in each district, the two candidates polling the largest number of votes will be declared elected.

There are bitter contests in all three of the districts, with charges and countercharges flying between the candidates. The campaigns are supposed to be nonpolitical and nonpartisan, and the commissioners receive no salary or other material compensation.

Seven candidates are coming down the home stretch in the River park district. Two of the present commissioners, President Joseph A. Lynn and Commissioner Elroy C. Sandquist, are seeking reelection, with two other complete slates and an independent candidate out against them. Leo J. Grosse, 4943 Whipple street, and Emil G. Herman, 2453 Blaine place, form one of the tickets, while another is composed of Edward Bein, 4834 Albany avenue, and William C. Klein, 2524 Ainslie street. The independent candidate is Peter F. Ackva, 5652 Rockwell street.

Lynn and Sandquist seek reelection on their records, and state their platform as including baby parks, a children's welfare program, and the maintenance of the park district on a nonpolitical basis.

Favor Public Accounting.

Grosse and Herman are running on a platform of keeping the accounts of the board open to the public, the extension of the parks' athletic program, an infant welfare program with stations and doctors provided throughout the district, and the elimination of alleged graft.

Klein and Bein announced their platform as being "for lower taxes, open meetings, and better and safer playgrounds." Mr. Klein placed among his qualifications the statement that he has lived in the district for 17 years and has been active in civic affairs in the community. Mr. Bein, who has lived in the district for 13 years, is an engineer, and declares that his engineering knowledge would be of use to the district.

Ackva Runs Alone.

Ackva, the unattached candidate, is running on a platform of economy, efficiency in park management, and the building of more parks. He is 37 years old and comes of German parentage.

In the Ravenswood Manor park district, there are two slates of candidates. President Norris R. McLean and Commissioner Otto P. Jaeger seek reelection on their records.

The other slate, composed of Fred H. Cook, 4729 Washtenaw avenue, and Chester A. Phillips, 4507 Mozart street, is backed by the Mellin organization in the 50th ward. Commissioner John Miller, a member of the present board, is also a member of the Mellin organization, so that a fight for the control of the park is linked with the election.

President McLean and Commissioner Jaeger, besides running on their records, have a platform of holding taxes down, and preventing further bond issues except by referendum.

Cook and Phillips place in their platform the improvement of the district with the money now at hand, holding taxes down, beautification of the parkways and the banks of the channel, the organization of a police force, a system of improvements only on the petition of property owners, and the issuance of no more bonds without referendum.

Hot Fight in Ridge District.

A hot battle is being waged in the Ridge Avenue Park district, where Walter Butler, 6412 Talman avenue, who is not a member of the present park board, seeks to unseat one of the two present members, President Frank C. Kellogg and William Klender, who are running for reelection to the board.

The seeming three cornered tilt, however, is in reality a two way battle, as the incumbents have joined forces.

"Our platform is 'more baby parks,'" declared President Kellogg, speaking for himself and Commissioner Klender.

Mr. Kellogg added that he and Mr. Klender were running on their records, and asserted that the park board has maintained its small parks efficiently.

Mr. Butler is likewise running on a platform of "more baby parks," and promises further to lower taxes if elected. He pointed to his experience as foreman of the water department in Lincoln park, which position he held for six years, as further qualification for membership on the park board.

NEARING CAGE TITLE

This basketball team, from Our Lady of Mount Carmel school, is making a strong bid for the championship of the Grammar School league of Chicago. The boys have won 18 games and, if they can win their remaining tilts, will cinch the title. Just for luck they posed in this horseshoe formation. Beginning at the left end and following around the horseshoe, they are Ralph Norst, Jack Sheehan, Quin Collins (captain), Fred Kasper, Manning O'Connor, Donald Mayrer, Fred Bailey, Joe Nystrum, and Emmett Curran. IMMORTALITY, EVANSTON FORUM SUBJECT TODAY

The grounds for belief in human immortality will be discussed by Prof. E. L. Schaub, director of the Evanston Sunday Noon forum, today at the First Congregational church of Evanston. Among the points he will stress are: "The grand strategy of evolution;" facts revealed by psychic phenomena, psychotherapy, hypnosis, and studies of memory regarding the traits of the mind and its sovereignty over the body; the direct affirmation of self-consciousness; the solution thus afforded of the otherwise insoluble problem of evil; the implications of theism, of the existence and character of God. Prior to the discussion the arguments previously advanced for disbelief will be considered.

LYLE TO SPEAK ON WASHINGTON TODAY ON W-G-N

Election Results Will Be Broadcast.

A talk on the life and work of George Washington by Judge John H. Lyle, candidate for the Republican mayoralty nomination, at 5:30 o'clock today, the 199th anniversary of Washington's birth, and the broadcast of primary election results Tuesday evening will be highlights of this week's programs from W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel.

Beginning at 6 o'clock, an hour after the closing of the polls in Chicago, Bob Elson, W-G-N announcer, will give out the results of the primary as the votes are tabulated. The election broadcasts will continue throughout the night.

Mr. Elson will take his listeners to another baseball game at 9:45 Wednesday night during the musical menu period. His interviews with officials of the Cubs and White Sox have proved interesting and the feature is being followed eagerly by sports fans.

"Barber of Seville" to Be Given.

The W-G-N players will present the Jean Conover radio presentation of Rossini's opera, "The Barber of Seville," from 7 to 8 tonight. The soloists will be Louise Brabant, soprano; Enrico Clausi, Italian tenor, and Eusebio Concialdi, Italian baritone. Douglas Hope, leading man of the players, comes to radio direct from the stage. He has taken leading roles in "Dancing Mothers," "Why Men Leave Home."

Leo Kopp, young composer, gives another concert of his own compositions from 5 to 5:30 this afternoon. The W-G-N Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Gaston du Moulin, will play.

New Sunday Program.

A male quartet and Larry Larsen, organist, will inaugurate a new Sunday afternoon program from 1 to 1:30 today. The program is entitled "Whispering Pines."

Sylvia Loder Stone, lyric soprano, star of the theater and concert stage, will sing from 5:45 to 6:30 during the Musical Melange today.

Lawrence Salerno, popular Italian baritone, will sing the music album period, 4:30 to 5, presenting songs old and new.

Minstrel Show Held.

Bob Greer, who gets plenty of laughs with his colored "Russ and Biddy" characterizations each afternoon, 4:30 to 4:40, from W-G-N, appears on Friday night as one of the end men in the musical menu minstrels. Requests from Chicagoland folks are placing this minstrel show in a different city each Friday night. Last week the show was "held" in Sheboygan, Wis.

America's interest in the British-India question will be discussed from W-G-N, 8:45 to 9 o'clock Tuesday night by Chandra Dharma Sena Gooneratne, a native of India and widely known lecturer.

Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, will speak on "Prosperity Stands Trial" from W-G-N, 1 to 1:45 Friday afternoon, when he addresses the Executives 'club at its luncheon in the Hotel Sherman.

BOB BECKER IN FLORIDA WORKING ON AIR FEATURE

Bob Becker, outdoor writer for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and most interesting travel talker over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, is spending a part of the winter in Punta Gorda, Fla., and preparing a series or broadcasts from this station beginning early in March. The feature will be of great interest to boys and an announcement will soon be made concerning the subject matter.

SOLOIST

A concert singer, former soloist with the famous Mormon choir and radio star of the Pacific coast, is Mildred Ware, contralto, heard from 11:15 to 12 each Friday morning over W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel. Miss Ware is also soloist at the Highland Park Presbyterian church.

ACTORS ON W-G-N

OSCAR SHAW.

Two popular stage stars will be heard from W-G-N this week when Miss Kirby Davis, former Broadway player, presents Rod La Roque, now appearing here in "Cherries Are Ripe," at 4 to 4:15 on Tuesday afternoon, and Oscar Shaw, leading man of "Flying High," at the same time on Friday. Mr. La Roque and Mr. Shaw will discuss things pertinent to the stage.

Voice of the Listener

THEIR FAVORITE STATION.

Oshkosh, Wis.,
Quin Ryan,
W-G-N, Chicago.

My Dear Mr. Ryan:

Just a few words to tell you how much we enjoy W-G-N. We all agree it's our favorite station and were much interested in the announcement that you were to be manager. The thing that held our interest most was whether or not you would still conduct your Punch and Judy show, and three little boys and one little girl are very, very glad Uncle Quin is to be with us each evening.

This incident may interest you. Our "littlest one," aged 7, came downstairs for a drink one evening very soon after 10 o'clock and joyfully exclaimed, when he heard you reading THE TRIBUNE, "It's Uncle Quin" and settled down in my lap and listened till you were through and then went willingly back to bed.

Can't you manage to give us more of Allan Grant? He's splendid. On a recent trip to Chicago we visited W-G-N and were much interested. One thing that impressed me was the friendliness shown by every one, in particular Reginald Martin and that nice cellist with the long name with The Tonecasters. It makes listening to Everybody's hour so much more interesting. We also enjoyed seeing Larry Larsen—but I do wish he'd take off his hat when he plays!

We all wish W-G-N all kinds of success, always. Sincerely,

MRS. H. E. HENDERSON.
100 East Irving Street, Oshkosh, Wis.

Editor's note:—The cellist with the long name is Leon Lichtenfeld.

REDUCTION OF SUN SPOTS AIDS RADIO RECEPTION

Reports to the federal radio commission from representatives of the industry and from scattered listeners clearly indicate that long range reception is better today than at any time in history, according to Commissioner Harold A. Lafount. During this month and last, he said, it has been from two to five times as good as for the same period last year.

Reduction in sun spots with the approach of the minimum of the 11 year cycle is ascribed as the principal reason for the improvement though scientists have not yet definitely established the relationship between radio and this phenomenon. The clear reception is expected to continue throughout this year and next as the number of spots on the sun decline in number.

BENDIX CONDUCTS SYMPHONY FROM A HIGH STOOL

Max Bendix, internationally known band and orchestra director, who is co-director with Gaston du Moulin of the W-G-N Symphony orchestra, seats himself upon a high stool when conducting. But being seated doesn't take away any of his energy in directing. His body, from his waist up, is in constant motion and his arms fly all about him. When he has finished an evening's program his starched collar is wilted and his hair as tousled as if he had been wrestling.

"Little Boy of Mine" Now Gordon Vandover's Song

When Tom, Dick, and Harry sang "That Little Boy of Mine" over W-G-N last Monday afternoon, the song had special significance for one of the trio. The happy young father is Gordon Vandover, and he is either Tom, Dick, or Harry. A 7½ pound boy was born on Lincoln's birthday to the Vandovers at the American hospital. The Vandovers reside at 2259 Rosemont avenue. The baby has been named Marlin Arthur—the Marlin for Marlin Hurt, a member of the trio. Gordon's brother, Fred Vandover, is the third member of the threesome.

Allan Grant, Pianist, Is Heard Twice Each Day

Allan Grant, radio pianist, is one of the busiest artists at W-G-N. He makes two appearances each week day and once on Sunday. The week day time is during the Woman's club period, 2:30 to 3, the evening, 10:10 to 10:20, and on Sunday from 1:30 to 1:45.

TURKS TO MAKE RADIO STATION OF ST. SOFIA MOSQUE

Planned as Counterblast to Vatican.

BY LORENZ WOLTERS.

In old Stamboul the Ghazi Kemal Pasha has gone modern. He has installed loudspeakers in the minarets whence a muezzin in bowler hat calls the faithful to prayer. But the ghazi is not content with this. His latest project, according to a dispatch from Constantinople, is the proposed conversion of the ancient mosque of St. Sofia on the Byzantine Acropolis into an up to date, high powered broadcasting station.

Built as a Christian church before the fall of Constantinople in 1453, it has never been regarded by Moslems as a real Mohammedan shrine. Despite all of its defacements under Mohammed II. it still retains something of its original Christian design. St. Sofia will make a unique broadcasting station with its four towering minarets converted into giant aerials putting on the air an elaborate Turkish program.

A control cabin is to be installed where for centuries the pulpit stood. Now when a radio play is presented visitors will fill the famed woman's gallery.

The project is planned as a counterblast to the pope's new world station in Vatican City which he recently opened. The Turks are getting their technical equipment from the Komintern in Moscow. The Vatican station was built by Marconi.

Ted Weems, local dance orchestra leader, is one of the first jazz masters to use the theremin, the musical instrument operated on a radio principle. The Cleveland and Philadelphia Symphony orchestras also use the instrument.

Lowell Thomas, author, adventurer, traveler, who broadcasts "Topics in Brief" over CBS, says he has never been bored five minutes in his life. At 4 he crossed the continent in a covered wagon. At 10 he saw 14 mine rioters shot and killed. When 21 he led two expeditions into the arctic.

A silent manuscript, guaranteed crackleproof, has been developed for the use of Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, for his radio talks. A cotton-processed fabric, soft and pliable, on which addresses may be typed or written in ink without blurring, the "paper" has the advantage of eliminating rustling noises that are often heard over the air when a speaker changes to another sheet.

The historic Liberty Bell will ring again for a nation-wide audience at 1:30 this afternoon over the NBC network in commemoration of the 199th birthday of George Washington. The bell will be rung 13 times, once for each of the thirteen original colonies.

Wally Colbath, the "Lilacs" of Harold Teen, the W-G-N comic strip, is one of the country's outstanding divers. Young Colbath was on the Olympic team in 1928 and was former national intercollegiate diving champion. Colbath will swim in the Central A. A. U. diving championship on Wednesday. He is a graduate of Lane High school, Chicago, and of Northwestern university. Colbath, besides playing "Lilacs" for the radio feature, is an employé in a loop bank.

Walter Damrosch, doing a little researching, finds that the story about the waitress who when asked for a cup of coffee without cream replied, "We have no cream, will you take it without milk?" was already in print in a joke book of 1853.

Incidentally, Damrosch and his orchestra are taking a vacation this week. Senn High school's orchestra under the direction of Noble Cain is pinch hitting for him.

Baby Rose Marie, signed NBC artist, at five years earns approximately $50,000 a year. Rose Marie's father is a New York Italian, her mother Polish. The family spends much time globe trotting.

A warning for woman: An agency questionnaire discovered that we remember best the songs we heard when we were twelve to fifteen years old. So control yourselves when the loud speaker is on.

On W-G-N Tuesday

RUDY VALLEE.

Rudy Vallee, America's greatest crooner, who is appearing at a loop theater with his famous Connecticut Yankees, will be interviewed from 11 to 11:10 Tuesday night from W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. Pierre Andre will be the interviewer.

For his first Chicago appearance last Thursday evening Vallee chose the Ashley sisters—Thelma, Irma, and Irene—W-G-N's popular crooning trio, as feature singers for his broadcast.

Rudy will broadcast his regular Thursday night program, 7 to 8, over the coast to coast NBC network, including W-G-N, from the local NBC studios.

FOR TELEVISION

Natalie Towers, picked by CBS as the ideal type for the looming field of television. Miss Towers was chosen for excellence of her speaking and singing voice, as well as her beauty.

MOVE SEEN TO BLOCK VESTAL COPYRIGHT BILL

A move to shelve the Vestal copyright bill, which broadcasters have been fighting, for this session of congress is seen in the announcement of Senator Dill, a member of the senate patent committee, that the reporting of the measure would be of necessity delayed because of the "revolutionary character" of amendments offered. The Washington senator, who is known to oppose the bill, told the senate that it would be necessary to revise it greatly in order to protect the interests of the public. A law that is as satisfactory to the masses of the people as the present copyright act is should not be disturbed without mature deliberation, he said.

Engineer Will Explore Arctic Regions of Radio

John J. Long Jr., chief engineer of Station WHAM, Rochester, N. Y., plans to do some exploring in the arctic regions of the radio world if the federal radio commission grants his application to experiment in channels ranging from 50,000 to 100,000 kilocycles. The purpose of the tests is to determine the value of the ultra-high frequencies for radio-telephone communication and to develop transmitters and receivers that may be used on these now unless channels.

Chamlee to Be Heard on NBC Network Today

Mario Chamlee, Metropolitan opera star for eight years and heralded throughout Europe and this country as America's leading tenor, will sing during the Garden Hour program over an NBC network, from 3:30 to 4 this afternoon. Among the numbers which Chamlee will sing are: "A Memory," by Rudolph Ganz; "The Old Refrain," by Kreisler; "Flower Song," from "Carmen," by Bizet; "Wiegenlied," by Strauss; and "Dawn," by Curran.

Must Log SOS Work.

The federal radio commission has issued a new general order requiring that all ship and coastal radio stations and all stations licensed for marine relay service shall keep accurate logs of their operations on the international distress frequency of 500 kilocycles, generally known as the SOS wave, after March 1.

WHITE BILL FOR RADIO REVISION MAY BE PASSED

Senate Group Reports Measure.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Possibility that the White bill for the revision of the radio act in several particulars may be passed by congress before adjournment loomed when the senate committee on interstate commerce favorably reported the measure after taking on several amendments.

The basic bill was passed by the house of representatives last year, but recently Representative White added several amendments. These various revisions will have to be adjusted at a conference if the senate adopts the measure in its present form.

One of the controversial amendments, passed last year by the senate but tabled by the house, provided for the transfer of the radio division of the department of commerce to the federal radio commission.

Senator C. C. Dill of Washington, has been sponsoring the proposal but friends of W. D. Terrell, chief of the radio division, have been seeking to block it in the house because it fails to place the department on a par with the legal, engineering, and other divisions of the commission offices.

Three recommendations of the radio commission are embodied in the revisions proposed by both branches of congress. These give the federal body authority to suspend a delinquent broadcasting station for a period not to exceed 30 days, exclude territorial possessions from the five radio zones of the United States, and require the illumination and painting of radio towers.

The license period of broadcasters would be reduced from three years to one year under another amendment. The radio commission, however, has never taken advantage of the present law in this respect, having issued licenses for only three months.

Another provision would modify the appellate section of the present law so as to conform with the pending Couzens bill. This also is in accord with proposals of Representative White.

ARTHUR OBERG, W-G-N TENOR, A HEAVYWEIGHT

Let those who will have their 30 pounds, paper throated tenors. W-G-N listeners prefer one who weighs 235 pounds and has a lyric voice. Arthur Oberg, who is that tenor, sings from 11:15 to 12 each Tuesday over W-G-N. Moreover, he stands 6 feet 4 inches in his stocking feet.

ARTHUR OBERG. [Daguerre Studio.]

What's more, he is a star broad jumper, a clever basketball player, and handles a shot as if it were a pea.

Mr. Oberg also sells automobiles and is soloist in the First Congregational church in Evanston. He has played minor rôles in opera and looks forward to further activity in the operatic field.

LEON HENDERSON ON CELEBRITIES HOUR OVER W-G-N

Leon Henderson, director of the department of remedial loans of the Russell Sage foundation of New York, will be guest speaker on the celebrities' program from 8 to 8:30 p. m., through W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, and NBC. With Mr. Henderson the symphony orchestra, under the direction of Adolphe Dumont, will be heard in a number of classical selections. As a special request the symphony orchestra, under the baton of Adolphe Dumont, will play "Old Refrain." Other numbers by the orchestra will be the country dance from "Nell Gwynn," Tarantelle from "Italian Caprice," "Liebesfreud," "Alley Tunes," and selections from "Eileen."

TONIGHT'S STAR

ANNA CASE.

Anna Case, internationally known American soprano, and Raoul Nadeau, young New York electrical expert whose rich baritone won him first prize in the national radio audition less than four months ago, will be fellow artists in the George Washington birthday concert from 8:15 to 9:15 tonight through W-G-N and NBC.

Neighborhood Theaters

If you want to laugh, and don't care much about realism, go to see "Hook, Line, and Sinker," today, tomorrow, or Tuesday at the Howard theater. The picture features the comedians, Bart Wheeler and Robert Woolsey of "Half Shot at Sunrise," and "Cuckoos" fame.

The Ritz de Riviera hotel is the scene of this picture and Dorothy Lee for whom the comedians are trying to rehabilitate the place is the chief love interest. Jobyna Howland and Natilie Moorhead are other feminine stars. Good work is done by George Marion Sr. and Hugh Herbert, bell boy and pseudo detective of the hotel. Gangsters and society ladies and jewels add to the scramble plot.

Wednesday and Thursday "The Right to Love," two starred by Miss Tinée, will be shown. Ruth Chatterton, in a double rôle, is the chief interest with Paul Lukas making a hit in a small part. "Hell's Angels," a picture of war in the air, introducing the platinum blonde Jean Harlow, is the attraction for Friday and Saturday.

Jack Oakie Makes a Hit.

Jack Oakie takes the bow in "The Gang Buster," which opened at the Granada theater Friday. Jack is "Cyclone" Chase, an insurance salesman, and makes a hit. In the supporting cast are Jean Arthur, William Boyd, and Albert Conti.

At the request of a German resident of the district the Essanness Davis theater, Lincoln avenue at Belmont, will have the premier showing of "Seine Freundin, Annette," a German Paramount production, dramatization of "The Lady Lies." The cast includes Philip Manning, Lissi Arma, Berlin actress, and Fritz Delius. This is the second of a series of German dialogue pictures to be presented. Edmund Lowe, in "Part Time Wife," in English, will share the bill.

Farrell and Gaynor Reunited.

Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor are reunited again as screen lovers in "The Man Who Came Back," which opened at the Publix Balaban and Katz Uptown theater Friday. The play shifts its scenes to Shanghai where Janet and Charlie, en route to the devil, decide to become regenerated. On the Uptown stage next Friday will be Duke Ellington and his New York Cotton Club orchestra in person, along with Constance Bennett in "The Easiest Way."

CAIN TO DIRECT SENN CHORUS IN NBC BROADCAST

The program will be given from 10 to 11, the period usually devoted to the music appreciation hour directed by Walter Damrosch, who is on vacation.

In addition to the Senn High a capella chorus, the orchestra of the New Utrecht High school of Brooklyn and the High School Brigade band of the District of Columbia, broadcasting direct from the United States marine barracks in Washington, will take part in the program.

The Senn chorus will singe from 10:20 to 10:40.

CHICAGOAN GETS W-G-N PROGRAM IN SOUTH SEAS

W-G-N is getting out farther and farther. Letters from Hawaiian listeners are not unusual. Now a Tahiti listener has written. William Jacobs, theatrical booking agent of Chicago, who is in the South Sea islands to bring back fire walkers to Chicago for the Century of Progress exposition, in a letter to Reid Myers, a salesman, declared that he had heard a Verne Buck orchestra program very distinctly. The air line distance from Chicago to Tahiti is about 6,000 miles.

8 NORTH SIDE PAVING PROJECTS UP WEDNESDAY

$361,824 Estimated as Total Cost.

Public hearings on 12 north side improvement projects estimated to cost $361,824, will be held by the board of local improvements at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning in the council chambers at the city hall. Eight of the projects are for paving, and are estimated to cost $357,900; three are for water supply pipes, estimated at $1,924, and one is a condemnation proceeding.

The cost of the improvements would be paid by special assessments, and the hearings are for the purpose of allowing property owners to be heard in their arguments for or against the passage of the improvements by the board. In the event that no property owners appear, the board will pass the projects.

Estimated to Cost $126,000.

The largest of the paving projects is estimated to cost $126,000, and provides for the paving and widening of the roadway of new North Wabash avenue [formerly Cass street] from Grand avenue to Rush street. This improvement will connect with the newly completed north approach of the Wabash avenue bridge at Grand avenue, and will lead traffic northward to Chestnut street where it connects with Rush street, and thence, by way of Rush street, to State street and parkway.

In conjunction with the proposed State street widening, it is intended to afford another northern outlet for loop traffic flowing into the Lincoln park boulevard and drive system. The roadway widening, as provided for by the project to be acted on by the board Wednesday, would be eight feet additional to the present roadway of 34 feet, or a total roadway width of 42 feet. The paving would be with eight inches of concrete, except the street car right of way, which would be paved with granite blocks.

System for 50th Ward.

Second largest of the paving projects is one for the paving of a system of streets in the 50th ward to a width of 30 feet with six inches of concrete, at an estimated cost of $99,000. The system includes Jarvis avenue between Sacramento and Albany avenues; Sherwin, Chase avenues, and Jarlath street from Sacramento avenue to 125 feet west of Albany avenue, and Albany avenue between Jarvis and Touhy avenues.

Another 50th ward project, estimated at $57,500, calls for the resurfacing of a system of streets with asphaltic concrete. The streets included are: Lincoln street and Winchester avenue, from Winona street to Balmoral avenue; Summerdale avenue between Ravenswood and Damen avenues, and Berwyn and Farragut avenues, from Ravenswood avenue to Lincoln street.

Other Paving Projects.

Other paving projects to be acted on are: Greenview avenue between Albion and Greenleaf avenues, estimated at $28,000; Pingree street between Morse and Pratt avenues, estimated at $19,000; Morton street between Morse and Pratt avenues, estimated at $18,000; the alleys between Jarvis, Sherwin, Lake Michigan, and Sheridan road, estimated at $7,500, and the alleys between Ridge, Glenwood, and Hollywood avenues, estimated at $2,900.

Each of the three water supply pipe projects is estimated at $1,308, and provides for the laying of cast iron pipe and the erection of fire hydrants. The pipes are to be laid in Sherwin, Chase avenues, and Jarlath street, each of which represents a separate project, estimated to cost $1,308. In each case, the pipes would be laid from 288 feet west of Sacramento avenue to 124 feet west of Albany avenue.

The condemnation project calling for proceedings to be instituted by the board if the project is passed, is for the opening of an alley in the block bounded Winnemac, Western, Lincoln avenues, and Ainslie street.

and at the time—1907—interested in the same idea and working on the plans for the old Lane school led to his acceptance of a position as head of physics for it.

The new building was completed in 1908, and in the meantime courses were held at the Hoyne school, Cass and Illinois streets. He stayed at Lane until 1913, assistant principal the last few years.

From then until 1924, when he came back to Lane as principal, he was principal of the Calumet school, working on the new building they now are using.

Since he has been in charge of Lane the school population has increased from 4,300—too many even then for the school to hold—to the present figure of 7,036. Plans have gone ahead for the new building at Addison street and Western avenue, which will probably be completed in February, 1932, with a capacity of from 7,800 to 8,000, and will, from all signs, be filled at the start.

From all over the world come clippings about the work at Lane. Even in India it is held up as an example of what that country needs, and movies of the boys at work in the shop have been shown in remote parts of the world.

The technical school movement hails Mr. Beebe as one of its pioneers, and it is only fitting that he should head the largest school of the kind in the world.

For his life apart from school, Mr. Beebe is married, lives at 4517 Magnolia avenue, and has one son, Horace N. Beebe, who served in the world war.

"And," said Mr. Beebe, with his usual modesty, "Mrs. Beebe is far more famous than I am—in her office as vice president of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs."

His son had a technical education, but the mathematical and financial field held more interest for him, and he has not followed in his father's footsteps.

SORORITY MODELS SHOW STYLES FOR VARIED OCCASIONS

Sports and southern resort wear was featured in the style show given last week at the Sigma Alpha Epsilon Memorial temple in Evanston by members of the Alpha Omicron Pi sorority. In the picture at the left three afternoon gowns are shown—flowered chiffon, worn by Miss Leonia McLaughlin; black lace and chiffon, by Miss Ruth Tarrant, and beige lace with a bolero jacket, shown by Mrs. George P. Dean. In the center picture an array of pajamas is shown. Mrs. Harry C. Fordtram wears a sleeveless striped beach pajama ensemble; Miss Virginia Snook, a printed ensemble, with a rough straw hat. Lounging pajamas are shown by Miss Dorothy Smith. Clothes for sports and street are pictured in the right hand group. Miss Peggy Parker wears a short sleeved, two tone frock of loose crocheted material; Miss Mae Hallberg, a furred ensemble, with matching halo hat; Miss Marie Baird, a jacket suit, with hat and scarf matching. EPWORTH CHURCH HEARS BISHOP AT CEREMONY TODAY

Recital to Consecrate New Organ.

Dedication services of the remodeled Epworth Methodist Episcopal church and community house at Kenmore and Berwyn avenues will be held today with a program of events continuing throughout the week under the supervision of Dr.

THE REV. C. CLAUD TRAVIS.

BISHOP E. H. HUGHES.

C. Claud Travis, pastor.

A Sunday school rally will begin the services this morning at 10 o'clock. At 11 o'clock Bishop Edwin H. Hughes of the Chicago area will officiate in the dedication of the sanctuary. The Robert Cree Memorial chapel will be dedicated at 3 o'clock. Dr. W. E. Gratz, editor of the Epworth Herald, will deliver the address at a young people's mass meeting and dedication of the gymnasium at 6 o'clock. At 8 in the evening the new C. O. Barnes Memorial organ will be dedicated and an organ recital by William Barnes will follow.

Homecoming Dinner Wednesday.

On Wednesday evening a service of prayer, praise, and testimony will be conducted in the chapel by Dr. Travis, and on Thursday a colonial and homecoming dinner with an address by Dr. Audrey S. Moore, district superintendent of the Methodist church, will be held in the gymnasium Thursday evening.

The first cornerstone of the Epworth church was laid June 22, 1890. Ten persons made up the entire membership of the church. In April, 1929, action was taken to remodel the church and Sunday school units and build a new community house. Ground was broken for the new building in May, 1930, and work on the church was started in June.

The auditorium has been renovated, enlarged, and entirely redecorated and refurnished. The basement has been made into a Sunday school which, with the community hall, will furnish twenty-three rooms for Sunday school purposes. In the community house, in addition to the social hall and gymnasium, are the memorial chapel, Campfire Girl, and Boy Scout rooms, and a parlor with kitchenette and sewing room.

RIDGE AVENUE DISTRICT TO GET NEW BABY PARKS

Pratt Ave. Site Bought for $24,000.

Two new baby parks are in store for the residents of the Ridge avenue park district, according to Frank C. Kellogg, president. The site for one of the parks, at Whipple street and Pratt avenue, was purchased by the board on Monday, and the other site, at Hilldale and Rogers avenue, is under condemnation.

The site purchased on Monday is four acres in area, occupying the block on Pratt avenue between Whipple street and Sacramento avenue, and having 475 feet of frontage on each of the latter two streets. It was purchased from several owners at approximately $24,000. It will serve the southwest part of the Ridge district, this part having hitherto been without parks, President Kellogg explained.

"We were exceedingly fortunate to get the site at the price we did," President Kellogg declared. "I wish to compliment Commissioner William Klender for his astuteness in negotiating several of the necessary deals with the individual owners."

Although the site has been purchased less than a week, President Kellogg revealed that some of the equipment for the new park is already available, and will be installed when weather permits.

"The park," he explained, "will not be primarily a playground, but a place of shade and rest for the residents during hot summer days. Not, however, that we will neglect the playground aspect. Several pieces of playground equipment, such as a merry go round and teeter totters, will be installed, and there will be sand pits for the smaller children. Mainly, though, the equipment will consist of benches and shrubbery, with new grass wherever needed."

Condemnation proceedings on the second site, at Hilldale and Rogers avenues, will not be allowed to lag, President Kellogg promised. "There are, naturally, some delays in the courts, as every one knows," he qualified, "but we will try to eliminate those as much as we can." The site under condemnation extends northwesterly to Parkhurst avenue.

Kenilworth Club to Dine.

The Kenilworth club will hold a dinner-dance at 7:30 o'clock next Friday evening with Mrs. James Ralph Starr and Mrs. Harold F. Tideman as hostesses. New members have been extended a special invitation.

GLENCOE P.-T. A. FURNISHES ROOM THROUGH BENEFIT

Report of the ways and means committee of the Glencoe Parent-Teacher association shows that from a single benefit bridge party held last September the group has been enabled to accomplish many of its long sought improvements.

Because of the unexpected financial success of the party, planned by Mrs. Leonard L. Cowan, head of the ways and means committee, and her assistants, work was started immediately on the furnishing of Superintendent Arthur Rowell's room before his return from Europe and in time for the parents' reception at the school. Mrs. Gustave E. Rosenau was chairman of the decorating committee. In addition redecoration of the teachers' restrooms in the central and south schools was accomplished.

The remainder of the funds are being used in cooperation with the Glencoe Relief society to provide supplies for sandwiches made by the children to be distributed at the Northwestern settlement. Mrs. Raymond Clark, Mrs. George Wilson, and Mrs. Barton Sackett were chairmen for the Central, North, and South schools in this work.

In addition Mrs. B. L. Steif was appointed as dental aid committee chairman to assist in handling the cases of needy children. A portion of the fund is being used to supply them with milk.

Postscript View of Pirandello's Lazarus Drama

Goodman Takes Step in Right Direction.

By Charles Collins.

stimulating phenomenon. "The road," regarded by the pessimists of Broadway as totally extinct, is manifesting definite signs of life. The one-night stands, the half-week stands, and the week stands (as the minor foci of American industrial life are called by showmen) are eager for glimpses of first-rate drama. Local organizations—women's clubs, drama clubs, and civic groups—are offering substantial guarantees.

So Mrs. Fiske goes forth, like a veteran trouper with restless feet; Ethel Barrymore is outlining a pilgrimage that will take her to at least fifty little red spots on the map this spring; Otis Skinner is gamboling about the country in answer to the gypsy call, and Jane Cowl has felt it not beneath her dignity to visit the hinterlands.

The sleeper waketh, Lazarus arises from the dead, and "the road" is coming to life, with dollars in its pocket to spend for a night with a real life show. The showmen are beginning to talk about a return of the good old days. They are still somewhat suspicious of the symptoms. They think that it may be a false alarm, but, like veteran fire horses, they are trotting out, with their cut trunks and their lithographs, to answer the gong.

Epitaphs.

Louis Wolheim, portrayer of hard boiled fighting men, creator of the title rôle in Eugene O'Neill's "The Hairy Ape" and of Captain Flagg, the toughest marine of them all in "What Price Glory," died last Tuesday at the pinnacle of the brilliant career which the cinema offered him after his stage success. Behind his formidable mask he was a scholar and a gentleman—a mathematician, a master of science, and former college instructor. In rugged virility, in shaggy American humor, and drive of personality, he left no successor on the stage which he had abandoned for the screen. He was unique.

Louis Mann, veteran of the old school, comedian, and emotional actor in German and Jewish dialect rôles, died last Sunday night after several years of retirement from the stage. He was active in the theater from 1880 to 1927; he was starred in numerous plays; he had a vivid gift for the portrayal of immigrant character. There were occasional flashes of greatness in his acting; he came close to being a second David Warfield. He had an eager, aggressive personality, and there is a rich fund of theatrical anecdote associated with his name and achievements. "Friendly Enemies" is the play that will recall him easily to the younger generation of playgoers.

Six Years of Operettas

"THREE LITTLE GIRLS," the operetta now in its twenty-third week in the Great Northern, is upholding the long run tradition of that theater. Beginning with "The Student Prince," which ran for fifty-nine consecutive weeks in 1926, there has been a series of operettas at the Great Northern whose engagements have made theatrical history in Chicago.

Following "The Student Prince" came "The Vagabond King," in the fall of 1926, for thirty-two weeks. Then came "The Nightingale" for a spring run. "The Desert Song" open in the fall of 1927 and ran for thirty-seven weeks. The next year "My Maryland" stayed in the Great Northern for nineteen weeks, followed by "Music in May," which had nine weeks.

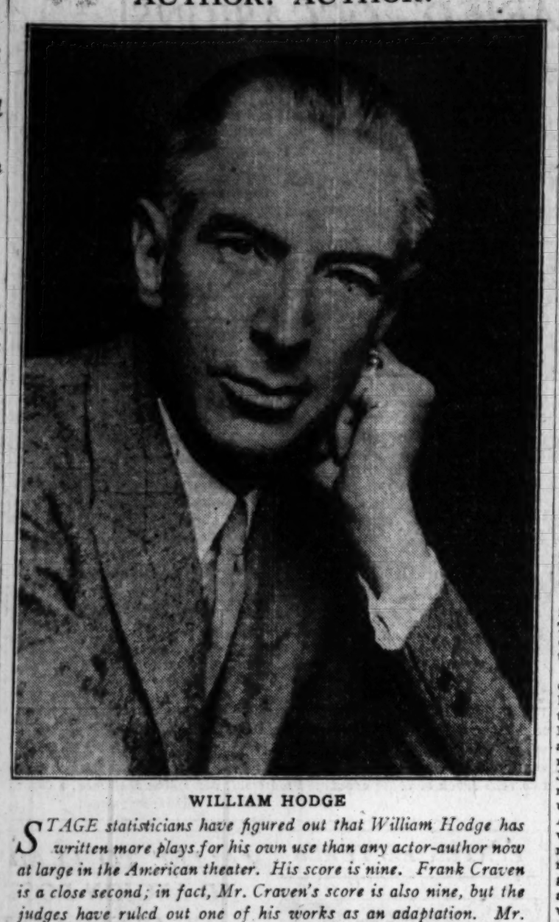
AUTHOR! AUTHOR!



WILLIAM HODGE

STAGE statisticians have figured out that William Hodge has written more plays for his own use than any actor-author now at large in the American theater. His score is nine. Frank Craven is a close second; in fact, Mr. Craven's score is also nine, but the judges have ruled out one of his works as an adaptation. Mr. Hodge's ninth opus, called "The Old Rascal," is now on view at the Garrick theater.

Lively Week of Premieres for Chicago Stage

Jane Cowl and Otis Skinner Bring New Plays.

"TORCH SONG," a drama by Kenyon Nicholson, author of "The Barker," will be staged at the Blackstone theater this evening under the auspices of the management of that playhouse. This play was produced in New York by Arthur Hopkins last fall and was favorably received by the critics. The original settings will be used in the Blackstone restaging, and a number of the members of the original cast have been engaged.

The central character is a cabaret singer who joins the Salvation Army after her lover—a traveling salesman—has deserted her. The story deals with her fall from a state of grace when she rediscovers her wandering paramour. The company includes Joan Blair, Arthur Shaw, Buford Armitage, Roderick Maybee, Rea Martin, Clarence Oliver, Hal K. Dawson, Jessie Graham, Ruth Hunter, Pearl Hight, Paul Potter, and Thaddeus Clanty. Laura D. Wilck is associated with the Blackstone company in the presentation of "Torch Song."

"Flying High," a musical comedy staged on an elaborate scale by George White, producer of the "Scandals" revues, will begin an engagement at the Grand Opera house tonight. This entertainment recently ended a run of many months in New York.

The company includes Bert Lahr, as leading comedian; Oscar Shaw, as "juvenile"; Grace Brinckley, as prima donna; Pearl Osgood, Russ Brown, Alyce Morley, the Gale quadruplets, Diana Seaby, Henry Whittemore, Fred Manatt, and many others. The libretto was written by B. G. De Sylva, Lew Brown, and Jack McGowan; the songs were composed by Messrs. De Sylva, Brown, and Henderson. The story deals with the efforts of a clownish mechanic to become a full fledged airplane pilot.

Jane Cowl will come to the Harris theater tomorrow night, under the auspices of the Dramatic League of Chicago, in "Art and Mrs. Bottle," a comedy by Benn W. Levy. This play, which was popular in New York, will be the sixth offering of the Dramatic league's season. Miss Cowl has the rôle of an actress who ran away from her husband and family to live the "free life" with an artist. She returns years later [when the story begins] to discover that her husband doesn't bore her any longer; to make confession that art and bohemianism are illusions, and to save her grown-up children from similar mistakes.

Miss Cowl will be supported by Leon Quartermaine, who hasn't acted in Chicago since "My Lady's Dress" of 1915; by Walter Kingsford, who acted the rôle of Mr. Samuel Pepys in "And So to Bed," and the other members of her New York company. She will offer "Art and Mrs. Bottle" for three weeks, and then will give one week's performances of her distinguished revival of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," with settings by Robert Edmond Jones.

Otis Skinner, dean of American actors, will return to his Chicago following tomorrow night at the Selwyn theater in "Marius," a play by Marcel Pagnol, author of the well remembered "Topaze." The piece was staged in New York under the title of "Marseilles," but it now bears the label with which it is familiar to the playgoers of Paris. "Marius" duplicated the success of "Topaze" in the French capital, and is still in performance there.

Mr. Skinner has the rôle of Monsieur Cesar, owner of a bar on the water front of Marseilles. He lords it over his patrons, gives himself the airs of a philosopher, hobnobs with sailors from the seven seas and manipulates the love affair between his son and a girl of the quays to his own satisfaction and their ultimate happiness. The character is said to be a typical Skinner part.

Theater Talk and Opinion by Vox Playgoer

To the Dramatic Editor:

CHICAGO, Feb. 17.—People have been asking what the Playwrights theater is, and why it is giving one performance of my play, "Latchkeys," at the Goodman theater Monday, Feb. 23. A simple interpretation follows:

The Playwrights theater is making Chicago a producing center of new plays and expects to continue to do so with the support of an audience especially interested in the idea. There is no more fascinating gamble than searching for good plays. Every one who gets a thrill out of the stock market, out of baseball or football games, out of race betting, can get the thrill of their lives betting on a new play.

We are finding the raw material out of which playwrights are made and by encouragement and constructive criticism are giving them an honest chance. We hire a theater; we present these plays with capable players who are amateurs only in the sense of loving an art and not getting a salary.

If the play is not a "knockout" hit in the Broadway sense we are not a bit concerned. After we have produced six or seven, even ten, new plays we are as much entitled as any commercial manager to discover a hit.

When it is remembered that Eugene O'Neill came out of the Provincetown Players, the Theater Guild from the Washington Square Players, the Moscow Art theater from an amateur group, we have precedent for our hopes. We are going to keep at it consistently in Chicago until the Broadway producers will be leaping into planes to get here to see the new plays. ALICE GERSTENBERG.

Chicago, Feb. 17.—I am calling your attention to Cleo Desmond, who will outplay Ethel Barrymore in any rôle of the Negro woman, or to Evelyn Preer, who can also outplay Miss Barrymore in any rôle of a Negro woman. Both were members of the Lafayette Players, who played in stock companies around Chicago, in New York, in Kansas City, in Cleveland, and who are now playing in "Porgy" in San Francisco. . . . Michelle Deroyer, writing in L'Intransigeant, leading Paris evening journal, says: "Today the black woman is holding her own as a stage star of the first rank."

FRANK A. YOUNG,
Managing Editor Chicago Defender.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—The plot of "Cherries Are Ripe" is four hundred years old. I read it in "Don Quixote." It is a chapter or two about two-thirds of the way from the beginning. It is called the something "Impertinent," but I can't recall. ROSANNAH ROE.

B'way Openings

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Only three premieres are announced for the stage of Gotham during the coming week. Here is the way they are catalogued:

"THE VENETIAN GLASS NEPHEW"—Opens tomorrow night at the Vanderbilt. Based upon the late Elinor Wylie's novel, this is heralded as an intimate musical show of rather unusual form. [The technical term is "little opera."] In the cast will be George Houston, Mary Silveria, Louis Yaeckel, Dodd Mehan, Raymond Huntley, Edgar Stehli, Joan Carter-Waddell, and Adele Sanderson.

"A WOMAN DENIED"—Opens on Wednesday night at the Ritz. A play by Gennaro Mario Curci, which is said to have been acted in Naples. It has been adapted by Jean Bart, who wrote "The Squall." Mary Nash will head a cast which will include McKay Morris, Herbert Braggiotti, Horace Sinclair, and Jules Epailly.

"GEMINI"—Opens Friday night at the Liberty. Bruce Spalding and Anthony Baird are programmed as its authors, but those names mean that it is the work of Mary Hay, the dancer, who will also act in it. Others in the company will be Edith Meiser, Douglas Wood, Fleming Ward, and Douglas Gilmore.

Cornell Makes Gotham Debut in Besier Play

It's Her First Venture as Actress-Manager.

By Burns Mantle.

that make light of the movie colony. Two or three plays have been announced and at least one has been produced with the film capital for a locale. None of these has reached New York, but a musical comedy, "America's Sweetheart," has. In intent it is the "Once in a Lifetime" of the tune shows.

It tells of a screen struck boy and girl who hitch-hike from St. Paul to Los Angeles in search of fortune and fame. They have agreed that the boy has all the talent, and when he's a success they'll get married. But this girl has a pretty face and a lucky break, so it is she who becomes the star, while the boy remains an extra.

Come the talkies. The girl lisps, and is of no commercial value whatever. The boy, on the other hand, follows his own perfectly shaped sound tracks to stardom.

This framework by Herbert Fields contains many pegs upon which to hang much fun, none of which is of the bitter variety found in the Hart-Kaufman comedy. Messrs. Schwab and Mandel, the producers, have summoned the aid of such standbys as John Sheehan, Gus Shy, Inez Courtney and Jack Whiting, have made full use of the red hot charm of Jeanne Aubert and have gone into the byways for a new prima donna and a new sister act. The result is a rapid, rough, colorful entertainment with a good dancing score by Richard Rodgers and, occasionally, some pretty shopworn gags.

"No! No! No!" one hears as an offstage shout.

"Ha!" says the great movie producer. "One of my yes men on vacation."

Parade of Dumb Belles.

Twice, thanks to lyrics by Lorenz Hart, the numbers are edged with satire. By the magic peculiar to a musical show one is suddenly transported from gilded Hollywood to a hill-billy cabin in Tennesse, where three ragged girls get their excitement from reading the mail order catalogs and the film fan magazines. A new issue—of a magazine—tells of America's Sweetheart, the new movie queen. The simple girls begin to sing the wondrous things they have read of their idol—how she bathes in "perfumery" and all the silly legends the fan periodicals help to create.

Back again in Holywood one encounters a wedding party in a swank hostelry, and down the stairs come all the movie stars. Every last beautiful one of them is wrapped in an ermine coat, and on every last ermine coat is a string of orchids starting over the right rib and following the lapel clear around the left collarbone to the right shoulder blade. Beautiful they are, but dumb—in their own deprecatory words, "Broccoli."

Miss Aubert, who first appeared in "Princess Charming" as an abandoned woman who sang, "I Love Love," continues her career by becoming a temperamental French movie star, also given to moments—moments? minutes!—of abandon. She sings "I Want a Man" with complete conviction.

Just to show that it is different from "Once in a Lifetime," "America's Sweetheart" has for its film magnate no Glogauer but an Irishman named Dolan. Played capably by Sheehan, this god of the movies calls Shakespeare the bird of Avon, goes into conference at the drop of a hat and rewrites "Camille" into a version called "Lovey Dovey." The Rodgers score contains several rememberable tunes, among them "I've Got Five Dollars;" "My Sweet," and "We'll Be the Same."

New Mystery Thriller.

Having studied the playgoing needs of dwellers in the five boroughs through their subway circuit, the brothers Brandt have produced as their first contribution to Broadway a mystery thriller—the first in some months. The Brandts once were operators of a string of film houses in Brooklyn. When Louis F. Werba, and others, pleaded bad business, last season, and gave up several of the outlying theaters, the Brandts sold their film interests and took over legitimate playhouses in Brooklyn, the Queens, and the Bronx. There they have operated one-week stands, taking new shows for tryouts or old ones that are going on tour. No doubt their venture has turned out profitably, for many producers with new shows to try out, nowadays, stick close to home, rather than spend railroad fare to Atlantic City and other distant points.

It may be unsafe to hazard a guess concerning the "Doctor X" which they have sent to Broadway. The last attempt to cultivate goose flesh on paying customers turned out rather badly, and it has become a custom to declare that audiences just can't be frightened any more. Yet "Dracula" is now in its fourth year on the road.

Overcoming a Poor Play.

Furthermore, one of the authors of "Doctor X" is a portly young man named Howard Warren Comstock, who wrote a farce called "Stepping Sisters" that was produced last summer. "Stepping Sisters," one critic wrote, was so bad that he, the critic, would personally stand in Macy's window and draw pictures at high noon if the play lasted more than five weeks. By dint of giving away "passes" by the thousands and collecting a "courtesy tax" of 50 cents per seat, "Stepping Sisters" eked out an existence of forty weeks.

"Dr. X" concerns a mad man who rushes about town killing simple folk and gnawing them. He's fiendishly clever, mark you, and it will take a clever man to trap him. A criminal psychologist figures out that the mad man must have got his cannibal tendencies through having been shipwrecked and forced to lunch on his companions while awaiting rescue. So the psychologist invites to his crime detecting seance all those suspects who have experienced shipwreck. More murder is done before the criminal is unmasked.

It's an eerie crime laboratory, with the usual sliding panels, an awful looking, half witted hunchback, a great air of menace supplied by Howard Lang and comedy relief by May Vokes.

ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Playgoers, armchair and local, are aligned in two camps about the relative charms of "Grand Hotel" as a novel and as a play. New Yorkers who saw it first and read it later insist that the play has thrills that the novel wholly lacks and dwellers in the wild, though not entirely woolly west, of Chicago, who have met "Grand Hotel" only as a gorgeous thriller packed between book covers, feel that if there were speculators' prices tacked onto books as they are onto theater tickets, they would give millions for the defense of their preference for the novel, but not one cent for tribute to the play.

VICKI BAUM.

It is funny how different they are—the play snappy, episodic, almost motion picturelsh in its short scenes flowing one into the other to make the moving stream of the play; the book, strangely more tense and dramatic, somehow, despite its continuity. The argument is an amusing one, however, and, like all arguments in New York about the arts, much more intense than we ever manage in a city that has the reputation for doing its arguing well, if not always, wisely.

There seems to be no argument at all, however, about "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," the Besier play about the romance of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning which was the only play produced at the Malvern festival in England last year which hadn't been written by Bernard Shaw. The whole essence of its period is in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," the period of the domineering male. It is written delightfully—in the mood of its melieu—and it is played superbly. Katharine Corneli has not had a part that was a real test of her art since her early days in that remarkable play, "A Bill for Divorcement," and the young Robert Browning is a vivid portrait. The play has a double interest for armchair playgoers—the literary one as well as the dramatic.

"Elizabeth, the Queen" is definitely promised to Chicago for April 6, so that a visiting leader of her flock [of armchair playgoers] will restrain her eagerness to talk about it until after she has seen it in the quiet circles of our village life.

Rocket Film Sets Gotham Pulses Beating

By Tom Pettey.

there was a breath taking minute or so as the rocket prepared for its dash through space. A clock ticked away the seconds before the zero hour, the voyagers strapped themselves in their berths, and everybody sat on the edge of the theater seats.

Inside the Rocket.

From then on until the arrival on the moon there was a lot of trouble inside the rocket. First every one, including the professor's pet mouse, passed out, but for some reason or other revived in a couple of hours. Then the necessary stowaway, a lad of 10, appeared, and every one went to the window for a look at the fast vanishing earth.

Possibly the best shots in the picture were those of the moon just before the rocket landed. Then the photographic effect of the moon itself was striking. Unfortunately the moon was not populated and the voyagers found only gold. The professor and one of the mechanics died because of their lust for gold. The girl and the man she was not married to remained on the moon, the husband and the small boy returned earthward, and right there the story of "By Rocket to the Moon" ended.

Meighan Back in Films.

Thomas Meighan, who isn't so young any more, is going back to work. The old time picture star and Mrs. Meighan packed their bags, shut their Great Neck, Long Island home, and took a train for Hollywood the other day. Two years of "resting" convinced Meighan it was high time he was back in the harness.

Talking pictures are new to Mr. Meighan, for he is of the old silent school. The Meighan films go as far back as the days of Marguerite Clark, Theda Bara, and Clara Kimball Young. Then, in the old Triangle days he played with such youngsters as Mary Pickford, Bebe Daniels, and Norma Talmadge. Now he is headed for picture town to make "Daddy Longlegs," "Young Sinners," and "Gracious Annabelle."

His Own Critic.

He considers himself and Janet Gaynor miscast in "The Man Who Came Back," and is far from enthusiastic regarding the picture, which was a box office success in New York. He likes his last picture, "Body and Soul," in which he plays the rôle of an aviator in France during the world war. He also said he considered "High Society Blues" a great picture and that he liked making musical comedies.

"I think my voice is improving," Farrell told interviewers, "and at least I am learning how to use it. You know I had a hard time in changing the pitch of my voice. I try to keep it low now, all the time. I'll never forget the shock of hearing myself the first time on the screen. Well, I still have a job ahead, for how am I ever going to make my voice sound like that of an Englishman in "Maggie Mary Ann"?

German Grand Opera Singers Here This Week

Works of Wagner, D'Albert Scheduled.

By Edward Moore.

ate nobility of expression" which Prof. Dent dislikes.

Shaw once wrote a letter to Viola Tree, who at that time had ideas about being a singer, and it is a good deal of a gem. When she came to New York this winter she wrote an article about it for the Herald Tribune of that city, and quoted the letter. It has so much sane though advanced advice in it that sections of it can well be cited at any time. Here are a few:

"I know all about that wonderful, perfected voice. I knew a man once who pursued it until he was within six months of conquering the world with it. He used to practice in Broadwood's piano store in Pulteney street secretly and at night. He had not been satisfied with opera engagement —with Sarastro and Marcel and applause. On the very brink of the realization of his dream the truth stepped in with scythe and hour glass, and lo! an old man lay dying in University College hospital, and an elegantly dressed Parisian in tears and perplexity saying, 'I am his son. If only I had known!" . . .

Every Night Vital.

"I know what can be taught and what cannot, and I know the tricks of the trade, and I can most positively assure you that every night you spend off the stage, every night you sing without paying audiences [bar your scales in the morning] is a night further from success, and thousand pound note worth of youth and beauty thrown away. You'd better by far sing 'Annie Laurie' on Margate Sands and take a collection in your hat afterward, than sing 'Una voce' or 'Bel faggio' for the fiftieth time at a professor's piano, and dream of paralyzing the Scala with it next year. . . .

"But, anyhow, don't try to become an Italian singer—that is, an impostor. Remember, English peculiarities are qualities just as much as Italian peculiarities. To be lovely and slim and ten feet high is a whole bunch of qualities. Hardness, as you call it, is just as much a quality as velvet. Melba, who began as hard as nails, was as successful as Trebelli, whose first phrase as Maffio in Lucrezia Borgia, the first time I heard her, still remains in my memory like a delicious ripe plum. You say fright hardens your voice. Then, in the name of common sense, O irrational Viola, why don't you take steps to get over the fright by singing in public—were it only a street corner, where I learned to speak in public—every day? You must assert all your personal peculiarities as merit and qualities and not intimidate yourself by being ashamed of them as defects. . . .

Pride in Nationality.

"I don't want to drag you back from Italy if you like living there, in spite of the difficulty of hearing any nice music there except opera. But be patriotic. Your pride must be pride in being English. You must succeed as the beautiful Englishwoman. Your voice must be an English voice, and your genius an English genius. I am an Irishman—intensely proud of being Irish [quite unreasonably]—and I know. You must get your soul free, especially from the ideas of music masters, who always live in one room [crowded with a grand piano] and never escape from it except into a concert room or opera house, where they don't even pay for their tickets. The whole world should be too small for a great artist, whose main characteristic is to be at home anywhere."

Two Competitions.

Competitions are in the air. The biennial contest of the National Federation of Music Clubs is preparing to cover the country in preparation for the final which will be held next June in San Francisco. Contests for Illinois will take place in Kimball hall next month, particularized thus:

Organ, March 25, 2 p. m.; violin and cello, March 26, 9:30 a. m.; voice, March 26, 2 p. m.; piano, March 27, 9 a. m. Application blanks and all information regarding the contest and its conditions will be furnished by Mrs. Mary E. Foster, 1712 North La Salle street, Chicago, who is state chairman of the young artists' contest. Following the state contests will come the district contests, and the winner of these will enter the national finals at San Francisco. Cash prizes running to $500 will be awarded, and there is a special operatic voice prize of $1,000, competitors for which must be prepared in three rôles.

The Juilliard School of Music in New York also announces a competition for the publication of new orchestral works by American composers. Only the publication of outstanding works is promised, but publication will facilitate performances with the major orchestras, and in addition the composer will receive all royalties and fees from performances, with the school promising to coöperate in securing adequate rehearsal and performance.

These are the terms:

1. Compositions must be by native born or naturalized American citizens.

2. Only such orchestral compositions as are suitable for performance by a major symphony orchestra will be considered, and only compositions of which the composer owns or can control the copyright should be submitted.

3. Compositions which have been previously performed should be accompanied by a brief statement as to places and dates of performance, so far as known.

4. Compositions should be sent to the Juilliard School of Music, 49 East 52d street, New York, before May 1. Manuscripts sent by mail should be insured and the composer's name and address should be securely attached. Manuscripts not selected for publication will be returned to the sender.

5. Should a composition of outstanding merit be disclosed through the competition it will be published in the summer or autumn of 1931.

A Bach Festival.

As a feature of the fifty years of existence of the Boston Symphony orchestra a Bach festival will be conducted by Serge Koussevitzky during the last week of March. Among the works to be presented will be the Mass in B minor, the Magnificat, four cantatas, and a number of instrumental concertos, orchestral works, and the like. The soloists will be Amy Evans, soprano; Margaret Matzenauer, mezzo-soprano; Richard Crooks, tenor; Fraser Gange, baritone; Richard Burgin and Julius Theodorowicz, violinists; Alexander Borowsky, pianist; Mme. Patorni-Casdesus, harpsichordist, and Wallace Goodrich, organist.

Founded in 1881 by the late Maj. Henry L. Higginson, the orchestra's first conductor was Georg Henschel. Following an unchanging policy of engaging foreign conductors, his successors were Wilhelm Gericke, Arthur Nikisch, Emil Paur, Gericke in a return engagement, Karl Muck, Max Fiedler, Dr. Muck again, Henri Rabaud, Pierre Monteux, and the present incumbent, Dr. Koussevitzky.

Music for the highbrows would seem to have as much of a struggle in France as anywhere else. At least, Frank Jay Gould appears about to lose his concession to provide the city of Nice with its opera season. Departing from the old custom of offering excerpts from popular operas on Sunday afternoons, he provided symphony programs, for which he was compelled to charge high admission prices. Now comes the announcement from the community's council that the management of the Nice municipal opera, instead of being regranted to him, will be offered to the most satisfactory applicant for the next three years.

The worst musical joke of the week is in the Musical Courier. A letter in the Variations column tells that Columbus was the inventor of jazz, and proves it by saying, "Recent disclosures of his life show that he came to America at the head of a group of pirates long before the dawn of 1492. It is indisputable, therefore, that he was the original American leader of a band of Corso Airs."

THOMAS W. ROSS

CAN you remember as far back as "The Fortune Hunter"? And can you hark back ten years earlier to "Checkers"? If so, you are a charter member of the Thomas W. Ross club. Whenever Mr. Ross comes to Chicago his play has a run. Witness "Jonesy," now scampering into its ninth week at the Playhouse.

Here's Amusing Story Acted by a Clever Cast

Lines Are Witty; Direction Is Excellent.

By Mae Tinee.

—causes him to visit a lawyer, who is the husband of another woman he has never met. Sounds complicated? Is, rather.

Now the hero has lost all faith in the fair sex and makes known his views to the lawyer, who hath a cold and disapproving eye and thinks his client—a stranger to him until this visit—and his opinions, utterly reprehensible. And says so! There's nothing wrong with women—but men, asserts this pat little man. It's up to the male of the species to guide the fragile creature in his home in the ways she should go; to be gentle, aye, but firm. Correctly steered, a woman 18 correct, thinks Lawyer Drake, and, cherished as she should be, is unfailingly the thing of beauty and the joy forever she was put on earth TO be.

Well, we'll let that go for awhile.

A Cry for Help.

On their yacht, and just about to heave ho, or whatever you do when you leave shore in a yacht, Messrs. Fallon and Duff hear a cry for help. They look and there ahoy in the briny deep, swimming, but well nigh exhausted, is yes—a woman. She comes on board, all wet and shivering and southern and vivacious, and—pretty soon, along happens a friend of hers in a motor boat. The latter is a beautiful creature and greatly relieved to find that her cousin and guest has been rescued from Davy Jones' locker.

And that is that, only——

The boys don't get away!

Instead, they find themselves guests in the home of somebody who would much rather have discovered himself entertaining rattlesnakes or small pox or the seven year itch. Lots of water runs under the bridge and lo, we have the somebody and our hero making a bet. I shall not divulge the identity of the somebody because I am no divulger.

The trick is—how the bet turns out. Now, I've said my say.

Of course, if you don't WANT to see a clever, sparkling, laugh provoking, interest titillating movie such as "Don't Bet on Women" 18—why, that is most certainly your very own business.

Bits aBOUTem.

LEW CODY will appear in Charles Rogers' next production. "The Registered Woman" . . . A. J. Gotham Stage Slows Down as Lent Comes In

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Only three plays are scheduled on Boadway for week after next. Lent has begun; income tax time [the Ides of March for America] is approaching; and trade at the box-offices is ebbing a bit. The three for the first week of March are: "Blossom Time," in revival, at the Ambassador; "Success," by A. A. Milne, at the Charles Hopkins; and "As Husbands Go," Rachel Crothers' latest, at the Golden. There are a few vague possibilities on the roster, among them "Hilda Cassidy" and "Grey Shadow," which do not sound important.

Frank Craven has gone to the Pacific coast to act in a regional staging of his comedy, "That's Gratitude." He hopes to spend four weeks in Los Angeles and another four in San Francisco. He took with him the manuscript of a play upon which he and Augustus Thomas, former dean of American dramatists, have been working. It is called "The Devil Finds Work," and deals with a man who retired from business in middle age, only to get involved in a lot of mischief. George Barbier will have the leading role in next summer's try-out of this opus.

Lenore Ulric is doing a thriving business in "Pagan Lady." Twice the play has been booked for a tour and twice the customers of the Forty-eighth Street theater have compelled the extension of the run. Miss Ulric is one of the few actresses whose name has a marked drawing power in this era.

Washington, D. C., will be the scene of the first performances of "The Wonder Bar," the musical show in which Al Jolson is returning to the stage. March 2 is the date of the première. A week later the entertainment will be moved to New Haven, Conn. This arrangement more or less fixes the date of the New York opening, at the Bayes theater, as March 16. Of course, there may be delays and postponements, due to revision. One never can tell about these large scale musical pastimes while they are in the formative period.

The opera of "Peter Ibbetson" seems to have started a clamor for the revival of the play. According to rumors that are floating up and down Broadway, the Shuberts will sponsor the drama, Dennis King will have the leading rôle, and Constance Collier will attend to the stage direction.

"The Iron Widow," due for staging soon, is one of the many plays that were designed for the use of the late Jeanne Eagels. Its scene is an African penal colony and it is said to be drenched with the atmosphere of the dark continent. The cast calls for twenty actors and one lone, lorn heroine. The latter rôle has been assigned to a certain Ara Gerald.

Gossip about revivals, always plentiful in the early spring, is now mentioning Barrie's "Mary Rose," a mysterious spiritualistic play in which Ruth Chatterton acted in war times, or a little later. Gilbert Miller and Arthur Hopkins are said to be the interested managers. Helen Hayes has been named as the lady who wants to play the heroine. She admits it, but thinks that her present vehicle, "Petticoat Influence," will keep her busy for the rest of the season.

De Wolf Hopper seems to have postponed his project to tour New England in a Gilbert and Sullivan repertory. He is now interested in a piece called "Merry Madness," which is said to be headed toward a Chicago engagement.

Plays about hotels are in fashion, thanks to the success of "Grand Hotel." Edward Childs Carpenter has adapted one from the German which will bear the title of "Rendezvous" for its try-out this spring. All of its scenes are located in a hotel. Mr. Carpenter also has a play called "Red Handed," written in collaboration with Laurence Gross, under consideration by William Harris Jr.

J. J. Shubert will sail for Europe on Monday, to be gone for at least five weeks. A long list of theatrical purchases may be expected upon his return.

MUSIC NOTES

Dr. Stock is taking a week's rest in the strenuous season of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Eric De Lamarter will take the baton for the Tuesday afternoon concert, the Thursday night pop, and the Friday-Saturday pair, as well as the Civic orchestra this afternoon. Daniel Saidenberg, first cellist of the orchestra, will be the soloist Tuesday in the Saint-Saëns Concerto in A minor, and he, Mischa Mischakoff, and Jane Anderson will combine talents Friday and Saturday in the Bach Triple Concerto. The Tuesday symphony will be Tschaikowsky's fifth. On Friday and Saturday Mr. De Lamarter will give first performances of a suite from his own work, "A Dance Drama."

Francis Neilson will lecture Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at the University of Chicago chapel at 4:30 o'clock on musical subjects. The first will be "Bach and His Precursors," illustrated by organ compositions played by William Lester. The Thursday subject will be "Lyrics of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries," and the illustrations will be songs sung by Claire Dux.

OF THE GERMAN OPERA

THESE two artists, by a coincidence of casting, are to appear together in two works of the German Grand Opera company's brief engagement at the Civic Opera house. Mme. Gadski, a veteran of the operatic stage, is to sing Isolde in "Tristan und Isolde," Thursday night, and Brunnhilde in "Die Walkuere," Saturday night. Miss von Essen, an American girl, will be the Brangaene in the first work and the Fricka in the second.

2 Artists from Chicago Please N. Y. Audiences

By Joan King.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Chicago artists have provided entertainment for two of Gotham's recent musical audiences. The first Chicago visitor was that excellent mezzo-soprano of the Civic Opera company, Mme. Cyrena Van Gordon, in her first New York appearance since 1928. Pausing between operatic nights —she is now on a cross-country tour from Boston to the coast with the company—Mme. Van Gordon greeted a large gathering of her admirers at Carnegie hall.

The audience was extremely enthusiastic in its reception, for not only is the Van Gordon voice familiar here by reason of recital hearings but also through recent broadcasts from the singer's home town. The program Mme. Van Gordon offered was interestingly varied, being composed not only of recital favorites but also of music not so frequently heard, including songs by several contemporary composers.

Assisted by Walter Golde at the piano, Mme. Van Gordon began with Wagner's "Rienzi," followed by modern lyrics by Pfitzner, Korngold, and Strauss. The valkyrie cry from "Die Walküre" concluded the written list, and in between were numbers in Spanish and French by Granados, Joaquin Nin, De Falla, and Louis Aubert.

Mr. Golde was represented by his new song, "Offering," among those numbers sung in English. Mme. Van Gordon was in fine voice and her hearers demanded numerous encores.

Young Cellist Heard.

In the charming, modernistic concert hall of the Barbizon hotel here Lillian Rehberg, young cellist of Chicago, gave a delightful matinée recital recently. Miss Rehberg, who is the daughter of a choral conductor and pupil of Hans Hess and Alfred Wallenstein, had already been heard in her home town with the Chicago Symphony orchestra. This first appearance here revealed a natural musicianship and a good technical training. Her tone was light, but singing, and her interpretations were artistic.

She played a sonata by Sammartini, the Tschaikovsky "Roccoco" variations, and shorter pieces by Cyril Scott, Ravel, Faure, and Boulanger.

Friends of Music Concert.

At the eighth concert of the present season the Society of the Friends of Music gave as their chief offering of the program at the Metropolitan Opera house Mozart's Coronation Mass in C. The audience liked the mass, which was probably new to most of those present. At least, New York has not had a performance of the work in some years. As usual, Arthur Bodansky conducted the chorus of the society and the Metropolitan Opera orchestra, and was assisted by four Metropolitan soloists, Editha Fleischer, soprano; Marion Telva, contralto; Hans Clemens, tenor, and Friedrich Schorr, baritone. Wilfred Pelletier played the organ.

The Coronation Mass, No. 317 in the Koechel catalogue of Mozart's works, was written in 1779 when the composer was 23 and is the seventeenth of his nineteen masses. According to the program notes on the occasion, its form was governed by the views of the archbishop of the period, who liked to have his religious services brief, did not relish extended solos, and disliked fugues. Therefore, this mass is short. It only required a half hour for performance.

Presumably in accordance with the archbishop's wishes, the Coronation Mass sets forth the text with little repetition, and the opportunities for vocal display are relatively limited. The music is tuneful and bright in color and mood. Mr. Bodansky gave a good performance, with brilliant singing by the chorus. And the soloists were in good voice.

Two Farewell Recitals.

Two farewells were paid to this town by favorite recital artists. Mischa Elman, attended by his usual big audience, made his final bow at Carnegie recently, and Myra Hess, the beloved English pianist, played at Town hall for the last time until January, 1932.

For his program Mr. Elman chose one, as usual, not of the popular type, but, also as usual, this did not lessen the size of his audience. His first number was the Beethoven Sonnets in G major, for which he was assisted at the piano by his sister, Lisa Elman; the second, Bruch's Concerto in D minor; the third, Bach's Unaccompanied Partita in E. He concluded with a first performance of "Rapsodia Iberica," dedicated to him by the Spanish composer, Joaquin Nin, a work described as serving mainly as a vehicle of technical display.

Hollywood Is Saying Now, "I Told You So"

Claire-Gilbert Breakup Long Expected.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—The impending bustup between Ina Claire and Jack Gilbert writes a rather rapid finis to one of the spectacular romances of Hollywood. That there would be a separation was bet even from the first. Many claimed at the time that it was one of those "rebound" affairs.

Jack had been most devoted to Greta Garbo, and his interest in Ina was born during a spell when he and Greta were estranged over some tiff. Strangely enough, Ina recently played in Donald Ogden Stewart's comedy, "Rebound."

Professional rivalry is as much at the base of the situation, as an outsider sees it, as any personal friction. When Ina came to Hollywood with the talkies she was a Broadway celebrity. Her quick marriage to Jack Gilbert might have been construed by some as a clever and quick way to win a movie public. In fact, her own studio, Pathe, advertised her at the local theaters as "the woman who won Jack Gilbert's love."

A check taken at the theater at the time revealed that one person in ten had never heard of her other than as Jack's wife. This was enough to rub any Irish girl raw, let alone Ines, the daughter of Mrs. Fagin. The fighting spirit rose with a vengeance. And when some one asked, "How does it feel to be married to a star?" Ina riposted: "You might ask Mr. Gilbert about that."

King Started to Slip.

Then the very talkies that brought Ina to Hollywood began to withdraw the crown from Jack. Several bad pictures and the king was slipping. In the last one released, "Way for a Sailor," Wallace Beery was billed in bigger type than Gilbert. Then came Ina's recent success in the talkie, "The Royal Family." In addition to all this professional jealousy and the ups and downs for both of them, the stock market made a poor man of John. His disposition doubtless was not improved thereby.

Reports when the happy couple returned from their honeymoon abroad were to the effect that Jack came home a wreck. Behind closed doors of friends it was whispered that Ina had displayed more fire and temperament than Jack had ever known was in one woman. Back at the studio Jack began to relax a bit. Then came the separation, when Miss Claire moved to Beverly Hills and left Jack alone in his hilltop eyrie. The story was given out that remodeling was being done to accommodate the new mistress of the house. People on the inside with Jack felt then that it was all over but the settlement.

This case is another illustration of the fact that film sheiks have always had a dickens of a time holding their wives. Valentino had two unhappy marriages; Norman Kerry lost his wife via the courts; Jack Gilbert lost Leatrice Joy and a former wife; Tom Mix lost four; Ronald Colman is separated from his wife; Douglas Fairbanks lost Beth Sully; William Powell has been divorced by his wife. In fact, the drawing cards at the box office prove also rans at home.

News of Films and Players.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio is still titillating with the echoes of the Kathleen Key row with Buster Keaton. The story Buster tells is that he paid her $500 on a bet that she could not lose twenty pounds in ten days. When she lost six, he says, he paid her to encourage her to get slim enough to get in picture work again.

These being the statements, Wallace Beery rushed on to the set where Marjorie Rambeau is working and nearly scared the life out of everybody by bellowing at her: "You! you! there you are! I want the truth outa you and nothing but the truth." Assuming a menacing attitude, Wallace glared into Marjorie's frightened face.

"What is it, Wallie?" she whispered in trepidation.

"What I wanta know is, will you pay me $500 to lose twenty pounds?"

William Powell and Carol Lombard, beautiful Paramount star, are rapidly becoming one of Hollywood's davoted couples. Sighted at a highbrow concert together recently, Carol wore a long black lace gown with short ermine jacket, and she and Bill sat and purred at each other all through the intermission. She calls him "Junior," nobody knows why.

Florence Lawrence, one of the early film stars, has divorced her husband, Charles B. Woodring, claiming he accused her of being dowdy and not snappy enough to please him. Nevertheless, Florence is retaining him as business manager of her cosmetics plant.

THE VOICE OF THE FAN

Right Back at 'Em.

Dear Miss Tinée: For years the long suffering public has waited patiently for the movies to be brought to their present stage of perfection ("stage" with an inflection, but not "perfection").

With the advent of sound the movies had arrived, apparently. The movie-goer settled back into his genuine velour covered armchair with ears cocked and eyes a-goggle, a smile of anticipation illuminating his dimpled countenance. The smile quickly faded, however, when some bright, high pressure chappie, who no doubt plays golf and wears bizarre underwear, conceived the idea of the preview. Now, the movie-goer is compelled to sit through an agonizing jumble of screen-hash artfully calculated to bring him clamoring to the ticket office several nights later.

The air is simply electric with superlatives. Productions are "Stupendous, Overwhelming, Overpowering . . . Incredible, Mystifying, Amazing! The Depths of Pathos, the Height of Romance, and the Zenith of Comedy" are all packed into one "Astounding Production!" The "Cold Grip of Fear and Suspense" will bring you to the edge of your seat, and you will be "Swept Away" the next moment by a "Torrent of Emotion," or an "Avalanche of Laughter!"

The co-stars of the "Epic Film" are the "Mightiest Stars" of "All Creation" . . . "Twin Gods of Moviedom." One film was demurely described as "Bigger than Life Itself!"

Such atrocities are a monumental insult to the intelligence of the movie patron and reveal the childish formulæ employed by the master minds of the California gold fields. The advertising psychology of movie producers may be boiled down to one simple fact: The money of morons has the same pleasant, metallic ring as that of the intelligentsia. Three cheers and a tiger for mass production!

Is there a remedy? Yes, praise Allah there is. If movie critics will speak to the producers in their own language, the storm of superlatives will cease and a ray of intelligence will break through the clouds. The critic should muster all of the gibes, jeers, and detonating epithets at his command and fire them broadside at every mediocre film that comes up over the horizon. No producer will be able to survive a murderous hail of red hot adjectives and steel jacketed consonants.

We must fight fire with fire and bring this conflagration of verbiage under control before the entire movie going public is driven to miniature golf or some other desperate alternative. HELL'S ANGEL.

Editor's Note: Ashes to ashes, dust to dust, fire to fire, and Pike's Peak or bust.

REVIEWING THE NEW RECORDS

By Edward Moore.
(Tribune Music Critic.)

BRAHMS' Concerto for violin and violoncello, opus 102, otherwise known as the double concerto, does not rank with the most popular music among casual concert-goers, in fact, it is frequently referred to and thought of as one of the high-brow pieces that misguided artists sometimes impose on their unsuspecting patrons. One believes, however, that a careful hearing of Victor's album M-99 in the musical master pieces set will create a change of opinion, even among those who have liked the composition the least.

As frequently happens in a case of the sort, the interpreting artists are the reason for thinking of the work in a more kindly mood. For here the violinist is Jacques Thibaud, the violoncellist is Pablo Casals, and the conductor is Alfred Cortot, the pianist who on this occasion extends a baton over Mr. Casals' own orchestra in Spain. In case you have forgotten it, Mr. Casals several years ago decided that the life of a touring soloist was not enough to exhaust his activities, so, going back to his native land, he organized his own orchestra and has been giving concerts ever since. Judging by this set of records, he is as good a judge of orchestral tone as of his own solo tone, and as insistent on getting it.

The three, Thibaud, Casals, and Cortot, are all famous soloists in their own right. Occasionally they combine forces and then become one of the greatest chamber music organizations in the world. The Brahms concerto is a much more extensive and brilliant piece of work than any chamber music, but the three artists have used the same principles of fine individual performance and flexible interchange of teamwork to produce a masterpiece of interpretation. The set can be confidently recommended both for them and for Brahms.

Records from Europe.

Brunswick has a pair of records brought from Europe with an obvious inference that one is from France and the other from Germany. The first is orchestral, No. 90128, with Gounod's "Funeral March of a Marionette" on one side and Pierné's "March of the Little Tin Soldiers" on the other. Both are made by the Orchestre de l'Association des Concerts Lamoureux under the direction of Albert Wolff. Light music, the Gounod piece rather more meritorious than the Pierné, but both attractive and excellently recorded.

In 90129 Hedwig von Debicka is introduced in some of Mozart's sacred music under the direction of Julius Pruewer, "Et Incarnatus Est" from the mass in C minor, and "Alleluia." Here is a good and well trained soprano voice, showing, as far as recording is concerned, to rather better advantage in the "Alleluia." This excerpt, a favorite in soprano song recitals, is always a bit disconcerting to American ears because of the interchangeable accent from the third syllable to the second and back again, a practice allowable in the German language, but not in English. The same thing is observed in some of the Handel compositions, even after he took up his residence in England.

Piano and Violin.

Columbia in 50267 D presents the well known violinist, Yelli d'Aranyi, with Arthur Bergh at the piano in the Chaconne, which on the record is attributed to Charlier. Unless memory is sadly at fault, that composition, when heard in violin recitals, usually carries the name of Corelli on the program, a fact, however, which does not interfere with a first class performance by Miss d'Aranyi, one which she approaches in the mood of playing living music instead of doing homage to a dead composer.

Another Columbia instrumental record, 2254-D, shows Gil Marchex, pianist, of whom nothing is known on this side of the Atlantic, in two well played and highly contrasting short pieces, Rameau's Minuet in G and Béla Bartok's "Allegro Barbaro." Bartok, a Hungarian, has at one time and another been acclaimed as a white hope among contemporary composers, but in the present case it is difficult to find much more than an insistent, driving rhythm and a few harmonic mannerisms.

Opera, Music Lectures Given at Palm Beach

Damrosch to Talk on the "Ring" Cycle.

PALM BEACH, Fla.—[Special.]—Although Palm Beach is hundreds of miles south of America's two great operatic centers, Chicago and New York, it is not to be cheated of this musical luxury during the present season. An opera season all its own is a novelty introduced to the colony for the first time this winter.

The colony, in its best bib and tucker, flocked to hear "Pagliacci" as presented by the Romany chorus, a local group of amateur singers, at the Everglades club, recently. During the coming week the colonists will hear Walter Damrosch, who is as much a national institution as the Chicago Civic opera, in the first two of a trio of lecture-musicals on the last three music-dramas in the Wagnerian "Ring" cycle.

Mr. Damrosch, who was with the Metropolitan Opera for many years, directed the New York Symphony orchestra for a long period, and who now is devoted to his radio work, is arriving here on Monday. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Damrosch and both will be the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Seligman.

In his lecture-musical Mr. Damrosch combines a recitation of the operatic story with piano interpretations of the motifs and arias. On Tuesday Mr. Damrosch will deal with "Die Walkure" on Thursday with "Siegfreid," and on Monday, March 2, with "Gotterdammerung."

The first lecture is to be given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, the second at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Kay, and the final lecture at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Seligman.

Subscribers to the Damrosch-Wagnerian series include Mrs. George Rassmann, Mrs. C. H. Randle, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Dillman, Mrs. Eleanor Orr, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Phipps and Mr. and Mrs. John F. Harris.

An Unusual Party.

By far the largest party of the season is the supper dance at which Vincent Bendix and his guest, Caleb S. Bragg, are entertaining at the Embassy club. More than 200 guests are attending. The chief entertainment feature of the dance is an excellent card of boxing bouts, with Primo Carnera as the biggest attraction of the evening.

The prize ring belonging to the Oasis club, Palm Beach's swank bachelor retreat, has been removed to the Embassy club for tonight's party. This is a colony that, man and boy, and women, too, attends the weekly prize fights arranged by the American Legion in West Palm Beach. Every one is a fight fan, so the Bendix-Bragg party has been more eagerly anticipated than any other entertainment this season.

Mr. Bendix, who has taken the beautiful Van Riper home for the winter, has been host to a jolly stag party during the week. His house guests, in addition to Mr. Bragg, include I. Newton Perry, Howard F. Gillette and E. F. White.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cole of Chicago are giving a corn beef and cabbage dinner for 100 guests at their home on Sea Breeze avenue on Monday night. Amusing invitations ornamented with a picture of Jiggs and bearing the legend "Good news at last! Corn beef and cabbage, Monday, Feb. 23, at Sam'l Coles," were sent to their guests. Mr. and Mrs. Price Williams are house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Cole.

More Chicagoans Arrive.

Several guests have arrived to augment the Chicago colony at the height of the season's gayety. Mrs. C. Morse Ely arrived recently to be the house guest of Mrs. George A. McKinlock.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Reynolds are now in Palm Beach, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wright, at Whitehall. California is the eventual destination of Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds. After a few more days here they will go to Havana and sail from there for the west coast.

Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Durbin, who arrived the first of the week to be the guests of Mrs. Joseph B. Long, have been a pleasant excuse for many parties, one of the largest of which was a tea given by Mrs. Long at Villa Filippoli. Mrs. Long's guests included Mr. and Mrs. William F. Bode, Dr. and Mrs. Malcolm Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Max Von Schlegel, Mrs. Charles H. Chadwick, Miss Amy Phillips, Viscountess Henri De Frise, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Copley Thaw, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Thompson, Mrs. Ezmund E. Allyne and Mrs. Stuart Baird.

Charles H. Chadwick joined Mrs. Charwick at Whitehall during the week. Mrs. Pickett Withers of Chicago and Mrs. Farley Hopkins of Lake Forest are also at Whitehall.

Annual Flower Show.

The annual flower show, in which Mrs. George A. McKinlock is much interested, is now over. The show was opened with a buffet luncheon given by Mrs. Henry R. Rea, vice president of the exhibition. All members of the Palm Beach Garden club, of which Mrs. McKinlock is president, were Mrs. Rea's luncheon guests.

Akael De Wichfeld of Paris is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. Leonard Replogle. Count and Countess Felix Von Luckner, who have been staying at the Ambassador hotel, are on a cruise on the yacht Mopella. The count and countess are guests on their own yacht, since it has been leased during the present cruise to Mr. and Mrs. Emil Mossbacker, whose guests also include Mr. and Mrs. Vladimir De Rachevesky.

Will Stage Barrie Play.

The next production of the Palm Beach playhouse, which is managed by Miss Muriel McCormick, is to be Barrie's "What Every Woman Knows." The present week's production, "Goose," a new play by Malcolm Ross, has been unusually successful. Its premier was a most interesting affair, with all the glamour

New Yorkers Don Pink Coats; Ride to Hounds

While Parties Subside for Lenten Season.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—That rushing noise one hears at present is made by society hurriedly departing from town. This, you realize, is Lent, and according to all the tenets of good metropolitan society, pleasurable activities should be at an end for forty days. Of course, if one wanted to be nasty, one might ask what activities should come to what end. There haven't been so very many parties and galas that their cessation should be strongly noticeable. It has frankly been one of the worst social seasons ever experienced in New York since the war. Peace to its unregretted ashes!

However, there have been quite a few intimate affairs and there are a lot of interesting people in town and interesting parties being given in the suburbs such as Long Island and Westchester and Connecticut. Around Syosset and Old Westbury, on Long Island, the all-year residents have gone in strongly for riding to hounds. Three times each week, now, the Meadowbrook hounds are taken out to give the elusive fox a good run for his brush, and now and then the fox actually is come up with. Not often, for there is too much opportunity for reynard to take to cover.

Decidedly English.

It is all decidedly English, with an M. F. H. and pink coats and no less than seventy hounds in the pack. The run goes through many noted estates, including the Burden and Tod places, and sometimes manages to follow the scent right through a formal garden or two. All of which adds to the zest of the morning's fun.

Many of the most important members of the Long Island horse-loving colony are absent at present, being grouped about the important English hunting center of Melton Mowbray, in England. Here are such American sportsmen as the "Brose" Clarks, their nephews, the Boswick lads, Mr. and Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, Mr. and Mrs. Geraldyn Redmond, and Mrs. John Van S. Bloodgood.

Incidentally, the American colony is going to make another stab at the Grand National at Aintree, near Liverpool, this spring. Not since Laddie Sanford's "Sergeant Murphy" captured the great steeplechase has there been an authentic win for American society, for Charles Schwartz's Jack Horner was English trained and bred and had only been bought a week before the running—having been entered by English owners long before.

Now, Jock Whitney is determined to see his "Easter Hero," which came in second, last year, take the coveted prize. Young Sanford and the Schwartzes will also have entries. And you may be sure that when the greatest of the steeplechases is run the George J. Atwells Jr. will be there. George is an Oxford man, and Jean, daughter of Gifford Cochran and of the Princess Hohenlohe-Schillingfurst, is an out and out horse lover.

There are no end of English notables in town. The marquess of Millfordhafen is baching it at the Sherry-

Lenten Season Finds Society Events Fewer

But Entire Winter Has Been Unusually Quiet.

By Cousin Eve.

HERE we are in Lent, not that it will change matters much, everything jogging along so quietly. Perhaps, after all, it is necessary to say, every so often, that we are in a period of unemployment and that expensive entertaining is not being done. Neither are people spending much for frivoling. Whether they have it to spend, or have it not, is not for me to determine. The truth is that the whole winter has been almost Lenten.

A clever man told me once that the saddest thing in life was to see the young stripped of their illusions. Put that way it does sound sorrowful. I haven't prospected among the very young of late to see how much of a cargo of illusions they carry nowadays, but the eyes of the debs are limpid and trustful, and those of the boys as full of belief in life's hocus pocus as if they had stepped only yesterday into this pretty world.

All this to preface the stroll downtown of Helen Stanley and another bud, maybe it was Beatrice Kirk. They were stopped by a sad eyed man, who muttered an unintelligible tale and huddled hungrily in his shabby overcoat. Two hands quickly held out quarters to the forlorn beggar, and the debs turned away to do some window shopping.

Twenty minutes later they saw their beggar walking ahead of them with an unmistakable shamble and rounding a corner purposefully. A minute later they beheld the object of their charity stepping jauntily into a small roadster, seating himself with ease, turning on the works, and off like nobody's business. If that wasn't hard on life's illusions, I ask you?

Struggling to be a Leaguer.

Still thinking of debs and their good deeds I am informed that Ghita Watson has been made chairman of a group of fifty debutantes who are all eligible for a career of struggle and hardship as Junior leaguers. The lovely young Ghita, one can see, is matriculating to follow in the footsteps of her mother, Mrs. Walter B. Wolf, one of Chicago's beauties, whose executive ability and brains are widely recognized. She was chairman last year of Ruth Hanna McCormick's Cook county campaign before the primary (which had a good ending and ran a half dozen important charities at the same time).

This winter a darling, violet eyed, golden haired debbie came home from a ball at half after three. At breakfast time she was missing. She was found to have gone out at seven-thirty, dressed for a morning of social service work over on Goose Island, on the west side [and such a wild, tempestuous day!], all to become eligible for membership in the Junior league. I think it is eighty hours of service that have to be posted and done before the candidate comes up for membership.

As far as I can see, joining the Junior league is something like joining the army, or the French Foreign legion, they are setting such a high standard of hard work for their members. And so harsh with the poor lambs!

An Interesting Week.

I liked last week very much. Mrs. Patrick Campbell, returning over the paths of her former triumphs, was one high spot of it. The Arts club gave her a tea prefaced by her lecture on "English Speech and Voice," and the chic world turned out more than at any other similar gathering this season.

Against a tall, six sided cherry satin screen the stately actress in clinging robe of black velvet was silhouetted effectively, reading her piece from a high reading stand. The manuscript, in thick black characters, was written larger, like those old illuminated missals in monasteries, needing no awkward lorgnette or disfiguring pince-nez, and gave the actress full use of her expressive hands, as she stood in profile to her hearers.

Mrs. Campbell's plea for beauty of speech was warm and fervent. She said words were the clothes of thought, and urged that they be sonorous, carefully selected, and most beautifully uttered. She is for an English aristocracy based on the most elegant and distinguished use of the language, which, of course, lets us in on the scheme, too.

Then, with her potent, vibrant voice, she demonstrated this and that emotion, this phrase and that, from her celebrated rôles, recalling the days when she played Paula in "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," Melisande to Sarah Bernhardt's Pelléas in a tour of the British provinces, and the lead in Shaw's "Pygmalion." One critic says Mrs. Campbell could write a dozen books of memoirs, having a marvelous memory for phrases and great social experience on top of her artistic one.

She is a witty person now, and was a handsome person in those pre-war days when Mrs. Franklin MacVeagh and Mrs. Marshall Field gave smart parties for her. Tall and dark, with a seductive pallor and masses of black hair, hers was an emotional beauty.

Her son, Allan, met at that time and married Helen Bull, a Chicago girl, the tall and beautiful blonde sister of Richard S. Bull, who is wedded to Sara Mather-Smith. Allan Campbell died in the war and his widow then was courted by a handsome Italian, Marquis Spinola, and is living in Rome, or was the last time I heard, where as the Marchese Spinola she is greatly admired in smart circles.

Woods Are Full of Celebrities.

Celebrities are coming thick and fast these days, so many one can barely gallop 'round the tour of inspection. Next week to the Fortnightly for an afternoon lecture comes Dame Rachel Crowdy of London of a Thursday afternoon. That same evening the English Speaking union and Foreign Relations group unite for a grand dinner in her honor, and the advance

First Library in Paris Gift of a Cardinal

Mazarin Made It Public in 1643.

By May Birkhead.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Chicago, with its many free public libraries all over the city as well as the great library on Michigan avenue, may care to be reminded that the first public library in Paris was furnished by Cardinal Mazarin. Curiously enough, at the time he made this gift he was living in the house that is now the Bibliotheque Nationale, the greatest library in the world, whose resources in manuscripts surpass those of the British museum.

About two years ago M. Roland Manuel, then administrator of the Bibliotheque Nationale, now prefect of Alsace, visited Chicago among other American cities to learn the latest advances in library technique. The library founded by the famous cardinal, to which he gave 12,000 volumes, known as the Bibliotheque Mazarin, is housed in the building opposite the Louvre, which is occupied by the French institute.

On the Spot of a Famous Tower.

Readers of Alexandre Dumas will remember that upon this spot once stood the famous and infamous Tour de Nesle. Among the Mazarin library treasures is the rich Incunabula, one of the few original Gutenberg Bibles. For many years this library seldom had more than a handful of researchers, while the national library in Cardinal Mazarin's former residence is now overcrowded with workers.

The Mazarin library, having been absorbed into the orbit of the Bibliotheque Nationale, is now threatened with loss of its identity, but this proposal is being resisted by many of the well known literati of the capital.

The library was thrown open to the public by the cardinal in 1643, the year of Louis XIV.'s accession. At that time the only public libraries in Europe were the Ambrosian at Milan, the Bodleian at Oxford, and the Angelica at Rome. When Cardinal Mazarin was reported dying, some one asked Louis XIV. whom he would henceforth consult. The king replied: "Myself."

Mrs. Hugh McBirney Arrives.

Among the Chicagoans just arrived here is Mrs. Hugh McBirney for her annual visit. She plans to go south. Mrs. Livingston Fairbanks is giving a series of dinners and luncheons, the first of which is in honor of Mary Lewis, who has been singing for private affairs. The latter is planning to sign up for French talkies.

Mrs. Fairbanks is giving a luncheon this week for Prince and Princess Henry of Reuss, who are sailing for America. The princess is to be remembered as the former Mrs. Anson Burchard of New York.

WHEN CHICAGO WAS YOUNG

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Aug. 2, 1876.

DEAR JULIA:

"There's music in the air," on Rush street, though the morning can't properly be described as "infant." Indeed, we are up rather late, as we just returned from the east yesterday and are indulging ourselves before beginning the regular routine of life.

Michael is scouring the white stone front steps to the tune of "Dublin Bay." I hear him singing the refrain now:

The ship went down with that fair young bride
Who sailed from Dublin bay.

Out in the kitchen [illegible] getting breakfast and occasionally she bursts into melody. "Precious Yoo-els" is her favorite tune this morning.

Upstairs Will is dressing and bellowing—there's no more accurate word for it—the chorus of Billy Emerson's prize song, "The Big Sunflower."

And I feel just as happy as a big sunflower,
That nods and bends in the breezes,
And my heart is as light as the wind that blows
The leaves from off the treeses.

Will's devotion to Billy Emerson and minstrels in general makes me laugh. He is as proud as if he himself had achieved the triumph. I tell him that Emerson was retained by a St. Louis theater manager when the policy of the theater was changed from minstrelsy to another form of art. This "Sunflower" song made such a hit that the public wouldn't let the manager dismiss Emerson and he comes out on the stage just for this one act, Will says.

Still further to let you in on our song festival, which is raging this morning, I must tell you that young Martha is playing and singing in what novels would describe as a wistful manner [and what Will calls lackadaisical] the song she has lately discovered somewhere, called: "I'm saddest when I sing." When she begins the refrain,

My song is not a happy one,
I'm saddest when I sing,

Will calls out, "And that's the way you make the neighbors feel, daughter."

We did have such a good time in New York with you. I can't express my gratitude for the hospitality you and your father showed us. Will thinks Mr. Boyd is a real prince, a gentleman of the old school.

We enjoyed the Philadelphia exposition, too, and were glad we went. I agree with you that the women's pavilion is one of the interesting features of the great fair. It was no small task to raise, as they did, $30,000 for the pavilion besides the $100,000 they gave to the general work of the exposition. Will was much impressed, and says that more interest will be taken by men in the cause of suffrage now.

I didn't buy much, but had to get a few souvenirs, of course. One of these was a Japanese screen, which is really lovely. Another was a clock, which I bought in the Russian exhibit. It is of malachite with a curiously shaped face. We were surprised to find that arts, science, and industry are as advanced in Russia as their exhibit would indicate.

We spent a week at the United States hotel in Saratoga Springs and found it delightful. I think this year it is especially gay because of the many foreigners there. They have come for the exposition and want to see our fashionable watering places before going home. There was quite a Spanish colony at the United States hotel while we were there, and Señor Mantilla y Rios and his wife were the center of this group. No lady there had such wonderful toilettes as the wife of this Spanish grandee, and always she wore quantities of jewels in her hair.

Saratoga isn't a very cool place in summer, to my mind. We had several hot days during our stay and Will heard in the lobby a funny story about the heat, which I must pass on to you. A westerner, fabulously rich, as they all seem to be, said when a guest complained of the heat: "O, this is nothing. You ought to see how hot it gets out in my country. I've seen the catfish crawl up out of the water, lie down in the shade of a tree, and fan themselves with their tails." A British delegate to the exposition took this statement down in his notebook, to the infinite delight of the westerner.

We enjoyed seeing at the United States hotel several Chicagoans we knew: Mrs. Franklin MacVeagh, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Goudy, Watnotices of her beauty, charm, achievements, and accomplishments will bring out every last member of both societies. So, how will we all get into the Blackstone ballroom on this splendid occasion? Dame Crowdy is "beautiful, brilliant, a wonderful dancer, expert tennis player, was titled for her war services, "Dame" being equivalent to "Sir" in British social ranks, and she was head of the V. A. D.'s during the war. Just now she is battling against dope and white slavery under the league of nations banner, certainly a large order, and what she lectures about I do not know.

Coming to the Arts club tonight is Leonide Massine in one of those dance recitals that the artistic world of Chicago likes to contemplate. After which there will be something to talk about for at least a week, and there will be little left of the performer but his bones. But such is the delight of the Arts club entertainment committee; they aim to promote debate and discussion, at the same time maintaining a unique standard of what is what, and what is not. Preceding the recital is a supper, and going on at the same time on the walls a collection of antique Chinese wall-papers and painted linens by Dufuy, belonging to that artist in woman's wear, Paul Poiret.

A Party for a Writer.

One night last week there was a gay birthday party up in the Sky Tavern, which is the recently added annex to the delightful Tavern club, in the clouds hanging over Michigan avenue and the river. The party was in honor of the first birthday of Robert Lee Eskridge's new book, "Manga Reva," and was given by his publishers, Bobbs Merrill, to many of the bookish people hereabouts, including a few poets—but distinctly writing people, because later on in the month comes another party for another kind of people, lilies of the field, and such. When I came in rather late up the little red stairs [like those on a yacht] the hero of the hour was telling about his arrival in "The Forgotten Islands" of the Gambier group. Indeed, he was giving a most charming lecture. But there he was in a little native boat, with all his wordly goods, poised on top of an enormous wave, forty feet above the hard coral beach. Then he realized that the natives had miscalculated the wave—and dashed down like driftwood they were, six months' supplies and all.

But read about it and other of the exquisitely written and self-illustrated adventures of "Bob" Eskridge in the dreamy "Iles Oubliées," one thousand miles southeast of Tahiti. Here orange trees grow big as oaks, fish are lovelier than jewels, and the Southern Cross flames in the sky night after night. When the author had finished talking and his hearers sighed regretfully, he turned with a vast oyster shell, big as a plate, full of small creamy pearls. These had been taken from the lagoon at Manga Reva, and everybody at the birthday party had one for a souvenir. Such a swankiness! Never had it been done before in Chicago! And the host as nonchalant as an East Indian rajah!

The Sky Tavern main room has black walls, black cité satin curtains and hangings, and a French blue carpet and chairs. The antechamber is in flaming Chinese red, also the dining room.

Harriet Monroe, Dr. and Mrs. James Mitchell, Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, Lucille Douglas of Shanghai, and Mr. Kroch were my neighbors. Coming down late at night after the birthday supper into the Tavern, there were the backgammoners, hard at it. Marvelous how time flies at the foolish game, with its rattling dice and rattling counters.

Backgammon's Lure.

Which recalls that a young man told me of taking a girl to a party a while ago. The party was given by Henry Porter in his hospitable, wide, and cheerful house in North State parkway. It was for young people and there was dancing. The young man lost sight of the girl. He searched, but never caught up with her—upstairs, downstairs, then concluded she had gone home. So, at midnight, after bidding good night to his host, he went home.

Finally the party was over, dancers went, musicians went, and Mr. Porter presumably put the cat out, and officially closed up his house. Then he retired to his room. There were the lost girl and a young man, playing backgammon. Mr. Porter said he had planned to go to bed, and politely asked their intentions, which were, of course, nebulous, as the party seemed to have only just begun—to them. I wish I could think more highly of backgammon and enjoy it to the exclusion of all else.

Dr. and Mrs. Wilhelm L. Baum gave the gayest and most charming of the pre-Lenten parties last week, a dinner dance, at 1508 North State parkway. It was for a young couple newly arrived from New York, Mr. and Mrs. Jurkien Hookstra, and about seventy young marrieds were asked to meet them. One large dinner table was laid in the dining room, and another in the ballroom beyond, with huge floral centerpieces of fluffy yellow mimosa, fresh and heavily scented, from the south, great red carnations, and narcissus.

The snappy orchestra that played at the First Assembly was on duty. And, O, such pretty girls: Angela Johnston, Paula Wilms, Dorothy Schmidt, Mrs. John L. Cochran Jr., Mrs. Walter Paepcke, Mrs. Philip Maher, Mrs. Robert Adams and many more. After midnight other parties came, the Lawrence Meekers bringing that honeymoon couple with the long and intriguing name, Count and Countess Jan Dubjowski. She a sweet, slender brunette in white chiffon, he quite knowing his way about, being for some time a resident of Chicago.

Robert Adams led an informal cotillion, one figure being a riot. The girls, at one end, each hurled a slipper at the stags at the other end of the ballroom, and they rushed forward to match up the slipper. A very gay frolic.

James B. Waller came in [unlike Cinderella] at midnight, and, after a rousing political speech, allowed his weary self a half hour of dancing. He is aldermanic candidate in the Forty-third ward.

The hostess, Mrs. Baum, was wearing a gown of very dark green velvet with shoulder straps of sable which fell off at the back in a little sable cape, a very new mode. Her jewels were emeralds and diamonds.

black georgette, with a little cape of the thin black crêpe banded in ermine, very smart and becoming, and at the same party Mrs. James Ward Thorne wore black lace with a cape of black lace, heavily banded with sable, a darling frock which she had made for the Morocco trip.

At this dinner, given by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cudahy, one of several large ones, Mrs. Cudahy being the Casino's new and very popular president, there were at least twenty-four guests, among them Mr. and Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Mr. and Mrs. Schweppe, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Thorne, Mrs. P. A. Valentine, Mr. and Mrs. A. Watson Armour, Mrs. Morse Ely, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hibbard, Charles E. Brown, William McCluer, Mr. and Mrs. James Hopkins, and others.

Mrs. Baur had fifty guests at neighboring long tables, and Mrs. Byron Harvey twelve. She was wearing flaming red chiffon in vivid contrast to her bushy, blue-white hair. The singer of the evening was a mulatto with a lovely voice.

Mrs. Edward I. Cudahy calls my attention to a Lenten course at her house, 1501 North State parkway; at Mrs. Hurley's and Mrs. Lester Armour's, weekly, beginning tomorrow at half after two. The lecturers are eminent Catholic priests and scholars whose work has taken them all over the world. The Rev. Father Delauney will be heard tomorrow at Mrs. Cudahy's on "India"; the Rev. Father Drought next week at Mrs. Armour's on "China." The beneficiary of the course is the chapel guild of the Cenacle convent.

Tea at Miss Frieda Foltz's.

Saturday afternoon, St. Valentine's day, Miss Frieda Foltz celebrated with a tea which barged over from her own pretty apartment, 49 East Division street, into a charming on opposite, and looked at five o'clock as if an overflow might push upstairs. Mrs. Samuel Rinaker and Mrs. Randolph Payson, Miss Foltz's two partners in the realty business, poured out the tea and made themselves charming.

This really has got to stop, all these society women going into business. Soon there won't be a leisurely soul left in the whole of society to write about. People who work all day don't, can't give dinners and sit up all night. Gone is the glitter.

And then there was Princess "Mike" Cantacuzene at this same party, all furred up in mink and pretty as a pink. She, too, has caught the infection, thinking she is going to be an interior decorator.

And also Princess Rotislav Romanof, that tall, slim beauty, who already is the busiest worker in the loop. During this tea various people strolled up to the open piano and obliged, among them "Moon" Mullins, whose hands have never lost their cunning at jazz.

In Honor of a Painter.

Sunday afternoon, among other teas, was that at 999 Lake Shore drive of Miss Paula Wilms for Rodolphe Kiss, distinguished portrait painter of Budapest, passing through to Hollywood. A painter of Magyar court beauties and dashing, haughty Hungarian counts and princes, Batthyanis, Andrassys, Karolyis, he might well like to paint a portrait of his young hostess.

Paula Wilms, who is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wilms, is a tall, slim young creature, very blonde and rosy, her hair in short, tousled blonde curls—a real picture. The Fairbanks girls, Cornelia and Edith, poured tea at this party, and many called to meet Mr. Kiss and see the photographs of his paintings, most of which are hanging in ancestral castles of Hungary or in palaces of the wealthy in Buenos Aires.

On Tuesday, in the gray ballroom of the Palmer house, was a huge luncheon, very mouventé, as the French say. Great doctors, great ladies of society, of charities, and heads of the nursing profession were there. It happens annually—all done so that these United States shall have perfect nursing care when needed.

A bevy of lovely debs, under Ghita Watson, Geraldine Swift, Elsa Armour, Helen Stanley, and Beatrice Kirk, alas! who would have been there only for the mumps, seated the guests.

Heads of hospitals spoke, and I was especially interested in the recently inaugurated system of nursing by the hour. Each Chicago hospital guaranteed the expenses of one such nurse last year, each nurse going out for duty in her own part of town.

Among the friends I chanced to see at various tables were Mrs. Walter B. Wolf, Mrs. Orville Babcock, Mrs. Bruce Borland, Mrs. Charles W. Dempster, Mrs. Nevins Johnson, Mrs. Eames MacVeagh, Mrs. Frank Wilhelm, Mrs. Augustus Eddy, Charles Schweppe, Mrs. John P. Wilson, Mrs. D. Mark Cummings, and Mrs. John B. Drake Jr.

Mrs. Ernest Irons is chairman of the nursing council and Mrs. Frederic Upham vice chairman.

GRACE LOUISE RALSTON.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ralston of 2946 Wilson avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Grace Louise, to Laurence L. Kane, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Kane of Kankakee, Ill. The wedding will take place late in May.

Grover A. Whalen, New York's former police commissioner, accompanied by John T. Alsop Jr., mayor of Jacksonville, and party have arrived at the Ponce De Leon for a brief stay. They were greeted by St. Augustine's city officials. Myron H. Spades of Chicago also arrived for a several weeks' visit at the winter villa of his mother, Mrs. H. M. Spades, and his brother, Cyril C. Spades.

The marquess and the duke of Leinster are being given a true sample of American hospitality and Milfordhaven, the king's cousin, decided to stay in town, rather than go west, since he was having too much fun to leave the city.

Also arriving this week were Lord Tennyson, grandson of the poet, and one of England's famous cricketers; Lady Cheylesmore, the Hon. Mrs. Wilson Filmer, and Mrs. George B. Ismay. All these, noted in the gay set of London, will savor New York hospitality before going south.

Another British visitor is Mrs. Winston Churchill, who arrived this week to join her son, Randolph, who has been pleasing a lot of people and annoying a great many others by his views on all matters. After all, Randy is frightfully young, and several members of New York's older sets insist he is still of the age when he should be seen and not heard.

But then, remembering that he is Winston Churchill's son, and a descendant of Sarah, the original duchess—nothing more need be said.

William McKinley of Chicago sends a quaint two page valentine, the verse on the second page written nearly a century ago. It is inscribed "To Teresa." We print the second stanza of this effusion, which the sender calls: "An offering of pure affection to my Valentine."

Imagine something purer far,
More free from stain of Clay
Than Friendship, Love or Passion are,
Yet human still, as they;
And if thy lips for love like this
No mortal word can frame,
Go ask of Angels what it is,
And call it by that name.

Oriental Ball at Miami to Help Charity

Surf Club Scene of Gay, Brilliant Affair.

MIAMI, Fla.—[Special.]—International and cosmopolitan society added to the brilliance of the Committee of 100 ball recently at the Surf club. It was the third annual function sponsored for charity by an organization composed of some of the most distinguished members of the winter colony at Miami Beach.

Last year and the year preceding the splendor of the costumes worn at the Committee ball, held at the Nautilus hotel, surpassed in elaborate display an oriental ceremonial. The value of these robes represented a vast amount of wealth. Formal attire only was worn this year, the costumes having been eliminated so that all of the $50 admission, except a minimum expense for staging the ball, could be donated to the charities sponsored by the committee.

The Count and Countess Felix von Luckner were guests of honor and among the northern guests were distinguished people from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago, and many other cities, together with guests from London, Paris, and other European capitals. Guests from Havana, Nassau, and Palm Beach also attended.

Miss Irma Debaun, coloratura soprano, made her first formal appearance in the United States on this occasion, following her singing successes in European cities.

In an Oriental Setting.

The Surf club was illuminated with an unusual array of lights and decorations for this event. A perfect oriental setting greeted the eyes of the members and their several hundred guests when they attended the Samarkand ball. From the swimming pool, on which floated a miniature Chinese junk, rose a Chinese temple. A flight of steps led to the great statue of the Chinese goddess Steva, at the base and back of which were myriads of lights. Great figures on the steps of the temple guarded the eight armed diety.

Trees were hung with Chinese lanterns and lantern bearers carried their lights at the ends of bamboo poles. Both patios were flooded with violet lights, while green lights played from the temple and the mosques, which rose in the distance. The illumination was heightened in weird effect by the dim red glow from incense burners.

The entire dance patio was hung in Persian draperies of oriental colors, and in front of every pillar was a huge Persian vase. Old Persian rugs marked the runway of the loggia and were on the walls. Members of the orchestra were attired in Persian costumes with white turbans and red sashes, similar to those worn in smart oriental hotels. The dinner was prepared by a chef from India.

Exotic Setting for Concert.

The patio at Casa Casuarina, with the long pool filled with flowers and banked with palms, formed the exotic setting for Mary Garden's second Miami concert, recently. The audience of about 300 guests filled the patio and balconies. A stage had been built for the singer, who was in happy mood and sang gloriously.

Alden Freeman, the singer's host, presented her with a great bouquet of American beauty roses with stems five feet long. There was a wealth of flowers, so many that Miss Garden said in acknowledgment that she had never had so many flowers. "It reminds me of my debut," she added.

A recent census at Miami Beach schools revealed that Illinois and New York states had larger representation in the student body than Florida.

Courtesy Marks Well Bred When Dining in Public

Self-Effacement Rules Here as Elsewhere.

Etiquette questions will be answered on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Helen Bartlett, Sunday department, Chicago Tribune.

By Helen Bartlett.

MANNERS in a public restaurant are much like manners for anywhere else, public or otherwise, consisting for the most part of self-effacement and courtesy, but a young man correspondent has pointed out to us that there are little conventions concerning public dining that a number of people would like to review. We're glad to oblige.

On entering a restaurant a man generally checks his hat and coat. As a rule, women don't do this, preferring to slip their coats over the back of the chair and, of course, they always keep their hats on in public places. A woman would check any package she happens to have, or her umbrella.

In most restaurants there is a head waiter or waitress and guests coming in stand in the doorway until this person shows them to their table. The head waiter always leads the way to the table, the woman following him. If she is accompanied by a man, he comes in last.

He Orders the Meal.

The waiter generally draws out the chair for the woman, but if he does not her escort does so. Direct ordering of the meal is done by the man, who first asks the woman what she prefers. A woman or a girl should not address a waiter if she is lunching or dining with a man; if she wishes water or more butter or anything in the way of service she indicates her wishes to the man, who speaks to the waiter.

Guests at a party in a restaurant do likewise; they let the host or hostess speak to the waiter in their behalf. If a woman stops at a table for a brief conversation—and it should be brief—the men at the table rise; women do not. The men also rise if a woman leaves the table during a meal.

And before we forget this, about which we are so often asked: Women should not put their gloves, bags or other paraphernalia on the table. They go on a chair. And neither girls nor men should complete their toilet in public—at table of all places. Nail files, pocket combs and make-up necessities should not be in evidence outside of a dressing room. Women unostentatiously and quickly renew their powder and their lipstick if necessary but a long session behind a pocket mirror at the beginning or conclusion of a meal is an exhibition of poor taste.

Smoking in Cafes.

We are often asked, too, about smoking in restaurants. Men, of course, are pretty free to smoke everywhere—at least free from the displeasure of the management. But this is not so concerning women. Even though smoking by women is so general, now, many restaurants and tearooms either frown on it or request the women patrons not to smoke. The safest rule is to observe others. It is considered all right for a woman to smoke in a place where smoking by women is general but if she would be made conspicuous in certain restaurants or tearooms by smoking a cigaret she ought to restrain her desire for one.

Conspicuousness is always to be avoided. Two people or more laughing uproariously are conspicuous and therefore exhibiting bad taste. Obvious quarreling is probably worse. Fussing with a waiter or waitress is bad, too. If the food brought is not satisfactory or the order was misunderstood, it can be sent back to the kitchen with the most concise and least unpleasant exchange of words between waiter and guest. If a waiter becomes downright impertinent the head waiter can be summoned quietly; fortunately, such a circumstance seldom arises. A diner's attitude toward a waiter should never, never be offensively demanding.

A guest should examine his check before paying it. If there is an error or a misunderstanding it should be discussed and straightened out as unobtrusively as possible.

Etiquette Asnwers.

"Is it necessary to put a small plate under the fruit cocktail glass at dinner? Is the dinner plate set down on the service plate? M. L."

Small plates are usually put under the cocktail glass. The service plate is removed when the dinner plate is set down. If you will send a stamped, addressed envelope I will send you my little booklets outlining the correct steps in the service of luncheon and dinner.

"Would it be correct for the groom to wear a business suit when the bride wears an eggshell velvet dress and matching hat? M. F."

No, it would not be correct. The man's costume in that case should be formal daytime clothes. If the bride wore a traveling outfit or a simple street costume the business suit would be acceptable, but not otherwise.

"Should candles be on the table for an afternoon dinner? F. B."

Since dinner is served in the evening, an afternoon meal would not be a dinner. Candles may be on the table for afternoon meals but they are not lighted until the evening or late afternoon.

"Please tell me the correct wording on the inside and outside envelopes of wedding announcements. M. W."

On the outside, "Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, 101 Austin street, Chicago, Ill." On the inside envelope, "Mr. and Mrs. Smith."

"Would it be correct to wear an eggshell satin dress, sleeveless, to an informal dinner dance? Must one wear gloves when dancing? C. F. B."

The eggshell satin would not be appropriate for informal evening wear. Both the color and the material are associated with formal dress. A simple dinner dress would be a better choice. It is not necessary to wear gloves; they are entirely optional. Women who find gloves uncomfortable remove them before they dance. Some do not wear them at all.

"Does an 'at home' invitation require an acknowledgment? L. F."

Not if you intend to accept. If you cannot go you send cards to the hostess, to arrive the day of the affair.

"Does the prospective bride's mother give the first shower for her? H. H."

Most emphatically not. As a matter of fact, showers are considered rather provincial and are not generally given or attended by cosmopolitan people. Under no circumstances does a relation of the bride-to-be give one.

Woman Golfer Takes New Role of Dress Model

AUGUSTA, Ga.—(AP)—Few of the thousands who have watched the drives of Maureen Orcutt, Canadian golf champion and second ranking woman player in the United States, have pictured her in the rôle of a dress model.

Yet that is what she has become—"realizing her lifelong ambition." She is employed as a model in an Augusta shop.

"I just adore the work," Miss Orcutt said, "and, although I know I must still be a bit awkward, compared with girls who have been doing it for years, I know I am going to succeed.

Predicts Success.

"I made up my mind to do things on the golf course, and succeeded fairly well by keeping at it, and I'm determined to accomplish just as much as a model.

"Ever since I was a child I've been crazy about clothes, and this is just the opportunity I've longed for, so you see, I'm not going to fall down on my big chance."

Miss Orcutt's boss, Miss I. Belle, said the golfer was rapidly developing into a capable model.

"She not only has the physical qualifications necessary for a model," said Miss Belle, "but she has brains and a most acute 'clothes sense.'

Satisfactory Model.

"She knows instinctively how to display a garment, whether it be for sports or the most formal evening wear, to the utmost advantage."

Miss Orcutt has no intention of quitting golf, she says. She spends all her spare time training on the Augusta Country club course, where Bobby Jones trained for his grand slam last year.

Miss Orcutt has been playing a fine brand of golf since she came here, breaking all records on Augusta courses at least once this season.

Two Memorial Exhibitions

Works of Tennessee Anderson and Anthony Angarola on View at Local Galleries.

By Eleanor Jewett.

A PARTICULARLY interesting week has introduced us to the work of some new artists, some favorite artists, some stranger artists, and some dead artists. It is curious that the two memorial exhibitions should be, the one in sculpture and the other in painting, of artists who died suddenly, unexpectedly, and while in the fullness of their powers. Anthony Angarola had just returned from a journey of study and sketching in Italy when he died of heart failure, to the shocked dismay of all those who knew him. Tennessee Anderson was alone in her Chicago apartment in the holiday season when she died, and her death was a great blow to many who believed in her and admired her.

The sculpture by Tennessee Anderson is shown in the Walden-Dudensing gallery, and is a brilliant summing up of her intuitive and instinctive talent. She moved with her time. Her work is lit with the freedom from conventional line that emanates from the gayer side of modernism and is not above laughing at that which is the source of some of its later developments. For Mrs. Anderson's art was a growing art. She was engaged in trying new ways, new manners, new effects to the moment when Death struck her down.

Some of us liked best her earlier achievements. Some of us liked both early and late. The swing and nonchalant self-sufficiency of her "La Promenade," first shown at the Arts club, was of those strokes of genius that can never be forgotten. Later her portraits, her mask portraits, of various women and her delightful heads of young boys gave us pause. Always, from the beginning, her humor was an acknowledged asset to a craft largely self-taught and entirely natural to her.

A Memorial Exhibit.

The paintings by Anthony Angarola, a memorial exhibit which marks the opening of Diana Court salon, a new gallery in Chicago, are in a deeper and more resonant key. Angarola was closely connected with the working artists of today. He was one of our first modernists and his paintings were the target for much criticism from this and other type writers. He was an instructor in the Chicago Art institute, I believe, and in another school further west. His pupils adored him. Those of an older generation who understood his aims never lost faith in his pictures as art. Today we can look with a great measure of clemency (for we have seen so much between) on these pictures that fifteen years ago aroused comment of all kinds.

Completing the Angarola exhibition of paintings are his lithographs and sculptures by Oskar J. W. Hansen. Before leaving this gallery, which adjoins the Increase Robinson studio gallery and is under Mrs. Robinson's management, an apology must be inserted to carry over to Flora Schofield, whose exhibit of drawings has been an interesting and beautifully modulated feature of the latest Small gallery show. In my story about her exhibit I wrote that she was a member of the Art institute teaching staff. She is not. Mrs. Schofield is the wife of a well known Chicago lawyer and has been a painter for many years, but she has never had the connection I gratuitously gave her with the Art institute. She exhibits there and that is the beginning and end of her connection with the museum. She is not and never has been one of their instructors.

At the Midland Club.

There are two exhibitions of sea paintings just now in town that deserve a great deal of praise. In the lounge of the Midland club are paintings by Leon Lundmark; in the Knoedler gallery are paintings by Stanley W. Woodward. Leon Lundmark has found himself in this region of turbulent waters. He is a devoted and fine painter of the sea. Here we are in midocean, or midlake, the trough of the waves is deep and their tops picked out with foam. Again and again we are on a rocky shore with the waters leaping, licking, cajoling, storming at our feet.

Water and sky, water and sky, over and over again, until the multiplicity of the repetition swells into a rhythm closely approaching the majestic full-throated pealing of an organ. To mention a few of these brilliantly executed canvases by name, among the most stirring and exultant are "Rock Channels," "Storm Brewing," "Oncoming Fog," "Rockbound" and "Pounding Waves."

The Sea on Canvas.

The marine paintings by Stanley Woodward differ from those of Mr. Lundmark in that they are more concerned with the play of light on the waters. Sun and moon, shadows and running wind, these are all elements to be considered in the Woodward paintings. They are among the most beautiful we have been shown this winter. "October Moonlight," for instance, that can only be paired at the moment with "The Golden Stairs," by George Waller Parker, in the Carson, Pirie, Scott gallery. Both are impressive because of their perfection. Nothing in either should be changed. They stand, immensely satisfying in their intelligent and beautiful handling, craftsmanship, painting technique—par excellence.

The "Mystery of the Fog" by Mr. Woodward is hauntingly lovely; "Grey Cliffs," thrilling in its pitch of water; "Moonlight, Maine Coast," a magnificent reach of water and sky. Some of the paintings are a little stiff, a trifle set, threatened by theatricalism, but most of these are splendid canvases, vigorous, alive and of such caliber that familiarity with them breeds keener interest.

Paintings by G. W. Parker.

Having brought George Waller Parker into the discussion, it may be as well to continue with a mention of his fine exhibit now in the Carson, Pirie, Scott gallery. This is another one of those exhibitions that make the art of painting a tangible asset in contemporary life. The value of a sound technique was never instanced better than here. The flux of modernism has caught this brush, directed it, graced it, lightened it, and then it has been dropped by the wielder of the brush as of less consequence than the difficult enterprise of achieving beauty.

The world is well lost for such splendor as is found in the sober perfection of "The Golden Stair," "Cobblestones and Tiles" and "Blood and Thunder." Here we have painting!

A Modern American Etcher.

A different kind of perfection is found in the etchings by Martin Lewis, a comprehensive exhibit of which may now be seen in the O'Brien Art gallery. Martin Lewis is acknowledged to be one of the leaders among contemporary American etchers. He is famous for his subtle skill with light and shade. He has been called the glorifier of the American flapper. The flapper does pop in and out, with her slim legs and graceful shadow, of many of his etchings. So does the American street child, the Greenwich village urchin who rolls hoops and finds adventure on the sidewalk.

But much more than these two figure in Martin Lewis' conceptions of the American scene. Rows of brownstone houses figure in it, and giant skyscrapers. Tunnels and subways figure in it. Interiors and exteriors, peopled and silent, figure in it. The glories of snow and the penciling of rain figure in it. A grand historian of his day is Martin Lewis, and all so pleasantly does he tell his story, so perfectly does he write its chapters, that these etchings of his stand alone, stamped in any exhibit with the seal of a man who knows his craft inside and out, and practices it fearlessly, beautifully, exactly; a man who is doing what he wants to do, gaining an audience unconsciously.

Of his prints, look at, particularly, "Arch at Midnight," "Bay Windows," "Stoops in Snow," "Charleston Practice on the Roof," "Shadow Dance," "Tabloid Readers," "Passing Storm," "Ice Cream Cones," and "Building a Babylon." There is a good slice of life today.

Fine Arts Permanent Exhibit.

The All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts opened its first permanent exhibit at the Stevens hotel last Monday with a most effective show. Karl Plath has a stunning composition of bird and leaves. Stark Davis has a decorative macaw, but where his bird is decoration that of Karl Plath has not forgotten to live. Karl Plath's bird is a warm bundle of feathers, its part in the scheme of matters picturesque a mere detail; Stark Davis has chilled his bird and flattened it, a possible procedure in decorative painting, but one that does detract from the livableness of the picture.

Kate A. Townsend offers a delightfully delicate and exquisite still life, and Edithe Jane Cassady shows a gleaming, glossy still life. Robert Kilbert offers his fine painting of horses on the sand, hauling a heavy load from the edge of the quiet blue lake. Lucie Hartrath shows a stunning summer scene of stream and cliff and heavy green trees. W. J. Reynolds is represented by the splendid and beautiful painting of a nymph watched by Pan, that won him the silver medal in Paris in 1926. Buell Mullen has a fascinating water front in a foreign town, with a long sea wall to which boats are fastened, and a captivating line of little houses climbing a hill into the soft veiled blue of a French sky.

Cheskin shows his tender and pliant "Wet Road," one of the loveliest things he has ever done. Edna Vognild shows three portraits of dogs. Kathryn Cherry offers a cheerful and bright composition of flowers inside and boats and water outside the window. Grace M. Haskins has a fine still life of flowers, rich and dark.

One must draw attention to the fact that the beautiful yellow roses against a dark brown background have been hung on their side. G. F. Firestone is the artist, and so lovely are the roses hung this way that I yearn to see them right side up. The painting is delightfully quaint in its precision and counts as an important feature of the show.

Edgar Cameron shows a lovely landscape with sheep; Glamen offers an excellent cat; W. H. Eppens has a picturesque wheat field; Carl Olsen submits a well done portrait of a man; Carol Proctor offers a bewitched study of toadstools and another page from her children's nursery, a delightful water color; Cornelia M. Weyburn submits a beautiful purple jar of flowers, and there are many more paintings that should be mentioned and will be another time.

"THE GOLDEN STAIR," by George Waller Parker, one of the fine paintings in Mr. Parker's current exhibit in the Carson Pirie Scott galleries. The exhibition continues to February 28.

Woman Novelist Would Salvage Istanbul's Art

She Appeals to Cultured World for Aid.

BERLIN.—(AP)—Gabriele Hartenstein, German novelist and publicist, has undertaken single handed the task of saving from ruin the architectural art treasures of Istanbul.

Frau Hartenstein has formulated an appeal to the cultured world, for which she has already gathered signatures from men and women of standing in every country of Europe.

She hopes that this appeal may reach some Maecenas of art, who will interest himself in salvaging what is left of world famed structures in the former capital of Turkey.

Neglected and Decadent.

"Three cultural periods have left their imprint upon Istanbul, once the 'mother of the earth'," Frau Hartenstein explained. "Since the republican government has transferred the capital to Asia Minor, Istanbul has become neglected and decadent.

"To give but one example: The Aga Sophia, that wonder of the east, is dilapidated. Mortar and stone are breaking off bit by bit. The three main portals already look like ruins.

"Is this grandoise structure, which served as a model for the architects who reared St. Peter's in Rome, St. Mark's of Venice, and St. Paul's at London, to crumble because of lack of care?"

Names Famous Structures.

Frau Hartenstein enumerates many other structures in her appeal, such as the Golden Gate, the Tower of Isaac Angelos, the Tekfur-Seral palace, the Byzantine inn "Xenedochion Samsons," and numerous churches, mosques, and monasteries.

The idea of saving Istanbul's treasures came to Frau Hartenstein when she recently went to Turkey to gather material for a novel and was appalled at the state of decay into which world famed buildings were falling.

ART NOTES

In Our Grandmother's Day—

Often it took a year's proud work for the home-spun, home-dyed, and home-woven coverlets of early days.

On a fragile, yellowed bit of paper we find an old mountain woman's prized recipe for dye: "GREEN. Peel off the bark of black jack or black oak. Bile your bark much as half an hour. Hits awful strong. Put in some alum and put in your yarn and bile it awhile. Wring it out and dip it in blue dye then hits pint blank like that I colored out thar."

Down at Troublesome Creek, in the Kentucky mountains, a girl named Cynthia still weaves her shuttle to and fro. Before her is the tattered draft for her coverlet, on which her mother's mother traced the pattern!

Simple, crude patterns of the earliest quilts were saved for the long hours of stitching under the dim flickering light of home-made tallow candles.

"Log Cabin" is not a mere name for a geometrical arrangement of scraps. Its picturesque beauty memorializes the settlement of a great continent.

And now, Mandel's brings you these same delightful old patterns, faithfully reproduced, at a price that's but a tiny fraction the cost of the original!

Thorns Grow Where All Was Magnificence

Babylon, Once World Capital, Mass of Ruins

Sprawls in Utter Desolation Over the Desert.

[This is the fourth of a series of articles by Mr. Shirer on the places encountered on an overland trip from India to England.]

By William Shirer.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BABYLON.—[Special.]—"Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city!"

It lies here today a sprawling, desolate mass of rubbish and ruins, a grim, mute testimony to the curses and thunderings which those two arch puritans, Isaiah and Jeremiah, brought down upon it in the name of the Lord.

"I will make it a possession for the bittern, and pools of water; and I will sweep it with the besom of destruction, saith the Lords of hosts.

"And Babylon shall become heaps, a dwelling place for dragons, an astonishment and an hissing, without an inhabitant.

"I will bring them down like lambs to the slaughter . . ."

Perfect Prophets.

These fanatical hosts of Israel bellowing their oaths against the most dazzling city of the ancient world—the New York, London, and Paris of Babylonia combined—were perfect prophets.

The destruction, the annihilation of the gorgeous capital of Nebuchadnezzar was complete. What Isaiah himself admitted to be "the glory of kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency," is today but utter desolation.

There are not even mighty ruins to bear witness to vanished magnificence, no gleaming pillars, such as at Palmyra, nor vast columns, as at Baalbek. Only withered camel thorn grows on the dusty mounds of Babylon now. Tottering brick walls uncovered by German archeologists before the war or burrowed into by brick robbers of all ages are slowly being covered up by desert sands. Here and there a trench dug by the excavators reveals the remains of a great palace of Nebuchadnezzar. And in one spot a deep hole half filled with stagnant water covers the spot where the Tower of Babel once was reared. The bricks used in its construction have long since been carted away by the Turks to use in the building of their dam across the Euphrates at Hindiyah.

Not Much to See.

The Arab guide who speaks a dozen words of English and half a dozen of German takes you through the ruins, but there really is not much to see.

What is left, he tells you, is the city of Nebuchadnezzar, for Babylon, which was a flourishing city of the time of its great law giver, Hammurabi [2067-2025 B. C.], was completely wiped out in 689 B. C. by Sennacherib, the same Assyrian king who descended upon the Israelites "like a wolf on the fold."

Center of culture and learning though it was, Sennacherib sacked and burned it and, to make doubly sure of the destruction, diverted the water of the Euphrates over the site so that no trace might be left.

Sennacherib was mighty proud of his work.

He boasts: "Like the shock of a raging storm I rushed, and like a hailstorm I swept it. . . . The city and houses from foundation to roof I pulled down, destroyed, and in the fire I burned. The wall and moat and houses of the gods, the towers of brick and of earth, all there was I removed, and into the Arahtu canal I threw . . . that in after days the place of that city and the temples of the gods be seen no more, into the waters I cast it and ended it entirely."

When Babylon had driven the Assyrians out, Nabopolassar and his better known son, Nebuchadnezzar, proceeded to build the city anew. The latter king tells the story well:

"Huge cedars from Mount Lebanon with my own hands I cut down. With radiant gold I overlaid them, with jewels I adorned them. Giant bulls I made of bronze work and clothed them with white marble. Thresholds, door posts, cornices, wings of the doors of the gate of the shrine, I clothed with dazzling gold. With tiles of bright silver the aisles of the shrine and the path of the temple I constructed."

The guide takes you over the great fortification walls of Nebuchadnezzar—walls described by Herodotus as wide enough for a four horse chariot to turn. A part of the great wall still stands.

Nebuchadnezzar in inscriptions found by the excavators boats: "That which no king before had done, I did. A great wall which like a mountain cannot be moved I made of mortar and brick. Its foundations upon the bosom of the underworld I placed down deeply, its top I raised mountain high."

Jeremiah saw those mighty walls and prophesized: "The broad walls of Babylon shall be utterly broken and her high gates burned with fire."

Where Alexander Lies.

Jeremiah was right, the guide reminds us. For all her power and magnificence, Babylon was doomed. The great capital was but enjoying an Indian summer.

The end came in 539 when Cyrus, the Persian, captured Babylon. But the Greeks reported that it was still a center of art and learning when it fell to Alexander 200 years later.

Somewhere in this mass of debris lie the remains of Alexander, who died here of fever in 323 B. C., our guide tells us, but nobody has ever been able to locate his tomb.

Alexander's death sounded the death knell of Babylon. His successor, Seleucus, founded the new city of Seleucia on the Tigris. After 4,000 years of capture and plunder, but always recovering from its blows, Babylon merely withered and faded away.

Today, alongside its desolate ruins, the daily train to Bagdad snorts by. It whistles, but does not stop.

"Babylon—Trains Halt Here to Pick Up Passengers," reads an ugly, mocking railroad sign.

But there never are any passengers. So the train just whistles and chugs on. It stops further back at Hillah, a modern Arab town where the passengers, who are old fashioned enough to care about seeing Babylon, get off.

FROM THE DAWN OF CIVILIZATION

STONE documents, dating from 3000 to 500 B. C., showing how the ancient Babylonians did business and kept their books. Left to right: One of the oldest records, made when our ancestors first began to write; a business document of 2800 B. C.; a list of wines and beers; a royal letter, and a document of transfer of land, containing a full description of the property.

Teas and Tours Greet "Royal Salesmen" in South America

BUENOS AIRES.—(AP)—A brilliant but strenuous three weeks have been outlined for the visit in Argentina of the prince of Wales and Prince George, the British "royal salesmen."

A brief playtime in the lake region of the Argentinian Andes will be followed by a sojourn at the swanky sea resort of Mar del Plata, interspersed with flying visits to the capital and climaxed by the formal opening here March 14 of the British trade exhibition.

It is this event which brought the royal brothers to South America, and it is to be carried out according to the best British tradition.

Guests of Ambassador.

While in Buenos Aires and at the seashore the two princes will be house guests of Sir Ronald Macleay, the British ambassador, and Lady Macleay. In most other respects, however, they will be official guests of the Argentine government.

The royal party is to cross into Argentina from Chile late in February. They will halt a few days at Lake Nahuel Huapi and be quartered on the 25,000 acre estate of the Ortiz Basualdo family.

Their lodging will be in a "log cabin," but the structure has 40 rooms and is set on a high granite foundation jutting out from a hillside.

Polo, Tennis, and Golf.

There are launches awaiting the princes at the private pier of the estate. The grounds contain a polo field and tennis courts, and a golf course has lately been added to the recreation equipment of the estate.

From this restful spot they will travel by train across Patagonia to San Antonio and the Atlantic coast region of Rio Negro.

Officials of that territory have planned an elaborate welcome, and among other diversions will take them on a motor trip to a ranch of 100,000 acres to show the prince of Wales how that business differs in Argentina from the ranch methods employed on his own ranch in western Canada.

GLIMPSES OF FOREIGN LANDS

Mexico Puts Up Good Money to Lure Tourists

Finds That Its Scenery Is a Tremendous Asset.

By John Cornyn.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY.—Mexico is to have a full fledged tourist commission, composed of three delegates, one representing the president of the republic, the second representing the interests of commerce, and a third that of transportation. There will be at the head of the national tourist organization to which has been assigned in the federal budget for the present year half a million pesos, which is several times greater than the amount assigned for the promotion of tourist activities in any former year.

Commerce will be asked to combine to encourage the directing of tourists toward Mexico. The railroads and the national highways commission will be intrusted with the transportation of tourists, and the presentation in foreign countries, especially the United States, of the attractions and claims of Mexico as a tourist country. The government will endeavor to smooth out all the difficulties of an international nature which have, in the past, tended to discourage the entrance of tourists into Mexico.

A National Industry.

The national economic congress, regarding the encouragement of tourists as a national industry, voted to stand back of the movement and to encourage all other interests in the country to do the same. At the same time the congress declared "tourism" one of the nation's noteworthy assets, which should therefore be encouraged as much as possible. The congress voted that the nation as a whole and the federal government should make special efforts to direct to Mexico the tourist who drives his own automobile; and that, to this end, every road leading to the northern border should be placed in as good a condition as possible as soon as the government found it possible. Other

In part, the work of the national tourist organization will be to encourage every effort made to directing tourists to Mexico.

A Good Roads Movement.

One of the aims is to interest the twenty-eight states and three territories, through their local governments, in the construction of lateral modern roads leading into the main national highways now under construction, so that all of Mexico may benefit from the influx of tourists expected at an early date.

The organization pointed out to the states that, in so doing, they would be not only helping their own local interests but would also aid the treasury of the federal government and create a vast pleasure ground for tourists, national and international.

FOUND IN THE GARDEN OF ALLAH

Algeria, Greatly Favored by Nature, Has Many Wonders

ALGIERS. — [Special.] — Not many people realize how near Algeria is to the main travel routes. The direct journey from Paris via Marseilles takes some forty hours, or the journey may be made by steamer from Southampton to Algiers.

The best time to visit the country is during the winter and early spring—until May—when the climate is mild and healthy, and one can count on a good deal of really sunny weather. Ordinary American clothing is necessary, and warm coats should be brought for traveling.

The country of Algeria is favored by nature, and her chief qualities are natural ones. Its climate is most suitable to the creation and growth of settlements, as is shown by the long history of north Africa, from the time of the Carthaginians up to the present French occupation.

Reviving Prosperity.

Roman genius made the country prosperous by a careful use of water and soil, and the subsequent decay of the Roman achievements is due solely to the ignorance and laziness of the succeeding conquerors. Today after 100 years of effort France, by resuming the Roman tradition of irrigation, has revived the ancient prosperity and is increasing it every day.

To the conqueror or newcomer Algeria has always appeared and still appears somewhat hostile and rebellious. She displays her inhospitable coast, her chains of mountains, her alarming gorges and defiles and her mysterious people. But for those who dare to brave these apparent obstacles she soon proves winsome and captivating and discloses great beauties to the traveler. Like most things that are really good she improves on acquaintance.

Cheaper Than America.

The hackneyed phrases of the guide books and advertisements hide surprising wonders and much that is really novel. That is why Algeria, which is really visited by the chosen few, although many people simply rush through it, is becoming a great touring country.

The hotel food for Europeans is chiefly like French food, with the addition of choice and cheap local fruits and vegetables not usually grown in Europe. The cost of living is cheaper than in America.

The facilities for traveling are good on the whole, and most of the places of interest are connected by rail and good roads. The main roads are excellent and worthy of the French reputation as road makers. The government is spending five million dollars on a road program.

Install Large Organ.

FLORENCE, Italy.—(AP)—The largest and most expensive organ in any Italian church is being installed here in Sante Croce. It has 100 registers and will be ready for use in the spring.

Soviet Planning to Give Disabled Vets Farm Work

MOSCOW.—(AP)—Disabled veterans' relief in the soviet union is being turned toward the practical object of reducing the labor shortage.

A survey revealed that there are about 2,000,000 invalids in the country most of them victims of the world war and dependent on the state for maintenance. The survey also showed about 1,700,000 as capable of some form of work.

A central institute of invalid labor has been established to study the capabilities of these persons, especially for farm work. One of the first steps undertaken is a study of the degree of fatigue to which they may be subjected safely.

Year 1931 Sees No Scarcity of Italian Medals

ROME.—(AP)—What price a medal? In 1931 King Victor Emmanuel of Italy will award 13,455 decorations of the orders of the Crown of Italy and of SS. Maurice and Lazarus.

Of the latter order there will be created eight cavaliers of the grand cross, 40 grand officers, 136 commanders, 325 officers, and 865 cavaliers.

The order of the Crown of Italy will have even more members. There will be 26 new cavaliers of the grand cross, 194 grand officers, 1,351 commanders, 2,260 officers, and 8,250 cavaliers.

Huge Liner Will Be Launched on May 27

SO satisfactory has been the progress in finishing the Empress of Britain, the 42,500 ton liner launched by the prince of Wales on the Clyde, that it will take its place as flagship on May 27 instead of June 17, when it leaves Southampton. The Empress of Britain will provide more passenger space per person than any other liner in the world. A theater fully equipped with talkie machines, a full sized tennis court and swimming pool equipped with a new system of lighting are among the features.

Trick Door Knockers.

LONDON.—(AP)—Door knockers of eccentric design are the newest fancy in Mayfair, together with front doors painted in vivid colors with china knobs to match.

Sinbad's Tower to Be Restored

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BASRAH.—A movement has been organized to restore Sinbad's tower, six miles from here. The structure is really an old minaret, but for centuries it has been associated with Sinbad the Sailor, who was a native of Basrah and who sailed from here on his remarkable voyages. The tower is beginning to disintegrate.

Little Theater for Scots.

EDINBURGH.—(AP)—Edinburgh is to have a professional repertory house on the little theater model to "fill a serious gap in the artistic life of Scotland," says Michael Macowan, son of Norman Macowan, dramatist, who will direct it.

Find Much Helium in Iceland Hot Springs

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

REYKJAVIK.—The well known Islandic geologist, G. G. Bardarson, in a newspaper article here encourages the government to inaugurate tests to discover how much helium the hot springs of Iceland contain and to find out whether its production would be economically sound. Prof. Bardarson points out that the meteorologist Therkell Thorkellssen made investigations in this direction some years ago and discovered that the hot air and fumes near eight hot springs in Iceland contained 50 to 200 liters of helium in 1,000,000. Thorkellssen also discovered that most hot water springs in Iceland contain radon, which radiates so-called alfabeams, essential in the manufacture of helium as well as radium.

(Body Odor)

GO HOME now? Why, the evening had barely started. Did she really have to leave so early? Was anything wrong? Had he offended her?

He had—unknowingly—just as he offended everyone he came in contact with. Frontier Days Re-enacted on Dude Ranches

Easterners Get Touch of Western Atmosphere.

By R. W. Birdseye.

JUST what are these so-called dude ranches? Where are they? Why are they, and what do you do when you get there? Are they comfortable? Is the food good? What sort of duds do you wear? How expensive are they? And—a question ever more insistent—are they as pleasant for a winter vacation as in the summer?

Each year multiplies such questions for those who keep an ear to the ground for the vacation wishes of the travel minded. Where there is so much smoke there must be fire and there is no doubt that the dude ranch idea has a steadily growing appeal.

In a word, a dude ranch is simply a place with more or less of the genuine western ranch atmosphere, where, for a consideration, outlanders can go and play about in comfort somewhere in the great outdoors, as that term is understood in the immense tangle of mountain, mesa, canyon, and valley comprising the Rocky mountain area.

Canada to Mexico.

Here your dude ranches are scattered all the way from Montana, down through Wyoming and Colorado, to New Mexico and Arizona. Some are huge, going cattle outfits, where they are glad to take paying guests so long as these do not interfere with the primary purpose of the ranch. Many others have been created in recent years solely for the entertainment of guests, while still others occupy a middle ground where it is difficult to say which activity is the more important.

Dude ranches vary widely in the number of guests they accommodate, the dog they put on, and their charges, but certain conditions are fundamental almost everywhere. The food may be simple and shorn of frills, but it is almost sure to be good, substantial, and built for appetites. Accommodations may be no more than canvas covered tent houses, but beds will be comfortable and the bedding clean. And without exception your ranch will be out under the untainted western sky with all of God's back yard at your elbow. You may be close in to some little town or city, or 50 miles from a railroad, but in either case the automobile has annihilated distance and the old time discomfort of Owen Wister's "six legs in a jerky."

$30 to $125 a Week.

How much will a dude ranch experience cost you? That is for you to decide. Charges range from a minimum of $30 a week to an absolute maximum of $125 a week per person. These rates invariably include meals and accommodations, and often the personal use of a horse and saddle and the care of your animal. Where a horse is not included, the usual rate is $15 per week. Sometimes the charge covers the cost of taking you to and from the railroad, of occasional trips to town, and of motor outings through the country within reasonable reach of the ranch.

There are comparatively few attractive ranches where the charges are as low as the minimum given. There are just as few where the rates are as high as $100 a week. On the other hand, there are many delightful places occupying a middle ground where the charges will run from $50 to $80 per week.

Riding is, of course, the universal stock in trade of the dude ranch, but you do not need to be an expert horseman, or even to ride at all if you do not want to. You can just loaf about and soak up health and sunshine, or play bridge or tennis, or swim or take long walks and motor rides, or you can live in the saddle, play polo, hunt in season, or arrange pack trips that will keep you under the sky for days or weeks at a time, all according to inclination and the facilities of the individual ranch. If you can't forget your golf clubs there will usually be some place to knock a ball about within a reasonable number of miles.

Winter and Summer.

And now about seasons. A few years ago, when dude ranches were conspicuous by their rarity, few people thought of them other than for summer vacations. Perhaps that was because in general they first took root in the north, in Wyoming and Montana, where the winter is long and severe. At any rate, as the demand increased and dude ranches spread southward, their season lengthened out. In northern New Mexico and the Rio Grande valley guests come and go around the calendar, although summer is still the popular season. In central Arizona, around Prescott, at an elevation of perhaps 5,000 feet, much the same thing is true. Elsewhere in central and southern Arizona, where the most intensive development of the dude ranch idea has taken place, the northern seasons are reversed. Here from October until early May the warm flooding sunshine is a delight out of doors.

There are a number of good ranches in the extreme southern part of Arizona, principally in the Tucson area. The majority of those in the state, however, are farther north, and may roughly be divided into three groups; the first centering about Wickenburg, the second about Castle Hot Springs, and the third in the rimrock country in the Verde valley, thirty or forty miles south of Flagstaff.

Recalling Other Days.

The ranches in the rimrock country may be taken as typical of such places at their best. They are only eight or nine miles apart, magnificently situated on Beaver creek, and some 3,000 feet up. Between them they run many thousands of cattle and the spring and fall roundups are reminiscent of an older day. While readily reached by motor, they are far from the railroad, set in a region rich in frontier history and personalities, and with its atmosphere and western spirit of hospitality unspoiled.

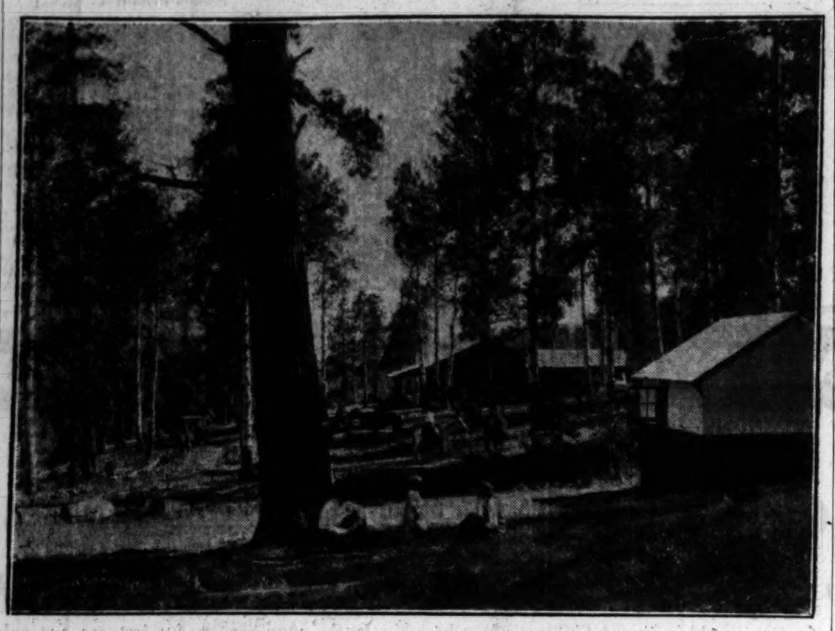
The largest of these ranches accommodates fewer than thirty guests, and they all take justifiable pride in the quality of their food, of their riding animals, the comfort and modernity of their accommodations—and in the caliber of their guests. There is no more wildly scenic area on the continent than that surrounding them. Ducks, deer, wild turkeys, and bear abound. The finest lion country in America is close at hand. There are endless opportunities for hiking, motoring, and visits to prehistoric ruins and Indian reservations.

In such an environment, pick your own wardrobe. Have your own riding togs cut in Chicago, or London — or accumulate a four gallon hat and high heeled boots after you arrive. Just suit yourself. And be comfortable.

Street Racket in London.

LONDON.—(AP)—London has its own little racketeers. Unemployed music hall actors who pick up change by entertaining theater queues with curbstone acts must pay tribute to toughs, or else—

REVERTING TO THE PRIMITIVE



THE headquarters of a dude ranch in New Mexico. These ranches, formerly confined to the northwestern states and frequented only in the summertime, have now spread to the southwest, where they are attracting an increasing winter trade. In northern New Mexico the season lasts throughout the year.

English Burglar Is Caught by Finger

LONDON.—(AP)—Scotland Yard has caught a man by his little finger. The member was lost by a burglar who severed it in scaling a high iron fence.

Detectives searched hospitals and surgeries and found the man. It is the second time a burglar has been caught so, although before the finger print disclosed identity.

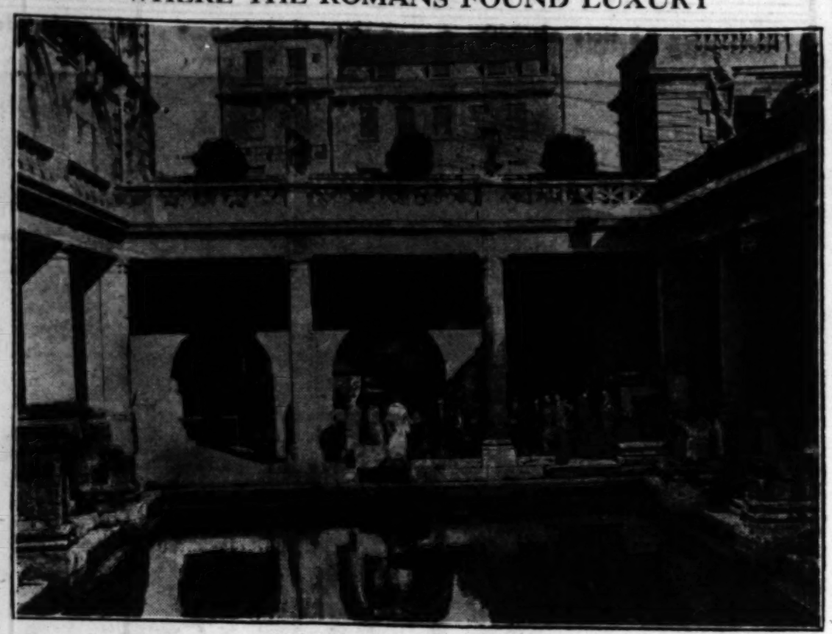
LEADING SPA DISCOVERED BY LEPER

WHERE THE ROMANS FOUND LUXURY



A ROMAN bath at England's oldest and best known spa. Mr. Steele relates that many examples of Roman art, such as statuary and carvings, are kept in a museum at Bath, and that the love of the ancients for the luxurious brought about the early development of this resort. Much of the work still stands intact. (Topical Press photo.)

Bath Rivaled Pompeii in the Good Old Days

And Still Ranks as One of the Premier Resorts.

By John Steele.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BATH.—Bath is the oldest and without doubt the best known of all British spas. Since the days of the Roman occupation, when it equaled the magnificence of Pompeii, it has been almost without interruption one of the premier health resorts of the world. It is the only spa in the empire with natural hot springs.

But apart from its ancient past and the value of its water, Bath is peculiarly attractive because of the diverse and interesting associations with its growth and history.

Architecturally it has been called one of the few perfect cities in existence. It is almost completely Georgian, planned and built by John Wood, both the older and the younger, and other architects of the eighteenth century who were masters of the design which has given England its finest pieces of artistic masonry.

Discovered by a Prince.

Legendary connections with the ancient Britons carry the city's history back eight centuries before the Christian era. Modern associations link it with Queen Anne, who made it fashionable during that period of dynastic uncertainty in Great Britain, and its atmosphere has contributed so heavily to the literary history of the country that Bath is immortal for this reason alone.

During the war it was turned over altogether for the treatment of soldiers. Nearly a quarter million were cared for.

Legend credits discovery of the springs to an exiled Briton prince, Bladud. According to the story, he became afflicted with leprosy and was driven from the court. He wandered into Somerset and there became a swineherd. The swine contracted the disease and, for relief, wallowed daily in the hot water boiling up from the earth.

Resurrected by Romans.

Bladud followed their example, so the yarn goes, recovered completely, and finally inherited his father's throne after returning from his exile cured. Later he returned a king and reclosed the springs, built palaces and temples, and established as his capital the first "city of the hot springs."

The Roman love for luxuriant baths resurrected the city about 54 A. D. For nearly four centuries the resort, then called Aquae Sulis, was the finest of all Roman settlements in Britain. Like Bladud, they built thermae and temples so thoroughly that the culvert for carrying off waste water, which they laid, still serves its original purpose.

The great Roman bath uncovered in 1882 occupied a hall 110 feet by 68 feet. The original pavement surrounding it remains, as do the recesses or exedrae, provided evidently for the clothes of the bathers like those at Pompeii. A large circular bath, several smaller ones, and hypocausts or heating chambers forming a system of hot air baths similar to those of the present day Turkish bath are also preserved.

Many examples of Roman art such as statuary and carvings are kept in a museum at the baths.

Destroyed by Saxons.

This city was destroyed by the Saxons in 577. The Roman ruins lay buried, and Bath did not become a fashionable center until the eighteenth century. The King's bath, the largest of the spa's three hot springs, has numerous brass rings in the walls bearing the names of the donors dated from 1602 until 1784.

A stone balustrade was given by Sir Francis Stonor, Kt., in 1624, for relief from "gout and aches in the loins," after which he "lived many years after well in health to the age of near ninety."

Queen Anne's frequent appearance here during the days of the Pretenders made Bath the most elite of European spas. Development of the city during this period created the present resort, turned toward the sun in a dip of the Cotswold hills so perfectly planned and built that cities all over the world are modeled after it.

It Lives in Literature.

Its streets are filled with tablets marking literary associations. Thackeray lived here. Jane Austen is forever linked with Bath, and Dickens laid some of the most amusing scenes in his "Pickwick Papers" here. Wordsworth, Southey, and Oliver Goldsmith are other names associated with it, and from Bath, Lord Chesterfield wrote some of his famous letters to his son. Byron is mentioned as appearing at a masquerade in a Turkish costume while living here as a boy, and Henry Fielding wrote "Tom Jones" in Bath.

The springs are now the property of the city. The atmosphere created here two centuries ago has been preserved. There are few rooms as eloquent of their period as the Pump room at the King's spring. It is furnished with many original Chippendale seats and chairs, and one of its many objects of interest is the famous Tompion clock to which Dickens refers in "Pickwick." In this room Queen Charlotte held daily levees during her residence here in 1817.

The establishments at the baths consist of the Queen's baths, the Royal baths, old and new, the electro-therapy department, and the swimming baths.

From Far Below.

These are served by springs furnishing half a million gallons of water daily, arising from the earth at a temperature of 120 degrees Fahrenheit. Besides being the only hot springs in Britain, the water is richest in radio emanation. A chemical analysis of the water made in the laboratories of Lancet, British medical journal, gave the following results:

	Grains per gallon.
Calcium sulphate	102.880
Strontium sulphate	2.030
Sodium sulphate	23.500
Potassium sulphate	6.297
Calcium carbonate	8.750
Magnesium chloride	15.800
Sodium chloride	9.080
Lithium chloride	0.170
Silica	1.960
Bromine	traces
Nitrates	none
Carbonate of iron	1.600
Total mineral matters	165.927

Saline thermal waters rich in radioactive material are believed to come directly from the heated volcanic zone far beneath the earth's crust. According to the investigations of the Austrian geologist, Edward Suess, the water at Bath comes from the volcanic depths through a fissure in the surface. The explanation for the springs here is that it lies on the meeting point of the Mendip and Malvern systems, creating a weak point in the rocks below.

For Fifteen Diseases.

The water springing through this fissure is used in dozens of ways for the treatment of fifteen diseases on the prescription of physicians. Methods used in the cure are the subject of constant experimentation, much of it in the Royal Mineral hospital, founded as a national hospital for rheumatic diseases for those unable to pay either of the two sets of charges at the baths.

The diseases on which the waters are known to act as a curative are fibrositis, arthritis, disability caused by functional diseases of the nervous system, various forms of toxic neuritis, gout, obesity, chronic forms of pharyngitis and laryngitis, certain diseases of the heart, particularly weakness following other illnesses, arterio-sclerosis in its earlier stages, chronic gastric catarrh, intestinal stasis, chronic vesical catarrh and genito-urinary irritability and frequency, various diseases of women, including post-puerperal debility, and stiffness and weakness following injuries.

Sheik Farmers Oppose Change in Iraq Money

Many Hoarders Demand Their Payment in Gold.

By Ernest Main.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BAGDAD.—Arrangements are well advanced for the issuance of the new Iraq currency, which is due to replace the rupee on April 1. It is expected that the change will take place on the appointed date, or at most within a month or two after.

Criticism of the proposed change has taken two principal forms.

In the first case, it has been attacked on political grounds by persons with no expert knowledge on which to base their opposition to such a highly technical matter as a new currency law.

Hoarded in Tents.

The second body opposing the new money is a less articulate but nevertheless numerous group of illiterate traders and cultivators whose experience during the years of Turkish rule taught them that the only safe way to keep money was to obtain it in the form of gold and put it away in some safe place known only to themselves.

In the Amarah province to this day the grain growing sheiks demand payment in gold, which they hoard in their tents.

One immediate result of the new currency law was an appreciation in the Turkish gold lira, which went up as much as one rupee. This and other misgivings were due to the fact that the new currency law provides not for gold cover but for cover provided by trustee securities. In addition to the fact that these securities are equivalent to gold, they have the further advantage that they are more easily manageable and that they earn interest.

Demand Gold Basis.

The cry of the new currency critics has been that there must be a gold basis, at least up to 40 per cent, but much of this is dying out.

There are roughly four crores, or 40,000,000 rupees, in circulation in the country. According to present arrangements, these will cease to be legal tender at midnight March 31. Thereupon the new dinar currency—the dinar equal to the pound sterling and divided into 1,000 fils—will take their place.

Race Track Bets in England Speed Up Mint's Output

LONDON.—(AP)—The mint had to increase its output of florins by 50 per cent last year to meet the demand created by the race track pari-mutuel machines, which will take no small coin. The florin is worth about 48 cents.

In reporting this fact, the director of the royal mint said the increasing use of slot machines for vending cigarets also has affected coinage of the realm.

"There have been many complaints lately of a shortage of shillings," said the report. "While the use of automatic machines for selling cigarets has no doubt imprisoned a large number of shillings as well as sixpences, the banks have generally failed to meet the public demand for smaller coins, large reserves of which are held by the mint, ready for issue on demand."
